Dear Brother,

We have just had the most glorious sunrise I have ever seen, yesterday the weather was mild, to day it is like early summer, the contrast of the last 2 weeks is terrible, when we could scarcely keep from freezing to death.

Mr Arthur called to say that he had just received your letter, that he had the tax bills, in New York, and would send them to you on his return there, that he would see that they were right. I wish you would please to have them paid for the present, or past year, (I don't know which are due now).

Before your reply to this will probably ^{not} be here, we shall be gone.
