The Student Legislature Answers Some Requests

Answers Some Kequests

After three months of cautious plodding through a log of uncertainty, the student legislature appears at last to be emerging into the smulght of accomplishment. As far as Tur KrsNIL is concerned, it may be said that the Unisersit's new student government experiment is beginning to shape up in a manner that is rather encouraging, and this newspaper would like to go on record, even at this early date, as branding the project a success.

At the outset, the student government associa-ing the project a success.

At the outset, the student government association was advised by nearly everyone, faculty members as well as students, not to try and overdothe thing this year, but to feel out potentialties and take up slack. This advice, it appears, has been, and is being followed almost to the letter. As a result, the constitution has by this time been rested out and found seasorthy. The new pattern of government has been digested, and some good precedents set.

But these insuppibles are not the only things new pattern of government has been digested, and some good precedents set.

But these intangibles are not the only things accomplished by far. Several of the most frequently-heard sudent complaints have been taken up and all within the legislature's power is being done to remedy them.

Probably the most notable of these is the much harped-on "honorary fraternity" situation. A special committee, for the past five weeks, has been investigating the membership, financial, and activity aspects of the majority of the campus honorary and professional groups, and detailed reports are being compiled. These findings are to be published when complete.

In answer to the perennial cry for more lenient class attendance requirements for upperclassmen, a petition, requesting that all juniors and seniors with standings of 2.2 or better be permitted optional attendance, has been presented to the University Senate. It is expected that the group will vote on it at its next regular meeting on Monday, March 11.

The Krasti, already considers the legislature a "success." We can only add that a body which has been working as conscientiously as this surely is deserving of more interest and support from the student body than it has been getting in the past. A lobby list numbering only five organizations is not indicative of any too much use of this new-found democracy.— J. C.

Why Short Course Plan

Why Short Course Plan

Must Be Shelved

Last issue, the idea of a four-month farm folk school at the University, modeled after Wisconsin's famous school, was said to trantilize our magination. This issue, it still tantilizes, but that s just about all.

The College of Agriculture since December has been considering such a plan. Although there is enough laboratory space, laboratory facilities sould be inadequate for these additional students. Present instructors in the college could not carry the increased load without the aid of additional instructors. For the success of such a plan, it would be necessary to evert a dormitory to house all of the special "short horns."

horns."

Logical conclusion: More money is needed. The plan was presented to the state legislature, but the budget had already been passed upon. Evidently, the legislators did not consider the matter urgent enough to warrant an addition to the budget. A resolution was passed commending the idea and asking the college to present its needs at the next meeting of the bady in 1942.

present is needs at the next meeting of the body in 1942. Two years before those who really need and would benefit most from this type of education are offered the opportunity. But, unfortunately, that's the way it stands.

Of An Old Custom

Of An Old Custom

From time immemorial the cultured and educated classes in the world have had their small group meetings to discuss world affairs, philosophy, life. Madame de Stael had her salon frequented by the great and illustrious men and women of politics and literature in France before and during the French Revolution. Madame dis Barry played hostess to the great thinkers of her day. The court of Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria found time for informal discussion at tea. Lloyds of London operated a coffee house at which informal meetings for free speech and ideas were held.

Today, however, we have a particularly American type of informal meeting called "coffee hours," at which all type of people congregate in homes of the cultured folk or at public meeting places for talk of serious and pleasant topics of the day.

of the day.

On the campus this "coffee hour" is conducted by the Forum committee of the Union building at 4 o'clock on Thursday afterneons in the Msuise room. There students, faculty, and staff meet to sip coffee and talk of art, books, journalism, national and international problems with men and soomen who are authorities in these fields.

This year four such meetings were scheduled, the first of which was held last week. If the neetings prove popular others will be added to the list.

ARE SORORITIES AND FRATERNITIES

ARE SORORITIES merely homes for moneyed-husband-hunters? Do fraternities foster un-American class prejudice? Or is all the hullabaloo over Greek-letter organizations inspired by the soured few who don't get pledged? Why does it so often end up with disappointment for the boy or girl, and heartaches for the A STORM OF LETTERS from readers came in following Mrs. Jackson's first Post story about Greek-letter societies, Many Are Called, a few weeks ago.
