The following utterance of Prof. Huxley contains a very forceful argument in favor of taxation for schools that shall fall upon rich and childless as well as upon the poor and prolific.

Professor Huxley was asked a question. Why should I be taxed to educate another man's children? In reply he said: "In the city where I live I am taxed to pay for streets that I never set my foot upon; I am taxed to pay for lights that I never see; I am taxed to pay for judges, courts and sheriffs whose services I never need, but if I should go before the powers that be and ask to be excused on the ground that I do not need these things I would be laughed to scorn. They would say, Mr. Huxley, you must stand up and bear your share of the burden of civilization". When I came into this world I was a small object with no distinctly abstract or concrete rights of my own and with no distinct claims on society, and had I been treated as I deserved at that moment, I would have been stamped out of existence as a squalling nuisance. But society cared for me gently and led me into the ways and walks of life. Had it not been for the sacrifices and sufferings of generations of men who have gone before me my share of this world's goods would be a stone cave and a flint axe, and I would have been a naked savage dancing in the moonlight, and I could retain that stone cave and flint axe only until some more powerful savage should come and take it away from me. If, on the contrary, I enjoy all the benefits and advantages of a refined and cultured civilization, it ill becomes me now that my hour of power and strength has come to refuse to do for other little ones what society has so graciously done for me, and if I should refuse I think society should take hold of me with a strong arm and compel me to do my duty."

Total population of Kentucky 2,147,174
 Percentage of illiteracy of total population,
 ten years of age and over 16.5
 Rank of Kentucky on the basis of this percentage 37

That is, Kentucky stands 37th in the list of States when their relative positions are computed on the basis of their percentage of illiteracy among the total population, ten years of age and over.

Total white population of Kentucky 1,862,300
 Percentage of illiteracy of the white population,
 ten years of age and over 12.8
 Rank of the State on the basis of this percentage 42

There are ten of the best counties in Kentucky, noted for their wealth, good roads and historic families, that show a total of 6788 native white illiterates of native white parentage; just 92 fewer than the native white illiterates of native white parents in the whole State of Maine, nearly twice as many as in the whole State of Massachusetts, and over twice as many as in Nebraska.

Percentage of illiteracy of whole population,
 ten years of age and over in 1880 29.9

Percentage of illiteracy of whole population,
 ten years of age and over, in 1890 21.6

Percentage of illiteracy of whole population,
 ten years of age and over, in 1900 16.5

It appears from the figures just given that we made much less progress from 1890 to 1900 than from 1880 to 1890 in wiping out our illiteracy. What will the next census show?

Percentage of illiteracy of total voting population	18.8
Rank of Kentucky on this basis	38
Percentage of illiteracy of white voters ...	13.9
Rank of Kentucky on this basis	46
Percentage of illiteracy of native white voters of native parentage	15.5
Rank of Kentucky on this basis	49

There are thirty-eight counties in Kentucky in which the percentage of illiterate white voters is twenty or more, in eight of these the percentage is thirty or more, and in three it is thirty-five.

In 1900 the whole number of illiterate white voters in Kentucky was 65,517, a number at least twice the size of the largest plurality in a state election in recent years.

The rural school census (white) is a little over 87% of the whole school census of the State. There is scarcely fifty per cent of the children of school age in Kentucky in any school. What shall be done to put more children into the rural district schools, to provide them with longer terms, better school houses, better roads to travel on and better teachers?

The present law permits any county to vote a tax in better support of the public schools. Not a single county in the State is now using that privilege. Mason county has a special county tax but it was not secured under the present State Law.

According to the last report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, there are only 520 white districts out of a total 7385 that have a tax to lengthen the term or increase the salary.

The present term of the rural school in Kentucky is only one hundred and twenty days.
