Dance ensemble takes flight with mixed music, messages

By TYRONE BEASON

After three months of rehearsals, members of the UK dance ensemble took flight Sautrady night in a show that featured a mix of music and messages.

The concert, titled "Human Aspects of Control," explored several topics, including the ambivalence of adolescence, the religious beliefs of Shakers and childhood insecurity.

The dancers also presented popular musical arrangements during Saturday's performance at the Otis A. Singletary Center for the Arts.

Rayma Beal, dance instructor for the ensemble, said rehearsal for the two-hour show was physically demanding and required a great deal of discipline.

"It takes constantly working, weekly and sometimes twice weekly in order to get the choreography together," said Beat who has been a UK dance instructor for six years. Beat directs a dance ensemble concert each semester. Every member of the dance ensemble must love to dance and be willing to spend long hours working on choreography, Beal said.

Pine Bluff owner optimistic about Derby

'Bend' stretches The Origin's progressive style

Bend The Origin

By DAVE LAVENDER

The alternative band The Origin didn't leave its heart in San Francisco, but it did leave Daniel Silverman — a fine keyboard player.
Silverman, whose fingers do the walking on various assortments of keyboards, added the last stroke of bettiliance to the recording earner of brilliance to the recording canvas of The Origin's second album Bend. Unfortunately, like a UPS worker, Silverman simply delivered the goods then split.

Priding themselves on being void of samples, sequences and computer programs, Bend stretches the band's progressive style into an organically-correct acoustic demonstration. Piano, acoustic guitars, lap steel, bass guitar, drums and Michael Andrews' cratchy-tenor lead vocals lace this 11-song collection.

The San Francisco trio of Topper Rimel, bass and background vocals; Rony Abada, drums; and Andrews have a keen sense of musical direction on Bend. But it appears, at least from a recording perspective, that Silverman's deft ebony and ivory key caresses are what raise the band's music to a higher plateau. The unique, captivating presence of his soothing Hammond B-3 organ adds a distinct personality to the ballads "Giving it All" and the darker shifting rhythms of "Racing with the Moon."

Hometown friend Todd Davidson will replace Silverman on tour.

"Giving it All" is a B-side ballad rooted in rock 'n' roll. Like Jim Croce said about a ballad on his last live album, "It's kind of rock 'n' roll. Everything's kind of rock 'n' roll."

roll."

And so it goes with the lonesome strain of blues harmonica and piano that wrap around Andrews' aching story of love found and lost. Whether it was the workings of the sub-conscious mind or just coincidence, Instrumentally speaking, "Giving it All" is the most consummate track on the album.

Silverman rolls into the first break with his Hammond gently weeping. The delicate, flowing licks evoke memories of vintage former E Street Band member Danny Fe-derici's supple organ work on Bruce Springsteen's old ballads.

Following is a split harmonica/ acoustic guitar break by Andrews. Like U2, the members of The Or-igin grew up in the same town and have been friends since their high school days in La Jolla, Calif., making them a rather tightly-centered and focused band.

centered and focused band.

"This is more of an improvisational record, with more of a loose feel to it." Andrews once said.
"There's an elasticity in the music.
The name Bend has meaning: a natrate alsaticity. I hate to make grand generalizations, but we're all so obsessed with bending people — manipulating them — while avoiding being bent ourselves."

One weak area for The Origin, specially in the absence of Silverman, could be harmony occals. Unlike fellow San Francisco folks such as Crosby, Stills and Nash,
The Origin's best material is when Andrews' creatic, widely

Andrews' erratic, widely-fluctuating lead vocals are given room to roam without the attach-ment of confining harmony vocals.

In other words, the flexibility of Andrews' vocal chords made it quite difficult for harmony vocalists Rimel and Silverman to find their respective nicnes.

The title track is a slow, haunting introspective song written by Andrews. Out of character, Andrews' usually high-pitched voice, descends into a low, resonating barined from the control of the co ing bass guitar solo by Rimel com-pounds this song's end.

On the production end, Jeffrey Wood, who has worked with The Waterboys and Luka Bloom, was at the controls.

With a similar vision, The Origin have churned out what they want-ed: an album with "unforced, natu-ral energy."

The band might not have left its whole heart in San Francisco, but it did leave a vital organ sitting by the Bay.

The Origin's most recent release is Bend, the San Francisco group's second and final album with keyboardist Daniel Silverman.

As of yesterday afternoon, the media, who each have paid more than $400 for the document, had done scads of reports about the contents of UK's response. But no one from the general public has checked out the free copy at the Margaret I. King Library, where it is on reserve. Sutton, now the head basketball coach at Oklahoma State University, has no comment this weekend on the releasing of the report. "That's history. It's something that I've put completely out of my mind," he said.

During the investigation, Sutton maintained that he knew of no NCAA rules violations regarding the basketball program.

Former UK president David Rosselle, who left UK after the investigation to become the president of the University of Delaware, said he was not opposed to releasing the response but thought it would be best left to the courts to decide—to avoid lawsaits from the participants.

"Now there's no way that any-body can file suit against the University." Rosselle said Friday. "I hought the prudent thing was to be ordered by the court to release the document."

Roselle said he doesn't have doesn't have any of didn't take any report any more. "I didn't take any Student 65 admitted to the investigators that he had told friends about the day's events.

Also at issue was Manuel's transportation to the ACT. Lafayette basetball coach Don Harville said he drove Sean Sutton and Manuel to the test at the request of Casey.

But Sean Sutton's initial story was that he drove himself and Manuel to the test at Casey's request.

Right to know held secure with records' release

There were no startling revelations last week when the records of the investigation that left Big Blue fans disgruntled two years ago were released.

However, it is only appropriate that records involving an investi-gation of a state university's basketball program be public. Unless access to information is maintained in all but the most special of circumstances, public accountability is lost

In this instance, everything that was released in detail had already been known in conjecture. All that really was told were the juicy tidbits: the actual texts of interviews, the official speculation by the University on what occurred.

The man who may suffer most from the documents' release is Lafayette High School basketball Coach Donnie Harville. The Fayette County school board plans to investigate what role — if any — Harville might have played in Eric Manual's alleged attempt to cheat on the ACT.

There are, however, few surprises in the report. But the courts have reaffirmed the public's right to know. It is a principle without which our free society could not survive.

Hey, Stressed:

Hey, Stressed:
It's time for you to chill out! And how, you may ask, do you do that? Well, my friend, you can take Fact Cat's crash course on yourself down.

First of all, adjust your attitude. Saying "I can't do this" and "I can't do that" just makes you feel worse, and then it's even harder to get things done. Encour-age yourself to move ahead instead of putting yourself down.

Try to start focusing on what you can do, what is required for you to do and start making plans to get your work done. Make a list of the things you want to accomplish and plan time each day to get your jobs done. Be sure to keep your list practical. You don't want to feel stressed out about not getting things done from your list.

Always allow yourself some time to relax and have fun. Yes, even if it means some time away from your studies. All work and no play makes Fact Cat very grouchy and will probably have the same ef-

Stress also puts presure on you physically, so if you don't take care of your body, things can get worse. You'll be more likely to get sick, get behind in your studies and get even more stressed out. Caffeine, nicotine, alcohol or other drugs might be your way to pep yourself up to study or calm yourself down, but these "coping skills" (and I use that term sarcastically) come with health risks and lots of other problems. And who needs more problems?

Exercise can relieve ten-

Exercise can relieve tension and strengthen the body. Good food (not the stuff from vending machines) gives your body fuel to function at its best. Regular sleeping times allow your body to relax and recover from all of the pressure you've put on yourself all day.

Presidential race gets even weirder

How much more confusing can this presidential race get? First, the only Democrat who was willing to get in the race against an incumbent with approval ratings of more than 70 percent was a Greek liberal from Massachusets. Then the incumbent accomplished what could only be considered a gifted display of politi-cal bungling and lost about 25 points from his approval numbers.

In the meantime, several more Democrats hopped in the race, but they were all noticeably second-stringers. One was known affectionately as Governor Moonbeam, another as Slick Willie. Then a conservative political commentator.

cumbent for the nomination. When everyone was thinking it couldn't get any more bizarre, an egomaniac from Teass decides, after a minimal amount of armivisting, that he will step down from on high and save the country from itself. What is going on here? Let's start with the most recent event. That's the egomaniac from Texas.

Read with proper Will Rogers/ Tex Ritter/John Wayne accent: "I wouldn't give 3 cents for that job. You couldn't make me take that job."

Well, that is until he decides you could.

H. Ross Perot, despite what so many of his blind followers think, is not the second coming of the Messiah. He is a conceited, self-important, self-deluded and self-important in Self really. Methinks he don protest too much.

Perot seems intent on proving that businessmen are rarely good at politics or at running things when everyone does not ask "how high." at their merest allusion to jumping. He has some pretty kooky ideas — the kookiest of which is removing the Congressional power to raise taxes. I'm no defender of Congress or of its predilection to raise taxes, but I don't question its power to do so. For Perot to assume that power is to show his fundamental misunderstanding of the ideas and

My favorite Perotism is his refusal to spell out his entire program. It's somewhat reminiscent of Richard Nixon's claim that he had a plan to end the Vietnam War but couldn't tell anyone or it wouldn't work, therefore, the voters should elect him.

Perot might make a decent show.

Perot might make a decent show-ing in percentage of votes, but in electoral votes his campaign will be a disaster and only a blip on the political radar litical radar.

Next is the conservative political commentator. Pat Buchanan's campaign began with a bang, and it seems will end with a whimper. After a fast and furious start, he is running out of steam.

But this is not before having had an effect on the Bush campaign and administration. Buchanan has been excessful in giving a vehicle for the protest vote and giving voice to issues iton neglected. His appearance at the Republican National Convention this summer should prove interesting. Watch out for Buchanan in 1996.

Governor Moonbea ... er, Jerry candidate in recent memory. His flat-tax suggestion is straight out of the Conservative Handbook of Really Good Ideas That Will Never Be Enacetd. It would simplify the tax process, cut down on the size of federal bureaucracy and be fair. Therefore, it will never happen.

Therefore, it will never happen.
Slick Willie, aka Hillary Clinton's husband, aka the governor of Arkansas, aka the boyfriend of Genifer Flowers, has shown that as far nifer Flowers, has shown that as far as bungling goes, he is possibly George Bush's superior. Bill Clinton has sort of, but not really dodged the draft, smoked marijuana and slept around on his wife. Rumor is he is also sort of, but not really, governor of Arkansas. Bill Clinton also will not really be president.

(Joke making the rounds: The problem with Jerry Brown is not that he didn't inhale, it's that he never exhaled.)

And then there's the incumbent.
After his quota bill cave-in, his bud-get cave-in and his tax cave-in he will still be able to beat whomever the Democrats put up. As the old saying goes: You can't beat some-body with nobody.

In the course of a 73.5-year lifetime, the to their daily quotas. According to Fortino's average American will spend

- •7 years in the bathroom
- ·5 years waiting in line
- ·2 years trying to make phone calls to people who aren't home
- ·1 year searching for misplaced objects
- ·8 months trying to open junk mail

These factoids, from a press release sent out by the Pittsburgh consulting firm of Fortino & Associates, have been reprinted wherever column space is filled with neat little stories about the wacky world we live in - which is to say, just about everywhere.

presidential spokesman Larry Speakes once said, "If you tell the same story five times, it's true." So this story must really be true - after all, it passed unscathed through the fact-checking procedures of so many reputable news organizations. Surely so many writers and editors couldn't have reported information that was the result of someone's having hit the wrong button on his calculator! After a grueling four minutes with our own calculator, we then someone broke the alleged "lifetime" statistics down hours in there.

data, we learned the averaged American spends, every day,

- •2 hours 20 minutes in the bathroom
- •1 hour 40 minutes waiting in line
- ·40 minutes trying to phone people who aren't home
- •20 minutes searching for misplaced ob-
- •15 minutes opening junk mail

This was news. Has anyone outside of Eastern Europe actually waited in line 1 hour and 40 minutes a day, seven days a week, from infancy until death? After all, the Stones don't go on tour that often. And does everyone really spend 40 minutes a day trying to telephone people who aren't home, when such calls are necessarily awfully short?

Don't forget, these are supposed to be average figures. So if you think you're spending only 30 minutes a day in the bathroom, then someone else must be spending 3 or 4
