CLUB MOTTO :

"To Help Others is to Elevate Ourselves, and to Elevate Ourselves is to Help Others."

“The King is dead; Long live the King!
That hath a melancholy ring;
For while they hail the rising sun,
They mourn for him whose day is done.
But this, our sceptre, passeth not
By death, but by a simple vote;
Of sadness, though, there is a tinge,
'Tis always so, I think, in change.
Then let us join all, ladies fair,
In praise of her who leaves the chair;
Her charming presence, gracious ways,
Will be remembered many days,
While our Miss Quinn with joy we greet,
To her we give the honor seat.”

The Woman's Emergency Association of Louisville, Ky., having for its object the co-ordination of women's literary, artistic, and philanthropic organizations of the city for relief work in times of National, State, or local emergency, is composed of nearly four thousand women.

At a meeting of its Board of Directors, January 25th, it was resolved that the following letter should be sent to the representative of each associated organization :

The Woman's Emergency Association, representing nearly four thousand women who compose the principal clubs, church and philanthropic societies, etc., of the city of Louisville, will hold a mass-meeting in the church building, corner Fourth and Chestnut, on Tuesday, February 6, 1900, at 3 : 30 o'clock P. M.

The meeting will be addressed by the following ministers :

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Dudley and Revs. Carter Helm Jones, E. L. Powell, and J. Kinsey Smith, also Messrs. Alex. Humphrey and Temple Bodley, and is called for the special purpose of directing the attention of women to the importance and necessity of using their influence in behalf of good citizenship.

Resolutions will be presented condemning the practice of carrying concealed weapons.

The meeting will be strictly non-partisan, and every woman in the city of Louisville is cordially invited.

By order of the Board.

MRS. GEO. C. AVERY, President.
NANNIE LEE FRAYSER, Secretary.

Pursuant to call, the mass-meeting convened in the Chestnut Street Church, Tuesday, February 6th, at 3:30 P. M.

Long before the designated time the church was crowded to its utmost capacity with an attendance of thoughtful women, whose presence indicated earnest purpose; whose interest from the opening prayer to the last word of the benediction proved to be an inspiration for good works.

On the platform were the officers of the Emergency Association and the speakers of the afternoon, while to the rear, in the music loft, were the musicians who led the singing.

Promptly at the hour the assembly was called to order by the President, Mrs. Geo. C. Avery, and the doors were closed, there being no longer standing-room within the building, while a waiting crowd stood outside.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. C. J. Howes, after which the audience remained standing and joined in singing the national hymn, "America."

The first speaker was the Rt. Rev. T. U. Dudley, Bishop of Kentucky, who stated "The Need of the Meeting." Extracts from his speech are as follows:

I am asked to speak for ten minutes about our condition in Kentucky and the consequent need of this meeting. . . . My sisters, I thank God that you have gathered here to-day and taken the first step toward uniting all the women of the Commonwealth in the endeavor to enlighten, to illuminate, to enlarge the spirit of their fellows, that so the spirit of lawlessness that doth dominate our people may be broken. If we are to go back to find out what is the cause of this outrage that is making Kentucky to-day a stench in the nostrils of the nation, and making honest men and women to hang their heads in shame, that they must be called Kentuckians, I answer that it is the spirit of lawlessness which hath grown with our growth apparently, which has increased as the State hath grown, instead of being diminished and obliterated by the advent of the instrumentalities that in other communities have put it to death. . . .

I stand here to declare that there are no nobler men on the face of God's earth than inhabit our home of Kentucky. (Applause.) I stand here to declare, as I have declared to audiences elsewhere, that there are no men whose spirit of generous daring is higher than theirs. I have been bold to say sometimes that, with all the crimes with which the newspapers are full as having been done in Kentucky, you shall not find anywhere such crimes as we are ashamed to read of in other places, such as murder of womanhood for money garnered for years. Now I have to hang my head in shame for the first time in twenty-five years. In the open day, in the streets of the capital city, a man has been smitten down by the cowardly bullet of the assassin. Every Kentuckian will answer amen when I say "cowardly bullet." I have sometimes questioned in my own heart, could this be a Kentuckian who fired his gun from ambush, who was afraid to show his face?

My sisters, let it be our endeavor that the spirit of lawlessness which hath at last resulted, as its natural and inevitable outcome in this tragedy, may be eliminated, may be exorcised, may not find a place in the hearts of our boys who are growing up round about us. This is going to be done, if at all, by the influence of the women. This is no new thing that I tell you. There is not a man in this house who will not acknowledge that all that is best in him hath come to him from the influence of his mother, his sister, his wife. There is not a brave man on earth who will not acknowledge that even his courage hath come to him from the teaching and the example of womanhood. It is going to be wrought by woman, if wrought at all. . . .

I rejoice that you women here in Louisville are gathered in this cause because of the impulse that it will give to all your sisters everywhere. It rests with you to fight this battle to save the State and our men.

Then followed the Rev. Carter Helm Jones on “The Power Behind the Throne”:

Looking into your faces to-day, I forget for the moment the awful gloom in the new love which I have for this my adopted and yet my own State. I want that we shall start once again, if we can, the old ideal of old-fashioned patriotism.

I think that I may represent the men of Kentucky when I say that we can paraphrase the old saying and make it history, “That, in Kentucky, where a woman wills he wills, you may depend on it; and where a woman won't he won't, and that is the end o' it.” (Applause.) I ask, then, two things in the few moments that I may have, and I beg on bended knee—if need be—I ask that you demand of us that we be better men, and we will be. (Applause.) You are too easily satisfied with us. You demand too little of us. Raise your ideals of how pure we ought to be. Raise your ideals of how honest and how honorable we ought to be. Raise your ideals of the conduct that you want in us, and we will meet them, God helping us. (Applause.) The other thing that I want to say is this, demand that we will be better citizens, and we will be. . . .

I beg of you, then, that not in a medieval spirit, girding on the armor and placing the helmet in its place, and the sword, but remembering that, as Lowell says, “the crowning act, the kingliest act of freedom, is a freeman's vote”—that you see to it that your husbands, your brothers, your sons, God bless them, your sweethearts, shall be nobler, stronger men; and that they shall exercise the royalty of their highest prerogative according to the ideals that you shall give them. Send them to our primaries; be willing for them to be candidates for offices that may not seem to bring honor, but give honor to them. Require that they shall be citizens. Ask them how they vote; ask them the character of the men to whom they shall give their suffrages, and then, it seems to me, we will sing again one song for the old Kentucky home, and we will sing two songs for the new Kentucky home.

The Rev. J. Kinsey Smith's subject was, "The Child is Father to the Man." The Rev. Mr. Smith spoke as follows :

The most beautiful words of wisdom that ever fell from human lips were spoken by the Master when he said, "Suffer the little children to come to me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Those are the deepest and profoundest words of human or divine philosophy. The child is father of the man, as the poet tells us.

The little child is the hope of our America and of our world. With the man and woman who are grown to maturer life, we can do very little, but with the children in our homes, if we fill their minds with the right ideas and ideals, we can be sure of the future of our Commonwealth. This is the child's age. That little life that once was disregarded by the world has become the object of the State; the wisdom of the world and its philosophy and educational systems are being brought to bear on that child. . . .

If we are to make a new Kentucky, must we not go back to the old-fashioned ideas of training children, and follow the first and fundamental principle of all training? Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right; honor your father and your mother. Is it not true in our homes to-day the child usually rules and the parents obey? (Applause.)

Is it not true, as a distinguished foreigner said of us, this is the country of obedient parents? Obedience, the first principle, the instinct; the habit of obedience in the child's mind will make it, when it grows up, obedient to the law and "the powers that be." Teach the child reverence; reverence for the parents, reverence for age, reverence for law, for the Bible, for religion, for God, and for itself. The principles of veracity, truth in thought, word, and deed, self-restraint, should be inculcated; and above all, let me beg of you Christian women to get into the minds of your children a different idea of honor from that which controls the minds of so many men of Kentucky to-day.

Much depends on the women, but more depends upon the fathers of Kentucky. (Applause.) What we want is to call a public meeting for the fathers of Kentucky. (Applause.) The women can't train the children alone.

I do not believe the women are mainly to blame. But the men ought to be told and exhorted to do their duty, and I hope that out of this meeting will grow meetings for them. We can not reach them in churches or in prayer-meetings, for they won't come. . . .

Then the fathers and the mothers jointly will train the boys and the girls that will make a noble, free, emancipated and glorious Kentucky, for whose emancipation and for whose glorious future our prayers go up to God to-day. (Applause.)

“Kentucky in Eclipse,” by Mr. Temple Bodley, is given in full :

“KENTUCKY IN ECLIPSE.”

It is a sad thing when children should blush for their mother. It is a sad thing when we see our old mother, Kentucky—the mother of Marshall and Crittenden and Robertson, of Buell and Buckner, the mother that gave birth to Jefferson Davis and Abraham Lincoln, the mother that fostered Henry Clay—after she had fairly won an honorable name by years of honorable conduct and had seen her sons become the wise and mighty of the land, after she had sent them forth to battle for law and justice and right upon the bloody fields of war, proud of their birth, spurred to heroism by their love of her, and facing death rather than dishonor her fair name—it is sad indeed to see her now drunk with crime, dishonored, the sneer and abhorrence of civilized men. We well may blush for her.

But, Mrs. Chairman, this is no time for considering what other people may think of us.

Under that insane idea that bad political conditions will right themselves, we have let things go from bad to worse until we now realize that we have got to right them ourselves. If we people of Kentucky want to wipe out this disgrace, if we want law and order, we have got first of all to look facts squarely in the face and not be afraid of the truth. Are we civilized? Brute force is barbarous. Lawlessness is barbarous. We have both. Are we civilized? The outside world seems to think not; but I believe the outside world is wrong. Corrupt government has made violence and lawlessness rampant in nearly every civilized community in Christendom, and I believe the people of every State in this Union should take the lesson of Kentucky home to themselves. That lesson is this: that a highly civilized, law-abiding, brave people, under a republican form of government, if they but allow power to get into the hands of unprincipled politicians, may any day be confronted with the alternative of political slavery or revolution! Four nights ago Irving brought us face to face with Robespierre and the horrors of the French Revolution. But for the restraining influence of the other States, we might well have such scenes enacted upon a more real and a much larger stage here in Kentucky. Believe me, amongst our political freebooters of both parties in this city and at Frankfort, we do not lack our Robespierre, our Marat and Danton!

We know the condition confronting us; we know who brought it all on; but if we would find the remedy for lawlessness, we must trace it to its original source.

Some people attribute our lawless condition to the carrying of deadly weapons. Certainly it should be put down. But it is well to remember that carrying arms is not so much the cause as the result of lawlessness. When law is not enforced, men will be a law unto themselves. As long as men are not safe without arms, they will carry them. Whether they shall carry them openly, like the mountaineers, or secretly, like the "first gentlemen of the Bluegrass," is simply a question how far the law is enforced and what is the danger of being caught with arms or without them.

No, to find the real underlying cause of lawlessness in Kentucky we must go deeper. We know it has been steadily growing for nearly fifty years; we know that it is due to corrupt politics; we know that it is not so much due to bad laws as to the bad enforcement of them. Now, who enforces the laws?

That brings me to what I believe is the real, the main cause. When we people of Kentucky realize that, whether in great crises or in the daily administration of the law which brings great crises about, the ultimate power is not the power which enacts the law nor the power which merely executes it, but the power that decides what the law is, what law shall be enforced and whether it shall be enforced at all—when we realize that the real power, the last power short of revolution is not in mayors or councils, is not in legislatures or governors, but in the courts, we shall have gone to the tap-root of our trouble.

Indolent, ignorant, and corrupt judges are the greatest curse of any state. They degrade the bench, they debase the bar, they make chaos of the law. Corrupt elections will always give us some corrupt judges, and one of them does more to discredit the bench with the people than a score of honorable judges can do to uphold it.

The experience of nearly every State with an elected judiciary is the same. There are degrees, of course, but public confidence in judges nominated by political wire-pullers and elected by popular vote is well-nigh gone.

In Kentucky the degeneration of justice has not aroused public attention because it has been so gradual; and it has been gradual because of the hard struggle of those militant virtues which a long and honorable history had impressed upon the bar. When in 1849 a few blatant demagogues—the real authors of our present disgrace—persuaded a misguided people that they were wise in all things and should choose their own judges, the character of the bench and bar of Kentucky was so pure that it took years to corrupt it. But now, the election boss, the ward-heeler, the saloon-keeper, the lawyer-criminal has more influence in some of our courts than the most respected citizen or the most eminent counsel at the bar. And even when the judge is an upright man—and most of our judges are that—the standard of intelligence and learning demanded by the voters is so low that law and justice are often but the tossing of a copper.

Do not misunderstand me. There are many able, upright, learned lawyers in this State, worthy of its best days. Some of these are on the bench, striving hard to do their duty. The virtues of the bench and bar of Kentucky are not dead yet. But "the better the coin, the baser the counterfeit." The rule is that not the best lawyer but the best politician is chosen to wear the ermine—to wear it after it has been dragged in the mire of politics and steeped in the liquor of the saloon.

As long as we have courts commanding the confidence of the people we shall have law and order; when that confidence is gone, men may look any day for what we have had at Frankfort.

In this danger Kentucky is not alone. It may be we have gone further than other States because we have less confidence in our courts, or because we have come from fighting stock and are quicker to appeal to arms when we think we can not appeal to law, but corrupt justice is the product of corrupt politics in other States than Kentucky, and their people, too, may wake up some day to find that corrupt justice ends in bloodshed and revolution.

But, Mrs. Chairman, knowing the main cause, what is the remedy? We are told that we should go to the polls, that we should see that good men run for office, and then see that they are elected. True. That is what men ought to do, but that is exactly what men, as they are, don't do, and, except in great crises, won't do. Nine men in ten already know their political duty, but they don't do it. Men high in our churches—men honest in their private dealings with other men, sincere in their religious beliefs—men who "fear God and do the right" in all else, lend aid to bribe voters, to bribe councils and legislatures, to put unfit men in office, to prey upon the public purse, to prostitute justice and corrupt the whole administration of the law. What is the cause of this inconsistency? They have been well taught to believe it is a sin against God to wrong a neighbor. They have not been well taught that it is a greater sin against God to wrong all their neighbors. To the shame of America, to the shame of the congregations of our churches, to the shame—may I say it?—of our American pulpit, to the shame of us all, “Every thing is honest in politics,” and after nineteen hundred years of Christian teaching the ten commandments and the golden rule are not, by the average religious man, believed broad enough to cover the sins of citizenship!

No, the doing of our political duty is not a question of knowledge; it is a question of character, of morality, of religion. The Greek or Roman patriot believed that his city was the sanctuary of his god. His political duty was his religious duty. And so, too, is ours. When men are made, not merely to say and think, but to feel that to wrong their city or State is a greater violation of the law of God than to wrong one fellow-man—when they are made to feel that the vengeance of God will not more surely follow a wrong to one man than a wrong to all men, we shall have laid deep the corner-stone of law and order and morality—of a higher civilization and a broader religion.

We have had great religious revivals; we have had Moody and Gough and Barnes; we have had great crusades for temperance; we have crusades against gambling. Let us have another and grander crusade, a crusade against that all-pervading sin, the sin of political corruption. Oh, for a Luther! oh, for a trumpet-tongued prophet of Israel! oh, for a Jean d’Arc, armed with no sword but only with virtue and zeal!

Banded together you women can start such a crusade as will sweep corruption from every office from the Big Sandy to the Mississippi. You share with the pulpit the moral teaching of the people. Combine with it. Organize a bureau, call conventions, use the mails, use the press, and, more important, teach in your homes, and more important still, appeal to every minister in the State to preach from his pulpit the gospel of political sin and the regeneration of patriotic citizenship. It is a work worthy of the women of Kentucky. Well done, it will not fail.

Dr. Adolph Moses spoke upon "The Hope of the State," from which we quote :

This vast meeting, called together by a number of high, aspiring, Godly, patriotic ladies, composed of the representative women of Kentucky, is a sign of hope and promise in the midst of conditions which seem well nigh desperate. The regeneration of the State of Kentucky, which has humbled itself to the dust by its corrupt political methods, must be begun and carried to a successful issue only by the women of Kentucky. The women are the moral salt of the earth. But for them the earth would become decayed.

There are noble men and women in Kentucky, but there are also a great many primitive pagans. We profess to be followers of Moses and of Jesus, but with only our lips. "Thou shalt not do thy brother any harm; thou shalt not bear him grudge; thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." These are the teachings of holy writ, but we practice the gospel of primitive pagans. (Applause.) Our idea is that every man must be the guardian of his own honor. If a man insults you, you must not let it pass, but imbrue your hand in his blood, otherwise you will be ostracised. Our spirit is pre-social, ante-social. We are standing on a platform of primitive individualism, although members of one whole social body.

The remedy must begin with you, ladies. The root of the evil is in not knowing the evil and in not teaching the value of human life. Life is too cheap in Kentucky. Go home and clean out your drawers and throw away all pistols that you may find there. Wherever there is an instrument of murder, destroy it. Tell your husbands that a true gentleman will not arm himself.

Explain to your children the true spirit of Jesus and the meaning of his sermon on the mountain. Teach them that to be a man is to fear God. Teach them to be forgiving, to be obedient. Woe to the Commonwealth that will ever elect a man who carries a concealed weapon or any weapon about his person. I wish I could pour out every drop of blood in my heart for the welfare of Kentucky and save this Commonwealth from the disgrace which has fallen upon it. Women of Kentucky, repent first for yourselves; repent for your husbands; repent for the Commonwealth; pray to God—He may forgive us our sins through our sincere repentance.”

The closing address, by the Rev. E. L. Powell, dealt with “Mother’s Influence upon the Future of the State,” and was, in part, as follows :

The mother sustains to the child, and therefore to the coming citizen, a relationship and responsibility which may be shared but not assumed by any other soul in the universe. . . .

What is the duty of the mother to the future American citizen? She must teach this boy, the future American citizen, patriotism—not the cheap patriotism which shouts for one’s country while ignorant of the genius of her institutions—not that kind of patriotism which is blind to the excellencies which may be found in other governments and in other constitutions, but that patriotism which is born of whatever is high and heroic and noble in the history of our own land. Let him understand that patriotism is giving, not getting—the giving of the very best that he has, even of his very life if need be, and asking only in return that his country shall be true to her high mission and to her splendid destiny. . . . The influence of the mother upon the future American citizen is of such strength and persistence that it is impossible for any man to get away from it utterly, however much he may outrage it or seek to conquer it by an evil course of life. What a tremendous task is set before the motherhood of America. “If we work upon marble,” says Webster, “it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into the dust, but if we work upon immortal minds, imbuing them with principles of truth and life, with a just fear of God and love of our fellow-man, we are engraving upon those tablets something which shall brighten unto all eternity.” This is the high commission of the motherhood of America. . . .

Let the mother teach her boy religion, and let her add to that instruction that religion has to do with all life, and, therefore, with political life. Do not permit him to entertain the false notion that the political realm is a thing apart with which religious principles have nothing whatsoever to do.

Let the mother teach this boy, this future American citizen, that he must be an active participant in politics. Let our sons and our husbands understand that it is a high and honorable and sacred duty to enter into this political realm and do what can be done to ennoble it, to transfigure it, and to glorify it. . . . Blessed is that woman who can send out into this old world in which we live noble Christian citizens, "tall men, sun-crowned, who rise above the fog in public duty and in private thinking."

At the conclusion of these addresses the chair introduced Mrs. A. M. Harrison, of Lexington, President of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Harrison offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted :

Resting under the shadow of a great calamity, dishonored by the conduct of recent public affairs, in the hope that the united influence of the women of Kentucky may incite men to rise above party for the honor of statehood, be it

Resolved, That while we recognize the necessity of political parties in a government by the people, we urge that patriotism and principle be placed before party, and that the same standard of conduct governing private life be applied to public duties; and be it further

Resolved, That parents, teachers of our schools throughout the Commonwealth, the Federation of Women's Clubs, all philanthropic societies and kindred organizations in Kentucky, be urged to co-operate in inculcating principles of good citizenship and a realization of the obligations relating thereto.

Inasmuch as the carrying of deadly weapons is largely responsible for the moral disorder and resultant crime prevalent in our State; and, whereas, the non-enforcement of our statutory laws has rendered them practically inoperative, be it

Resolved, That the expression of public opinion in so far as controllable by this assembly be such as to enforce the execution of said laws and to compel the enactment of such penalties as will prevent transgression; and be it further

Resolved, That said public opinion call for the enactment of laws providing that he who takes life, except in lawful discharge of public duty, be thereby disfranchised and rendered ineligible for holding public office.

I move that a Special Committee be appointed by the Executive Board of the Woman's Emergency Association, whose duty shall be to convey to the women of the State the sense of this meeting; also to formulate a plan whereby its purposes may be made practical.

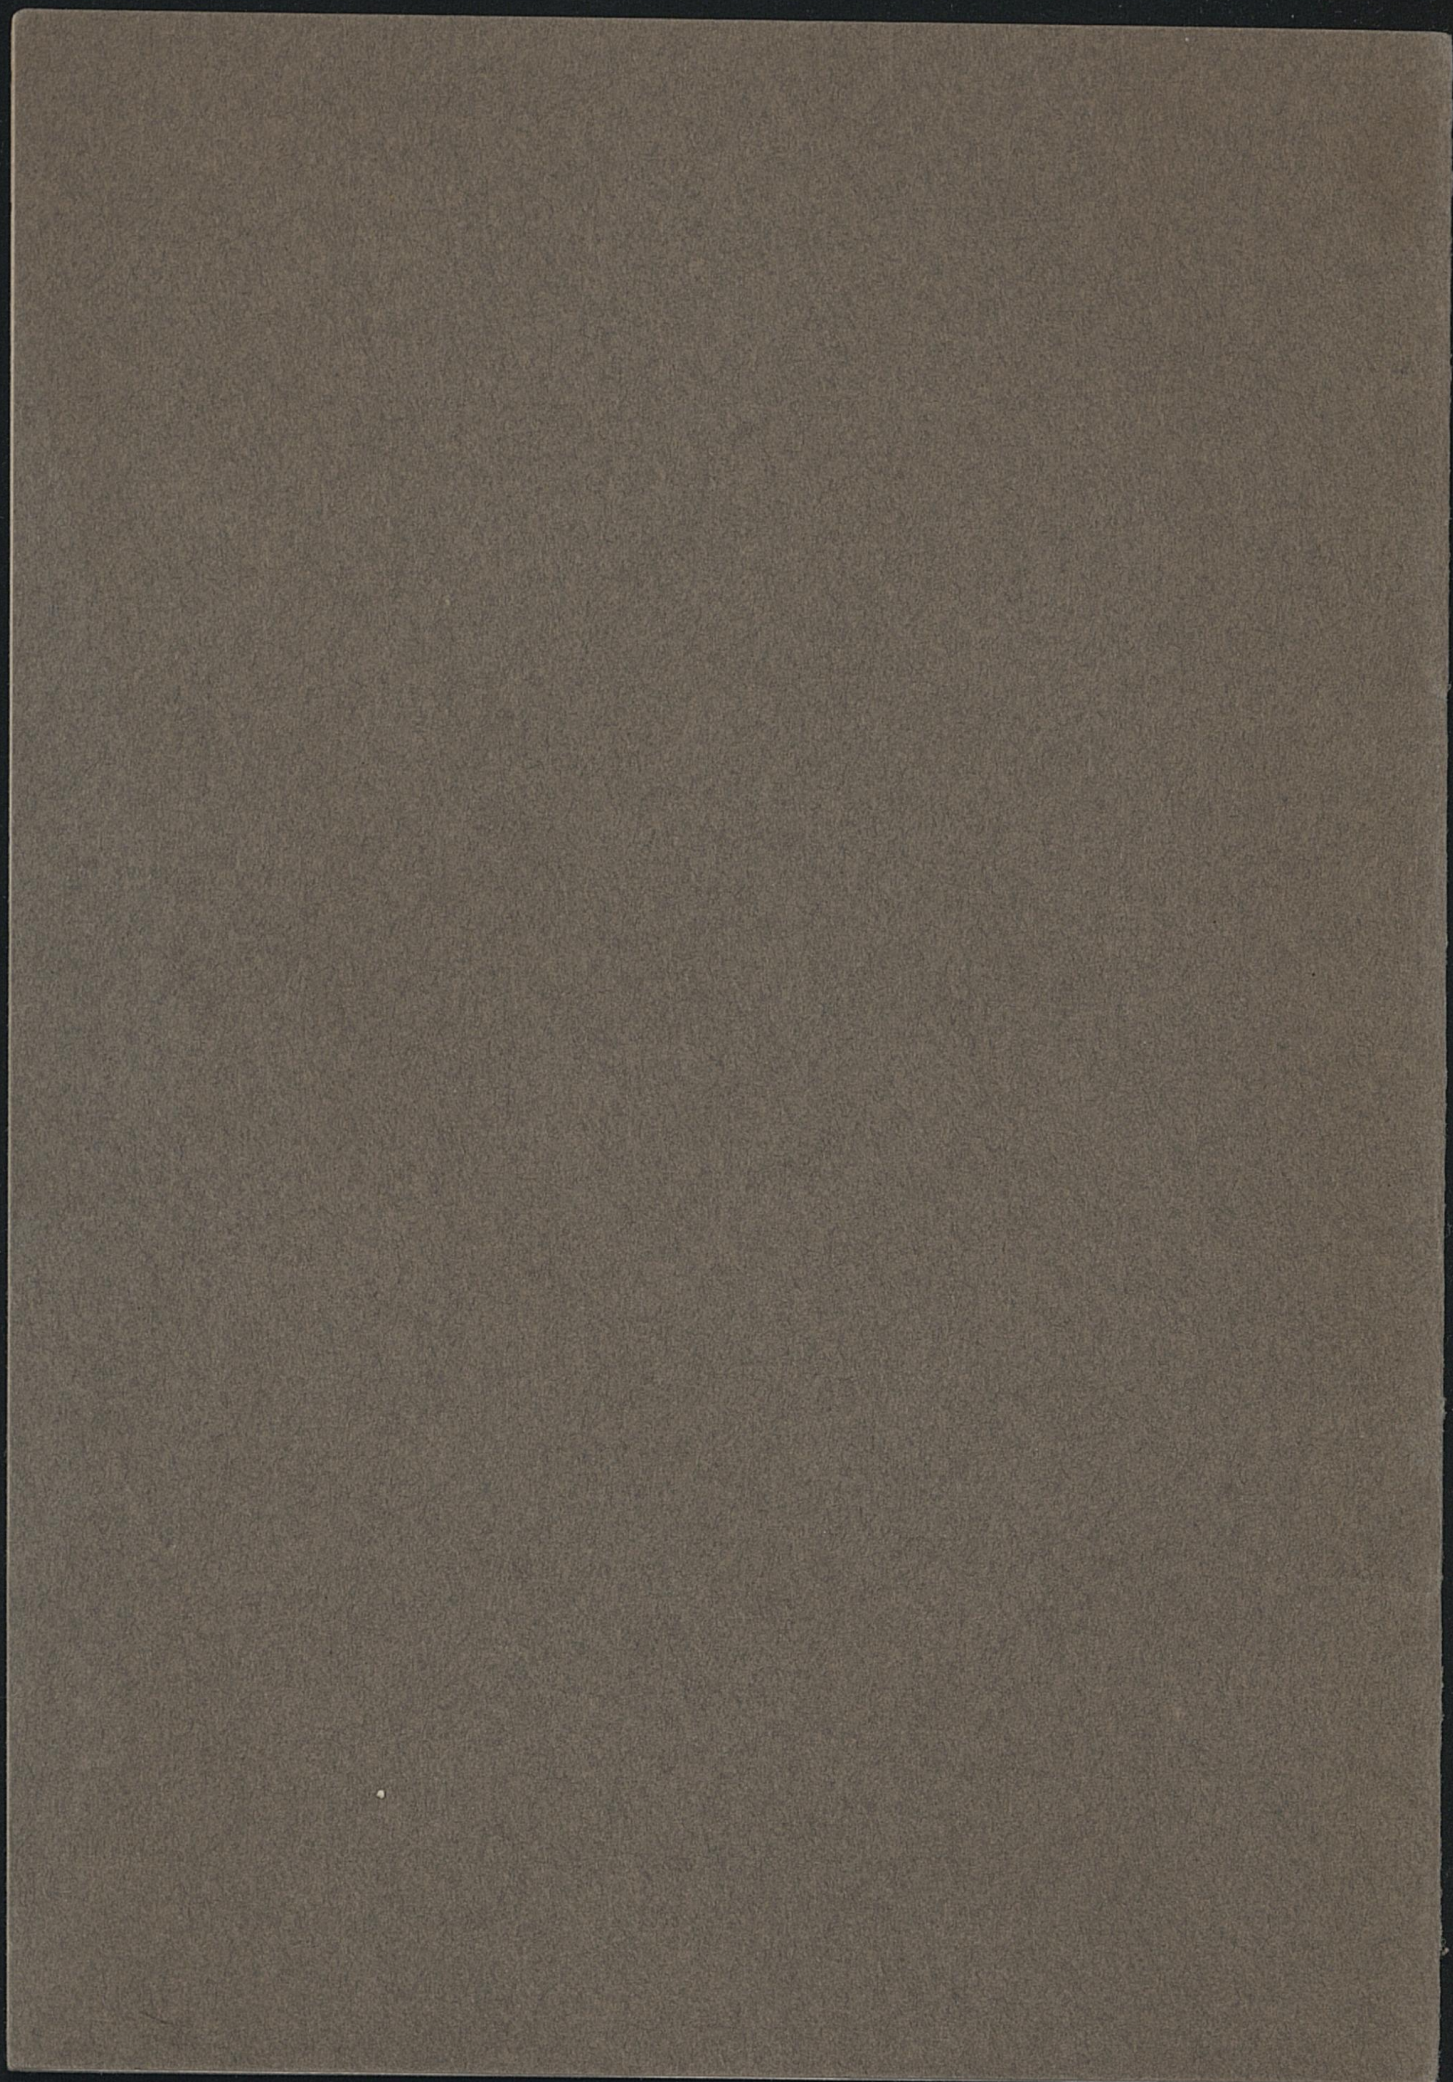

After the Doxology, sung by the audience, Bishop Dudley pronounced the benediction, and the mass-meeting stood adjourned.

Respectfully submitted.
