Boutelle: Let People Rule

By DARRELL RICE
Paul Boutelle is a taxi driver in New York City.

He also is a candidate for vice president on the Socialist Workers ticket.

He doesn't expect to be elected in 1968, but he does hope his campaign can be used as publicity for getting the socialist message "to the working men."

Mr. Boutelle, from Harlem, told an audience of about 40 at Nexus coffeehouse Thursday night that his party is running against both Republicans and Democrats, which he said represented only powerful financial and economic interests.

"Under socialism," he said, "there is no government apart from the people. The people are the government."

Mr. Boutelle drew frequent laughter from the group with sardonic comments about this country—both past and present:

"You don't hear this too much anymore: 'He doesn't have a Chinaman's Chance.'"

"The best presidents are found on dollar bills—you spend them and they don't lie to you."

"The only difference between (President) Johnson and (former Alabama Gov. George) Wallace is that Wallace is honest." Mr. Wallace has said he will be a presidential candidate if one of the two major parties fail to nominate a candidate to his satisfaction.

Mr. Boutelle said Negroes and American Indians should be represented out of proportion in the government to make up for past deprivations.

Federal Drug Officials Disagree On Penalties For 'Pot-Pushers'

By WALTER GRANT
WASHINGTON (CPS)—The two federal officials who have the most to say about the government's policy on marijuana have offered sharply differing testimony before a House subcommittee about what should be done to pot-pushers.

Members of a House subcommittee on government operations, hearing the testimony early this week, showed a distinct preference for Narcotics Bureau Commissioner Henry Giordano's view that pot-users are criminals and should be subject to long jail terms and stiff fines.

When Dr. James Goddard, chief of the Food and Drug Administration, suggested that laws concerning marijuana use might be too severe, some of the congressmen took him to task.

Dr. Goddard testified, "I don't think we should make criminals out of the individuals who abuse" the drug.

Mr. Giordano, testifying the following day, strongly disagreed. The criminal penalties for smoking pot are a deterrent to its use, he said, and if Congress decides to lessen the penalties, "the statistics on the use of the drug will go right through the roof."

Several congressmen suggested there was no need for the committee even to think about reducing the penalties for possession of marijuana. Rather, they said, Congress should be thinking about making the penalties for possession of LSD much more severe, while leaving the marijuana law alone.

Under the present laws, an individual convicted of possessing marijuana has committed a felony and may receive up to 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine for his first offense. Federal laws regarding LSD now say that agents may seek no more than a user's supply of the drug.

Both Dr. Goddard and Mr. Giordano agreed that LSD is far more dangerous than marijuana and that efforts should be made to close the gap in the penalties with respect to the two drugs.

Although Dr. Goddard refused to suggest what penalties should apply to pot-users, he indicated "they should be like those now applied to LSD." Mr. Giordano said applying the LSD penalty to marijuana "would increase the problem tenfold."

Reporter Drew Pearson To Speak Here Tuesday

Drew Pearson, Washington reporter, humanitarian and farmer, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ballroom.

The noted columnist has criticized and fought government officials, members of Congress and important business leaders whenever he felt they were not acting in public interest.

In 1947 Mr. Pearson organized the Friendship Train, which collected $40 million worth of food for France and Italy. Four years later he helped the Freedom Balloon campaign to reach people behind the Iron Curtain with airborne messages of liberty and encouragement.

He has also toured the world extensively reporting and writing. He has interviewed former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev three times, holds numerous awards from many countries, has written books on U.S. government and politics and has been described by Time magazine as the kind of journalist that keeps small men honest and forces bigger men to work in an atmosphere of caution.

Orgena President, Secretary Speak Out

Black At UK: Two Negroes Tell It Like It Is

By KERRY POWELL

Ellis Bullock and Elaine Adams lead lives of paradox.

As students they are involved in classwork and extracurricular activity. As Negroes they are alienated—irrevocably—from vast areas of campus life.

Wearing two hats has taken its toll, and it has generated—in Ellis and Elaine as in most Negroes at UK—an almost belligerent pride in being black.

He is president of Orgena, an organization for Negro students. She is secretary. Orgena—in terms of membership—is no more open to white students than fraternities and sororities are open to Negroes.

"They Have Come"

"Whites have attended the meetings," Elaine said Tuesday. "We've allowed that. But there aren't any white members."

Ellis, who says he is more "conservative" than Elaine and most other UK Negroes, attempted to temper her remark but ended by emphasizing it:

"We're not saying, you know, that we discourage whites from applying; it's not that we're trying to self-segregate. But actually I think most of us would prefer that no white students belong. It's a matter of talking freely about our own problems."

The two disagree more substantially on what it means to be a Negro at UK.

"It's like being on the moon," Elaine said.

"No," Ellis said.

"Yes, it is," she persisted. "I've been in a lot of organizations here. No matter what, they're not going to respect a Negro unless he excels."

"It's Cold"

"I mean, I like it here, it's all right, the campus and everything. But it's cold. You see it in students and you see it in organizations. It's something you feel. You stand out. You're different, and nobody lets you forget it."

Elaine traced, with enthusiasm, her experience with Kentucky Babes, a women's drill team in which she still is active:

"Like the first year I belonged. A lot of people knew I was in it. They could see that. I attended the meetings and I was pretty active. But a lot of those people, once we got outside the practices, they just refused to speak to me."

"That's the way it is," she added. "People that you think you know, they won't say anything to you and they look the other way."

'Black Power Is Reasonable'

By LARRY DALE KEELING

"The best way for Negroes to give a more positive value to their image is through Black Power," Bill Turner told a Sociology 220 class this week.

Turner, chairman of the Campus Committee on Human Rights, added that, to him, Black Power does not mean violence.

"This (Black Power) shudders the foundations of many people because of its connotation," Turner said. "As far as I am concerned, Black Power does not mean violence."

"Black Power is getting your forces together and letting the white people know that you are reasonable people. It is (Cleveland's Carl) Stokes being mayor. It is giving me a sense of identity and fulfillment, hoping that I can be somebody in my society despite my color."

"No Chance"

Turner added that any person can be meritorious if he is given a trial, but that the Negro hasn't been given one.

He said Negroes are integrated into "white" colleges on paper, but not realistically. The codes of fraternities and sororities, he added, may say they do not discriminate on the basis of color, but nevertheless they do.

"I probably wouldn't join a fraternity anyway," Turner said, "but I would like to be the one who decides."

Similarly, in answer to a question, Turner said he "wouldn't marry a white girl," but he doesn't want "anybody denying me the right to."

Wants Option

"What we want is the option to do anything we want. Let us decide whether to do it or not," he said.

"We've let our society make us racists," he continued. "We've been taught that black is bad, not only in race, but as a symbol of all evil."

Turner said the Negro always has been taught he is inferior, adding that black students traditionally have been told, when they finish school, that some white man would "pick them up."

"I think we must do something ourselves," Turner said. "We're not going to use our blackness as a crutch. I'm going to try to make it in spite of my color. That's the kind of racist I am."

Europe Trip Set, SG Says

Plans for the Student Government Travel Service for two trips to Europe this summer are complete, according to Brint Milward, director of the student service.

The trips, which begin May 20 and Aug. 15, cost $285 and include round trip on a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines DC-8 from New York to Amsterdam.

Milward said 100 seats, 50 on each flight, have been reserved.

To reserve one of the seats a $75 deposit is required which, Milward said, is refundable up to March 26. A travel agent will be made available at the Student Government office to help people plan their trips.

Wares=Ideas? Absurd

For the bureaucrats who are unable to distinguish wares from ideas there is a lesson in fundamental semantics, to be gained from their very mouths.

In the current issue of the Handbook for Men in Residence; prepared by the office of student affairs, residence halls programming, at page 8, the following is to be found:

SOLICITING

"To protect residents from unreliable and illegal peddlers, no soliciting is permitted in the residence halls without written permission from the Associate Dean of Students. Any solicitor who approaches you should be asked for his written permission card. Any solicitor not having (sic) this card should be reported to your Corridor Advisor immediately."

A peddler is one who peddles.
To peddle is: to go from place to place selling small articles; to carry from place to place and offer for sale, or to deal in or dispense, especially small amounts.

The language of this University regulation is addressed to individuals dealing with tangible goods. Ideas oral or written, distributed without cost, are not in the class of tangible goods subject to the regulation.

The tenor of this regulation requires a confrontation, person to person. What does the regulation have to do with the dissemination of ideas, particularly written ones silently placed under doors by a University student?

Such imprecise language as this can never be used to deter free speech.

Letters To The Editor: the readers write

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

I think it is about time a feminine view of the "social situation" at UK was presented. The "gentlemen" who have previously voiced their opinions suggest that the UK coed is to blame for the lack of socializing done on this campus.

The main reason girls give the impression of being unapproachable is because guys look for physical attractiveness and easy moral standards rather than personality traits, and most girls do not find it necessary to present themselves on such basis. Boys, in general, think they are too good for the girls they can get, and the girls they want, they are unable to get.

Crudely expressed, but a typical masculine reaction, dating is regarded as a business bargain. To take a girl out and spend money on her is thought to call for an equivalent return for the trouble and expense. A mere good-night kiss is considered short measure. If sex is all a boy wants from a girl, good and well—just so long as they both realize the limited nature of their relationship.

Naturally a girl should be friendly, but she shouldn't have to flirt with a guy and make it obvious to him and everyone else that she would like to go out with him. Why is it so hard for a guy to pursue a girl he thinks he might be interested in? Most guys don't understand, but it is an insult to a girl to think that she has to make herself so readily available before a guy will approach her.

Of course this campus does not sponsor functions more often which would make it easier to meet people, but when jam sessions are held, it is the guys who are responsible for not meeting the girls. A guy won't approach a group of girls and ask one of them to dance; she is instead expected to stand off by herself and wait for a guy to get up enough nerve to ask her. But yet, guys come to the jam sessions in packs and just stand around, doing nothing but embarrassing the girls because they won't ask them to dance. Guys are afraid to ask just any girl; she has to first have the approval of all the other guys who are with him.

Mr. Swartz said in his comment, "You know what is missing from the UK social atmosphere; mainly, respect, courtesy, and above all, friendliness." I completely agree with this! It applies to both male and female, and if it were used by the male to approach the female, perhaps he would be rewarded with the same compliment. A guy should expect no more than this from a girl. But because he does expect more and in most instances does not receive it, he feels the UK coed is "stuck up" and "immature." This being the case, I really don't care what the guys on this campus think, as more than likely, my opinion of them is equivalent to their opinion of me.

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

Within a period of one week, the campus community has been offered speeches on three pertinent topics: students' role, Negro-white relations, and Vietnam.

Father Mathaler's speech Thursday night (Nov. 9) concerning the role of the student was canceled because only two students were present. Less than one fifth of the total campus population attended the fall convocation at which Whitney Young, Jr. spoke, even though all classes were to be canceled at this time.

Friday evening, Dr. Horace Champney showed a film and spoke of his voyage aboard the "Phoenix" to Hanoi. Approximately 200 students attended this at Nexus. The following morning, Dr. Champney was to speak to a group of Lexington ministers and U.K. faculty. Less than ten people attended.

Chuck & Nancy Davidson

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

As one of the "Smiling Good Guys" whose picture was recently up on campus as part of the Homecoming race, I feel like protesting Russell Pettibone's letter in the Monday, Nov. 13 Kernel.

Admittedly he might not recognize me if I walked across campus wearing my glasses, or another candidate with her long hair around her shoulders instead of swept up, but the smile is genuine, and usually the photo is not so touched-up that the girl is unrecognizable.

And what is that weird reference to 1984? Maybe he is just griping about all the pictures, posters, names, etc. on our campus and particularly the Great Wall. But if he has a real gripe, I suggest he personally meet any future queen candidate before condemning all of us as fake.

Emily Miller
A&S Senior

To the Editor of The Kernel:

In the interest of informing the student of the motives of the administration for the persecution of four University students, and its misuse of the Student Rights Code to do so, I find it necessary to point out a situation which may be relevant.

As of December of this year an avowed conservative Republican will assume the duties of Governor of this state, and also those of chairman of the Board of Trustees. The views of the Governor-Elect are well known in regard to student demonstrations, as can be seen by his campaign statements. From an objective viewpoint, it stands to reason that some amount of pressure is being applied to the security of the positions of top administrative personnel (i.e., Dean of Students, Associate Dean of Students, or even the President). This being apparent, then I ask the question, are the University administrators playing politics at the expense of the students whose interest they pretend to represent?

If this situation exists, then I charge the administration with the flagrant disregard of student rights. As a student I feel it to be my right and duty to request that a thorough investigation of the matter be conducted; that the results be made public in detail; and if this situation is found to be true, that appropriate action be taken to remove the guilty parties from their positions.

Joe Maguire
A&S Junior

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

Your editorial of November 15 concerning conflicting rights and on-campus recruiting by CBR representatives has a curious ring. First, you insist that these representatives are simply carrying out orders framed by the President and Congress; the representatives of Fort Detrick are not responsible, you argue. I am reminded of some closing words by Hannah Arendt condemning Adolf Eichmann in Eichmann in Jerusalem: "Politics is not like the nursery—obedience and support are the same things."

Eichmann's main defense was that he carried out orders, and though he may have had some role in policy-making, we still wonder about all the thousands who "carried out orders" when they knew that women and children were being murdered by the millions. And this leads me to a second curiosity in your argument. You seem to treat all "rights" equally—the right to protest and the right to make poison gas.

But the right to protest always involves individuals taking responsibility for their acts, "coming out in the open." Poison gas is made in secret and its end result is to kill many thousands and even millions, with no individual responsibility taken by those who make it or those who use it. I submit that rights pertain only to responsible individuals and groups operating in the public eye and subject to public controls. The "right" to make poison gas is no right at all, but licentious conduct because it is uncontrolled by public scrutiny. Licentiousness spells anarchy. Oddly enough it is not the student protestor who is anarchistic, for he takes responsibility for what he does even to the point of a jail sentence. It is the so-called representatives of law and order operating in secrecy who are destroying public responsibility and encouraging, by their covert activities, lawless behavior. Such lawlessness is manifest everywhere, but not because common citizens are the law-breakers.

If our leaders wish to lead, they must be good examples. If they wish to have "rights," then they must learn the significance of rights; in short, they must learn to be publicly accountable. Until such time as there is full accountability, I submit that making poison gas is no right at all, except under the crudest of pretexts—"reason of state."

To defend the right of recruiters for gas and biological warfare on this campus must fall back on reason of the state. But such a rationale has nothing to do with the rights of individuals to be heard; and some would even argue reason of the state is antithetical to such rights.

Robert J. Pranger
Associate Professor of Political Science

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

Beware, red-blooded Americans, there's danger in them that protests. Methinks they smack of Communism; and Communism, as everybody knows, is death to freedom.

To anyone who would agree with the above statement; I would ask him to reconsider what the real danger to freedom is in this country.

The Administration is guilty of a fascistic suppression of free speech that is so blatantly open, the superpatriots should be screaming from Maine to Reaganland. By threatening the two students who distributed leaflets criticizing the Administration is guilty of the methods described in the leaflet that they tried to suppress: terrorism.

As usual, the Associate Dean of Students was not available for comment. This is, in a sense, saying that the University does not recognize its campaign of fear, therefore it does not exist.

The real danger to Americans is that this suppression comes from within the conservative establishment of the administration of a university. Freedom of speech, especially in our universities, has long been trumpeted as a glorious facet of American life. But those in the establishment who trumpet free speech are also those who suppress it.

The administration's policy toward the leaflet distributors is sick, and those people who would support it are sick, also. The enemy of freedom lies within the Power Structure, not in any "leftist commie pinko demonstrators."

To the Editor of The Kernel:

Mr. Nathaniel Haynes has missed the point in writing that "the Student Code has failed." An angry administration had four students removed from the campus and punished by local authorities. Contrary to the spirit of the Code, it announced an intention to press for further punishment on campus. Only if the administration succeeds has the Code failed.

To the Editor of The Kernel:

Once again, The Kernel has been caught napping during one of the most important campus events in years. This, of course, was the indignant revolt of the Militant Complex Residents to Bring About a More Livable Atmosphere in the University of Kentucky Dormitories (MC-RTBAAMLAITUOKD).

As spokesman for the MCRTBAAMLAITUOKD, I realize that it is of vital importance that the public know the basic principles of our manifesto. Therefore, the following is a statement of our creed:

We the members of the Militant Complex Residents to Bring About a More Livable Atmosphere in the University of Kentucky Dormitories feel that the basic rights of the residents of the boys' dorms in the Complex have been abridged long enough.

It is time for us to stand up and demand the privileges enjoyed by our fellow students living in Haggin and Donovan. We share the same expenses and responsibilities as others and, therefore, should be given the same freedoms, namely, the right to desecrate our dorms as we see fit.

We, by the liberties granted to us in our housing contracts, should be able to carve up our doors, walls, and woodwork in any way we wish. We have the inalienable right to leave knee-deep garbage in the galls and lounges and to track in layer upon layer of mud and grind it into the rugs, because after all, it is the maintenance men's job to clean it up, is it not?

We have been denied too long the freedom to leave our mark on UK (i.e., four letter words scrawled in the bathrooms and carved into the doors of the elevators in Tower A).

In short, the substance of our liberty has been withheld too long! We insist that we be able to slash the carpeting, carve our names in the doors, scrawl profanity all over the walls, crack the windows, dismantle and steal the furniture, and do everything to make our dorms more comfortable, which, by our nature as free men, we are entitled to do under the Student Code of the University.

These are our freedoms, and to live up to our responsibilities, we have to exercise them. Don't we?

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

We would like to lodge a protest against the protesters.

This past Wednesday, a representative from the U.S. Army Biological Center had arranged to interview microbiology students at the University. He had also consented to address the Bacteriology Society on Tuesday evening. Shortly before the day of his arrival, a group of University students made it known that they would protest such recruiting by Ft Detrick's representative.

When it was learned that the interviewer would not be coming, this protest was canceled. Whether or not the planned protest deterred the representative is irrelevant. The fact remains, seniors at the University have the privilege to be interviewed by organizations of their choice without interference by uninvolved persons.

Although the protest did not materialize, UK's microbiology students' chances for employment at Ft Detrick were injured. The U.S. Army Biological Center offers the finest opportunity for research and graduate study in the nation.

We deeply resent any interference which so directly affects our career opportunities.

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

I would like to compliment Mr. Swartz on his synopsis of the social situation here at UK. Being a graduate student here for more than four years I would have to agree that this situation poses an almost insurmountable wall especially for graduate students.

Many of us come here without any mutual friends of the opposite sex or for that matter without knowing a soul.

If we care about what we are doing it is almost impossible to attend many social functions of this University and if we do we are looked upon as outsiders or possibly "dirty old men." I'm sure that most of us are human beings and wouldn't mind having an enjoyable evening more often than does occur.

However, as Mr. Swartz pointed out that it is awfully hard to come up with a date especially with a "sharp chick" of your choice provided that she's affable. Admittedly one becomes socially stale while sitting in a lab for fourteen hours a day seven days a week but for those of us who want to accomplish something of worth for our dissertation this is almost necessary but not quite.

At least one night a week, it would be a pleasure to have a "good" date. If we can afford to leave town to enjoy ourselves we can certainly afford staying here for our enjoyment.

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

In a recent brush with the administration, it was discovered that the dorms are to be Mr. Jack Hall's private kingdom as far as free expression is concerned. "Soliciting" in the dorms is construed to mean passing out any material (including all election literature) which has not been approved by Hall. It is obvious that spreading information which criticizes the administration would be extremely, if not completely, eliminated.

It is my opinion that this suppression of free press should not exist. Obviously, some rules must exist to keep hordes of people from the dorms, but registered organizations which wish only to inform cannot rightfully be suppressed.

I intend to test this violation of the national constitution by continuing to distribute information and opinion in our dormitories.

I shall hardly be surprised if I am arrested by the University while I am doing this. Most likely, then, I will be charged by the University, with "abusive" behavior; by the city, with "breach of peace;" and doesn't this sound familiar! This will be not only suppression of the dorm students' rights, but, further, terrorism directed at all students who dare think, "Change!"

Thom Pat Juul

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

I am appalled by the naive depiction by both Peter Sinclair and Jane Tiernan Blair in their statements in The Kernel of Nov. 14.

They would have us believe that their real concern is for the mass of people who might be affected by any usage of biological warfare when they obviously are intent on raising a hue and cry against the Army, Fort Detrick, et al.

Mr. Sinclair has used figures very effectively to back his own viewpoints, but like any statistician, he doesn't convey the whole picture, merely that part which enhances his own argument. For instance, he quotes the CBW budget at 117 million dollars but neglects to point out that this figure represents only two-tenths of one percent of the total defense budget!

Both writers would also have the reader believe that CBW research is wholly offensive when, in fact, much emphasis is placed on providing defense against the same micro-organisms which are, we may be sure, currently being developed in the Communist world.

It is unfortunate that biological warfare comes in the classification of those things about which we know so little, for man has always feared and derided precisely those things which are unknown to him. The truth about biological warfare is that it is a much more humane method of combat than that which is now in use, such as napalm, shrapnel and bullets.

If any soldier (or civilian) is subjected to a wound inflicted by any of the above, he may well be paralyzed with a severed spine, face partial or complete amputation or be concussed into a coma or catatonic state leaving him to exist on the level of a vegetable. If, on the other hand, he undergoes an attack by chemical or biological agents, he will either die (which would probably be preferable to the conditions described above) or he will recover completely. Which is more humane?

I would suggest that these two writers read Tomorrow's Weapons by J. H. Rothschild. It may give them a more informative background (and a less lop-sided one) on CBW.

I am reel glad to see that good ol' Cal Woodward is riting so many good letters to The Kernel and stickin up for all us good Christian folks what are anti-communist and would like to be over their killin a few vietcongs our own selves if we wasn't so busy studyin to be junior commercials and other good ol' American things.

But I think good ol' Cal is counter-dictin hisself when he complains about how their aint any toothpicks in the dorm cafeterias. If he wood think for a secund heed reelize that good Americans like him and me shouldn't want toothpicks their cuz toothpicks ain't food, Cal, toothpicks is somethin that folks use to keep they're teeth from gettin all rotted out.

Now if'n we was to put toothpicks in the cafeterias that would be nothin but SOCIALIZED MEDISINE, cuz we wood be helping folks keep they're teeth from rottin for free and then where wood all the dentists and doctors be that have spent so much money learnin all the ways how to be dentists and doctors.

Theyd be livin just like in a communist country, let me tell you, and the govermint down in Washington wood be tellin them what to do and keepin them from earnin a decent livin.

So Cal you keep on ritin them good ol' letters but you think about whats best for the good ol' U. S., and A.

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

In reference to the letter in The Kernel and to the same letter slipped under the door of my dorm room under the heading of the Student Association concerning terrorism on the UK campus by the administration.

I feel that the Student Association is acting in a very poor manner by referring to the administration's actions as an act of terrorism towards UK students. The four students arrested were informed that they were interfering with administrative activities and were asked to move. These four students were also told that if they did not move they would be dealt with by the police. They remained with the knowledge that they were obstructing administrative functions.

In reference to the fact that they were dealt with unfairly by the police and the administration they were informed that they were in the wrong and would be dealt with by the police. The Student Association also stated that there was a rumor that Mr. Jack Hall was unfair towards these four students; the Student Association contradicted itself by making it quite clear that this is untrue.

Mr. Hall apparently, according to the rumor, went out of his way to help these students by helping them in some manner so that their punishment was not so severe.

The Student Association also stated that if these four students were put under the jurisdiction of the University J-board that would be automatically expelled.

I wonder how they came to the decision of the J-board considering that these four students had not been subjected to its jurisdiction yet.

It should be remembered that the purpose of the college student is to acquire an education and the student's personal right to protest in a personal matter certainly not within the jurisdiction of the Student Association and only within the jurisdiction of the University.

If he is a University student and he is violating the student code and interfering with the rights of other students the student code should be used to protect student rights and can be interpreted by the University to the best interests of the majority of the students. But no matter how you look at it the rights of the Student Association certainly have not been violated.

Apparently the author of the Student Association's letter which was put under my door feels strongly about the demonstration; I wonder why he did not participate in it.

'Cats Out To Bite, Stick And Gore Gators

By GUY MENDES
Kernel Sports Editor

There are numerous pictures of the Florida Gators taped on the walls of the Wildcat lockerroom, but two of them stand out.

The pictures of Gator quarterback Larry Rentz and flanker Richard Trapp are particularly noticeable because written across each picture, in big red letter, are the words BITE, STICK, CORE.

Not that the Wildcats are planning any underhanded tactics for Saturday's encounter with the Gators—"We wouldn't do anything like that," said one big lineman with an innocent look on his face.

But the 'Cats are hungry. After losing their first six games of the season, UK has won two straight, and the taste of victory lingers sweetly on their lips.

But the Gators, led by Rentz and Trapp, are currently 5-2, with a 17-16 win over Georgia last week their most impressive victory.

The Wildcats will have trouble trying to butt, stick and gore Rentz, because the 6-2, 155-pound "Blade" to his teammates will be on the sidelines.

Rentz, who leads the Southeastern Conference in passing accuracy with 57 completions in 86 attempts for a 66.3 percentage, sprained an ankle in the Georgia game and coach Ray Graves has decided to start Harmon Wages in his place.

Wages was the starting quarterback during fall practice, but was injured in the first game and eventually was dropped to the second team for breaking curfew.

Butting, sticking and goring Trapp is another matter.

HARMON WAGES

As one Wildcat put it, "If we can catch him we might."

Trapp set an all-time SEC record last year with 63 receptions and has 44 so far this season, including nine for 171 yards against Georgia. He runs the 100-yard dash in 9.8 seconds in full equipment.

Pass Defense Third

But Trapp and Wages will be facing an improved UK pass defense. The 'Cats now rank third in the league in pass defense, giving up only 110.6 yards per game.

Florida also has a man named Larry Smith, and he could give the Wildcats a little trouble; he was a unanimous All-SEC choice last year after leading the conference in rushing.

As a team, the Gators are much like the Wildcats except for the respective records.

Just as UK has been, Florida has been beset by injuries. Five of the starting Gators had injuries that kept them out of the Georgia game. In his first two units, Graves starts 13 sophomores; UK uses about 12.

The 'Cats take the SEC's leading scorer into the contest at Gainesville. Dicky Lyons has totaled 54 points in eight games to lead Walter Chadwick of Tennessee and Dennis Homan of Alabama by six points.

Lyons also leads the league in kickoff returns and has the best punt return average.

Members of two dorm teams battle for a rebound in one of Thursday's 11 games in the Dorm and Independent leagues of intramural basketball.

Basketball Play Continues In IM

Six independent games and five dormitory games highlighted intramural basketball action Thursday night.

In the independent contests, the Mighty Mites For Intramural Competition won their third game of the season with a 50-27 romp over the Polaks. Billy Lile scored 16 points for MMFC.

The Unknowns defeated the Green Hornets 43-24, and the Trojans edged OCSA 1 by a 27-26 score.

The Dirty Dozen evened their record at 1-1 with a 45-40 win over Christian Student Fellowship.

The Turtles ran over ASME 45-31 while the Newman Club slipped past the YMCA 38-29.

In Dormitory League action, Haggin C-1 won its second game of the season with a 33-30 triumph over Haggin B-1.

Complex 1 and 2 evened its season record at 1-1 with a 31-27 win over Haggin C-3.

Tower A-D nipped Tower A-F 41-39, Donovan 2-F slipped past Haggin A-4 29-26 and Tower A-C won by forfeit over Tower A-G.

Hallowed tradition of "pinning" a girl is up-dated by
Sprite bottle caps.

According to an independent survey (we took it ourselves), a startling new practice is becoming widespread on some college campuses.

Suddenly, fraternity men are no longer "pinning" the lovely young things that catch their eye.

Instead, they reach for a bottle of tart, tingling Sprite--and proceed to "cap" the object of their affections.

Why has this come about? Perhaps because of what happens when you go through the ceremony of opening a bottle of Sprite. It fizzes! Roars! Buzzes! Tingles! Bubbles!

All of which makes for a much more moving moment than to simply "pin" a girl.

Then, too, the intimacy of two people engaged in the act of opening a bottle of Sprite in itself leads to strong emotional involvement.

Capped off, of course, by the sharing of a few moments of delicious abandon. (Tasting the tingling tartness of Sprite, that is.)

The beauty of the idea is that if the course of true love does not run smooth, you don't have to go to the trouble of getting back your pin.

You just buy another bottle of Sprite.

UK Negroes Tell What It Is To Be Black

He Disagrees

Ellis was more hopeful: "Maybe I'm naive. I like it here. I've let it be a challenge. "I'm a corridor adviser," he added, "and every chance my kids get, you know, they throw up this race question. Some civil rights problem. But the thing is, I'm crazy about the bull sessions we have. Sometimes we get things going. I tell them what I feel, and they tell me.

"I got involved," Ellis said. "That's the difference. People know I'm a Negro, I guess, but I don't think that's No. 1 with most of them. I've taken what I can here, and I like what I can take."

Both Elaine and Ellis, however, suspect there is some faculty prejudice against Negro students. Elaine told of Negroes whom "teachers refused to call on, even though they held up their hands repeatedly."

Ellis told of "a guy I know who wrote a theme on what it is to be black. He got an F out of it, you know." Ellis, who has written for the Louisville Courier-Journal as an intern, said he "read the thing, and it sounded pretty good to me."

On Housing

Another complaint is housing. "A lot of girls have found that in the dorms they are roomed with other Negroes," Elaine said. "Or if some Negro was to room with a white, the permission was asked of the white girl.

"This girlfriend of mine roomed with a white girl," she recalled. "A lot of the people up and down the hall didn't like it, and they did things like beat on the door and the wall and they tore down little signs they had on their door."

Ellis had his own story: "When I came here, I got a list of a dozen places that the housing office said were unrented. I went to 11 of them, and they told me they had rented. I got a white girl to go back and check behind me, and the landlords told her, 'Sure, I've got a place; you want to rent it?'"

Got 'A Hole'

"We finally got a place that was a hole, and we had to pay $135 a month for three of us. Two white kids down the hall were paying $110 for two bedrooms. We had one bedroom.

"One of our guys," Ellis continued, "applied in August to live in a house in a white neighborhood. There was a man sitting across the street who called out at him, 'No niggahs can live on this street, boy.'"

"But mostly you get the coy ones. They say, 'I'm sorry, but this one's rented.' Then you see the rent sign is still in the window. You find out that somebody rents the place a day or two later."

No Negroes live in white fraternities or sororities, but Elaine and Ellis say it is not because no Negroes are interested.

'I Tried'

"I know a lot of sorority girls," Elaine said, "and I talked to some of them about joining. They told me it wouldn't be good to try. They said, 'I wouldn't say anything, but all my sisters would. My sisters wouldn't go along with that at all.'"

Ellis added he knows of several Negroes interested in joining fraternities, but "Vice President (Robert L.) Johnson has told us that to rush effectively, we're going to have to have a lot of outstanding Negroes. Then, if they're not accepted, the University can say, 'How come out of all these, one or two didn't make it?'"

The Greeks offer other problems.

"We sit together at football games," Ellis said, "and the Kappa Alphas sit behind us. They yell things sometimes, 'Glory, Glory Segregation,' you know, and they hit hard on the word 'darkies' when they sing 'My Old Kentucky Home.' But, man, that's always happened here. That always has."

If their Janus-faced role as students and as Negroes seems ridiculous, Elaine, Ellis, Orgena, the Campus Committee on Human Rights and a few white liberals are working to alter the situation.

Protests 'Open'

Neither Elaine nor Ellis rules out formal protests and demonstrations as a means of getting what they want at UK, though Ellis says attempts to "talk" should be used first.

In the works is a Negro history course—despite what Ellis calls the History Department's reluctance to cooperate. Hopefully, Elaine says, such a course would help bridge the chasm that exists between white and black at UK.

Orgena and its sympathizers also are at work to recruit not only Negro athletes, but ordinary Negro students as well. "Coffeeshouse" discussions are under way with Lexington high school Negro students to interest some of them in coming here. To involve itself more directly with the white campus, Orgena will participate in the Hanging of the Greens next month.

It will be a long struggle, and there is no guarantee that the paradox of being black at UK ever will be obliterated. But Ellis and Elaine, at least, are willing to struggle.

I won't go into business when I graduate because:

- a. I'd lose my individuality.
- b. It's graduate school for me.
- c. My mother wants me to be a doctor.

Can't argue with c), but before you check a) or b)—pencils up! There have been some changes. Drastic changes in the business scene. But changes in the vox populi attitude regarding business... especially on campus... just haven't kept pace.

Take the belabored point that business turns you into a jellyfish. The men who most of the nation's successful firms didn't arrive by nepotism, by trusting an Ouija board, or by agreeing with their bosses. Along the way, a well-modulated "No" was said. And backed up with the savvy and guts today's business demands.

In short, individuality is highly prized in much of the business world—the successful much. Even when the business is big. Like Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System.

We provide communications equipment for our Bell System teammates, the Bell telephone companies. This takes a lot of thought, decisions, strong stands for our convictions, (and sometimes some mistakes... we're human every 160,000 of us).

Individuality pays off. Not only in raises, but in personal reward as well. Like an engineer who knew deep down that there was a better way to make a certain wire connector—and did. Or a WE gal who streamlined time-consuming office procedures, and saved us some $63,000 a year.

Rewards and accolades. For saying "No." For thinking creatively and individually. For doing.

Not every hour is Fun Hour, but if you've got imagination and individuality—you've got it made. With a business like Western Electric. We'll even help you answer b) with our Tuition Refund program. Come on in and go for President!

FOOTBALL FOR SHUT-INS

At next Saturday's football game while you are sitting in your choice student's seat behind the end zone, won't you pause and give a thought to football's greatest and, alas, most neglected name? I refer, of course, to Champert Sigafoos.

Champert Sigafoos (1714-1928) started life humbly on a farm near Thud, Kansas. His mother and father, both named Walter, were bean-gleaners, and Champert became a bean-gleaner too. But he tired of the work and went to Montana where he got a job with a logging firm. Here the erstwhile bean-gleaner worked as a stump-thumper. After a month he went to North Dakota where he tended the furnace in a granary (wheat-heater). Then he drifted to Texas where he tidied up oil fields (pipe-wiper). Then to Arizona where he strung dried fruit (fig-rigger). Then to Kentucky where he fed horses at a breeding farm (oat-toter). Then to Long Island where he dressed poultry (duck-plucker). Then to Alaska where he drove a delivery van for a bakery (bread-sledder). Then to Minnesota where he cut up frozen lakes (ice-slicer). Then to Nevada where he determined the odds in a gambling house (dice-pricer). Then to Milwaukee where he pasted camera lenses together (Zeiss-splicer).

Finally he went to Omaha where he got a job in a tannery, beating pig hides until they were soft and supple (hog-flogger). Here occurred the event that changed not only Champert's life, but all of ours.

Next door to Champert's hog-flogger was a mooring mast for dirigibles. In flew a dirigible one day, piloted by a girl named Graffa von Zeppelin. Champert watched Graffa descend from the dirigible, and his heart turned over, and he knew love. Though Graffa's beauty was not quite perfect—one of her legs was shorter than the other (blimp-gimper)—she was nonetheless ravishing, what with her tawny hair and her eyes of Lake Louise blue and her marvelously articulated haunches. Champert, smitten, ran quickly back to the hog-flogger to plan the wooing.

To begin with, naturally, he would give Graffa a present. This presented problems, for hog-flogging, as we all know, is a signally underpaid profession. Still, thought Champert, if he had no money, there were two things he did have: ingenuity and pigskin.

So he selected several high grade pelts and stitched them together and blew air into them and made for Graffa a perfectly darling little replica of a dirigible. "She will love this," said he confidently to himself and proceeded to make ready to call on Graffa.

First, of course, he shaved with Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades. And wouldn't you? If you were looking to impress a girl, if you wanted jowls as smooth as ivory, dewlaps like damask, a chin strokable, cheeks fondlesome, upper lip kissable, would you not use the blade that whisks away whiskers quickly and slickly, tuglessly and nicklessly, scratchlessly and matchlessly? Would you not, in short, those Personna, available both in Injector style and double-edge style? Of course you would.

So Champert, his face a study in epidermal elegance, rushed next door with his little pigskin dirigible. But Graffa, alas, had run off, alas, with a bush pilot who specialized in dropping limes to scurvy-ridden Eskimo villages (fruit-chuter).

Champert, enraged, started kicking his little pigskin blimp all over the place. And who should walk by just then but Jim Thorpe, Knute Rockne, Walter Camp, and Pete Rozelle!

They walked silently, heads down, four discouraged men. For weeks they had been trying to invent football, but they couldn't seem to find the right kind of ball. They tried everything—hockey pucks, badminton birds, bowling balls, quoits—but nothing worked. Now seeing Champert kicking his pigskin spheroid, their faces lit up and as one man they hollered "Eureka!" The rest is history.

Speaking of kicks, if you've got any about your present shave cream, try Burma-Shave, regular or menthol.

SG Will Study Campus Life

Student Government Thursday night formed eight committees to look into various aspects of campus life.

Committees were established to:

- Investigate the establishment of a program whereby students could take electives aside from their major and degree requirements on a pass-fail basis.

- Draft a statement of student academic rights for approval of the assembly.

- Investigate the "role" of the part-time student.

- Investigate the possibility of keeping the Student Center open until midnight during the week. It now closes at 10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and 11:30 p.m. on Sunday nights.

- Work out the details of initiating a series of informal meetings between SG representatives, faculty and administration.

- Recommend to the assembly changes in the bylaws of Student Government to correspond with the new reapportionment bill.

- Continue work on faculty evaluation.

- Determine bulletin board and publicity policy concerning campus-wide elections.

- The assembly also passed a bill tabling last week granting OCSA $175 to conduct a study of off-campus housing. The study will be supervised by a three Student Government members.
