They Have Earned Their "L" For Loyalty

Kentucky alumni contributed a little better than $4,000 to the Loyalty Fund last year. At the same time much smaller schools were contributing five or more times as much.

There is no lack of loyalty among UK alumni, but there is a lack of interest in the Alumni Association's worthiest project. Let's make 1954-'55 a banner year in "giving." Let's each one of us give a little and make a lot of difference in the over-all total for the year.

BLADES OF BLUEGRASS

by

Boyd Keenan

If you're a Kentuckian who likes to read—especially those stories of your own state—you're apt to be interested in something which happened on Oct. 15 at the University of Kentucky.

On that date, the University of Kentucky Press published its "Kentucky Story," a collection of 15 short stories, edited by Dr. Hollis Summers, Kentucky writer and member of the UK Department of English.

Since the chief function of a university press is to publish works which contribute significantly to knowledge and culture, many of the books issued by the UK Press necessarily are of a scholarly nature and aren't of general interest to the average Kentuckian throughout the state.

However, "Kentucky Story" is a work likely to capture the interest of all story lovers in this area who examine it. Almost 70 years of Kentucky writing, beginning with James Lane Allen's "King Solomon of Kentucky," first published in 1891, are represented.

Is there a Kentuckian anywhere who would not thrill again to the words of "King Solomon of Kentucky?" Remember some of the opening sentences?

"Yes, the summer of 1833 was at hand and there must be new pleasures, new luxuries; for Lexington was the Athens of the West and the Kentucky Birmingham . . . (and later on) it was the coronation scene in the life of old King Solomon of Kentucky."

As almost any Eastern Kentuckian can tell you, a Kentucky anthology wouldn't be complete without a yarn by John Fox Jr. His story in this volume is "Courtin' on Cutshin." It opens this way:

"Hit was this way stranger. When hit comes to handlin' a right peert gal, Jeb Somers air about the porest man on Fryin' Pan, I reckon, and Polly Ann Sturgill have got the vineg'rest tongue on Cutshin or any other crick."

Another writer selected as a contributor to the anthology was Alice Hegan Rice. Don't you recall how

Voice Of The Class Tree 1904

(Editor's note: The following poem was written by James H. Gardner, '04, after he returned to the campus last June for the 50th reunion of his class.)

Once, long ago, on a mountain crest

At a temple-site that Moses found

*A flaming bush with glory blest
Was heard to name it "holy ground."*

Beneath these widened bowers spread

We gather here and list' to muse

*To hear your whispered voice,
o' rhead,*

Say to us, "Take off your shoes."

Fifty years have passed and flown

And all the while your stature grew;

We have long in wisdom grown

And ours was your "commencement" too.

You stand on charming campus there,

And may you have long length of days;

Grow on, through weather rough and fair,

A symbol of lives and student days.

Through all the time when, far away,

Our class has often thought of thee

*Abiding love we bring today
To you, our lovely maple tree.*

Amanda lifted the spell in the story,
"Hoodooed," with this chant:

"Draw, draw, 'cordin' to the law,
Lif' the hoodoo, now I beg,
An draw the cricket
F'om this heah leg!"

10 Members Of '04 Team Honored At Halftime, Sept. 18

By JOE REISTER, '34,
Courier Journal Staff Writer

Members of the 1904 University of Kentucky football team really lived it up at their 50th reunion on Sept. 18.

During a luncheon in the Student Union Building—held in connection with their first reunion since the good old days—the '04 boys began spinning mirth-provoking yarns about their gridiron experiences 50 years ago.

They continued cracking each other on the back and telling the stories as they took seats of honor along the Kentucky sideline for the Wildcats' tussle with Maryland.

They got the surprise of their lives during the half-time intermission when UK Director of Athletics Bernie Shively called them onto the field.

Each member of the '04 club present at the game was presented a Kentucky Colonel's commission, signed, sealed and presented personally by Gov. Lawrence Wetherby.

Receive 'K' Blankets

Some of the oldsters' eyes were glazed a bit as each was presented a "K" blanket by the K Club at the university. Billy Evans, Berea, president of the club composed of lettermen in all major UK sports, made the presentation.

The 10 members of the '04 squad accepting the commissions and blankets today were:

Col. B. E. Brewer, Lexington; T. W. Beard, Louisville; Fred Coit "Pete" Mahan, Frankfort; Hugh Wood, Louisville; W. H. Grady, Louisville; J. Waller Rodes, Lexington; Presley Atkins, Norton, Va.;

Walter McKinney, McKinney, Ky.; Maj. Don P. Branson, Columbus, Ohio, and V. D. Roberts, Somerset. J. C. Nisbet, Madisonville, manager of the '04 team, was unable to be present today. His commission and blanket will be sent him, UK officials said.

Brewer Story Related

The old timers didn't have too many opportunities to tell stories during the game itself. They were too busy watching the 1954 edition of the 'Cats and breathing silent prayers that the blue and white gridders would truck on down the field in the direction of the Maryland goal-line.

At the luncheon, however, stories flew thick and fast.

There were hearty chuckles on all sides as Colonel Brewer, one of the mainstays of the '04 outfit, came in for a lot of ribbing about an incident that occurred in the rough-and-tumble game with Cincinnati 50 years ago.

Incidentally, the '04 Cats had a corking good club. They won 9 games and lost one—the sole loss being to Cincinnati by a 0-11 count.

The humorous incident involving Colonel Brewer and the Cincinnati player unfolded like this:

Brewer played either guard or tackle for the 'Cats. Soon after the game with Cincinnati got under way, Brewer and his opponent across the line "took a violent dislike to each other," as one of the oldsters put it. Soon the Kentucky lineman and his Cincinnati counterpart were cracking each other rather lustily in the big pile-ups which invariably occurred after each play in those days.

After warning both players several times, one of the officials waved Brewer and the Cincinnati player out of the game. Both boys mixed it up but good on the sidelines after being ejected, members of the team recalled.

After returning home Brewer's father called him to task for indulging in the fisticuffs during the Cincinnati game.

Colonel Brewer himself stepped in at this point and filled in details of what his father said to him. It ran like this:

"Son, why did you get into that slugging match with your opponent in the Cincinnati game?"

"Well," Brewer replied, "I just didn't like his looks, that's all."

Was First Cousin

"That player you fought with, my boy, was your first cousin, George Young."

Deceased members of the '04 squad include J. White Guyn, former Lexington city engineer; Joe Coons, Mt. Sterling; S. C. "Red" Montgomery, of Western Kentucky; C. W. Haynes, Louisville, and Priest Kemper, Mt. Sterling.

HOW CAN WE HOLD OUR PROFESSORS?

President Donovan

The graduates of the University of Kentucky have a deep and abiding interest in its future. I know this to be a fact from many contacts with our alumni and the thousands of letters which I receive during the year in which they express their interest. They tell me that they want to know the University's problems and how they can help in the solution of them.

In this report I desire to make you acquainted with a problem which I fear is extremely serious regarding the University's future. From careful analysis of our population trends by experts in this field we know that within another decade there will be approximately a million more young men and women in the colleges and universities of this country than at present. This will mean that the University of Kentucky will have an enrollment between 8,000 and 10,000 by 1965 and it could be larger if we had the facilities to take care of all of the Kentucky youths who wish to enroll in our institution.

This anticipated increase in attendance creates a number of problems such as how can we expand our living quarters to accommodate the new students, and how can we provide classrooms, laboratory and library facilities for 3,000 or 4,000 more students than we have at present. However, the most important problem, which is often not recognized by the public, is how can we provide a staff of competent teachers of the quality a university must have if it is to educate young people at the college level. There is today a shortage of first class young men and women to fill vacancies in colleges and universities. Because of the low salaries paid teachers as compared with the earnings of doctors, engineers, lawyers, bankers, business executives, et cetera, teaching does not attract as many of the first class minds as it should. Unless college youth can have teachers of ability there is little value in his attending college. The mediocre teacher can neither instruct, inspire nor motivate the youth who may be compelled to sit in his classes.

Kentucky's salary scale is not high enough to attract to its faculty and hold young men and women who possess outstanding abilities. Attractive, well educated, capable young instructors may come to us from the best universities of this country, but if we fail to promote them after two, three or four years other universities will induce them to leave for better salaries which the University of Kentucky is unable to match.

The University of Kentucky has frequently been referred to as a training school for faculty members for other institutions of higher education where the salary range is from $500 to $1,000 per year more than we can pay our teachers.

Recently I had a study made to find out how many teachers the University has lost to other institutions of higher education during the thirteen years I have served as President of this institution. Although I was aware that we had lost many valuable teachers, I was surprised at the extent of this loss. During this period the University of Kentucky has lost 260 teachers of professorial rank. This number would staff a good sized college or university. We can be assured that those who left us to accept better salaries in other institutions of learning were selected for their high achievements in teaching and research. They represented personnel the University could ill afford to lose. The universities that secured their services are richer while the University of Kentucky is the poorer. Their loss has been nothing short of a calamity for the University of Kentucky. It is poor economy for our state to let these selected, trained and proven teachers get away when a few hundred dollars would have kept them here.

With the flood of students who will be entering our colleges and universities in numbers we have never had before, the competition for college instructors will be so great that the institutions that have poor salary scales may be forced to employ the less fit and even the mediocre teachers. The college boys and girls who must rely upon such teachers for guidance cannot possibly secure a good quality of education. The loss to them individually and the collective loss to Kentucky is inestimable. The most expensive teacher a college or university employs is the poor teacher with little talent for instructing the youth. Why should a state waste its money on the education of young men and women by employing teachers of little ability? No business could survive if its personnel was mediocre. Business recognizes this fact and selects its employees with great care. Its personnel directors are constantly contacting the colleges and universities seeking the best talent available anywhere in the nation. A college or university must desire the same quality and it must be provided with funds sufficient to meet the competition of similar institutions in order to get its fair share of capable professors and research workers.

I say frankly to you, our alumni, that the major problem the University faces is to secure from the Governor and the General Assembly an appropriation sufficient to enable the University to hold the best professors it now has on its staff and to employ talented, well educated and inspiring young teachers when a larger staff must be provided for the increased

Guy A. Huguelet

Plans To Retire Within Next Year Are Announced

Guy A. Huguelet, LL.B. '14, a pioneer in the field of bus transportation in the south, one of the University's most distinguished alumni and a prominent Lexington business and civic leader, announced last September that he plans to retire as chairman of the new Southeastern Greyhound Lines "sometime late in 1955."

Prior to his announcement, the president of the Greyhound Corporation had announced the merger of three divisions of the corporation, operating bus lines throughout 12 southeastern states, with Mr. Huguelet, president of the former Southeastern division as chairman of the board of the new system.

Under Mr. Huguelet's guidance, what is now Southeastern Greyhound grew from six "stretched out" sedan automobiles in Lexington, 32 years ago, to the world's largest intercity bus line.

Southeastern Greyhound, at the time of the merger, employed about 450 people in Lexington, with an annual payroll of approximately $2,000,000. The merger brought about an increase of number of employees and a proportionate increase in payroll. Southeastern Greyhound is the first business developed in Lexington to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Mr. Huguelet is a native of Charleston, S. C., and was educated in public and private schools in Charleston and at the University of Kentucky. Besides innumerable affiliations with Lexington and Kentucky business, civic and professional groups he has served his Alma Mater ceaselessly and well as a member of its Board of Trustees, chairman of the executive committee of that board; a member of the Kentucky Research Foundation; a director of the UK Athletics Association; and a member of the executive committee of the Alumni Association.

UK Given $28,000 Contract By Army

The University of Kentucky's department of bacteriology has been selected by the U. S. Army to conduct a $28,000 research project on the identification of micro-organisms.

Announcement of the contract has been made by Dr. R. H. Weaver, professor of bacteriology, who will direct the project, and Dr. Merl Baker, director of the Kentucky Research Foundation at UK.

Formal confirmation of the grant came from the Chemical Corps Biological Laboratories at Camp Detrick, Frederick, Md.

The project is being administered by the Kentucky Research Foundation through the department of bacteriology.

The contract, as described by Dr. Weaver, calls for two years of research on the problem of "Development and Evaluation of Rapid Biochemical Techniques of Value in the Identification of Micro-Organisms."

Dr. Harry Best Gets Medal For Contribution To Blind

The 1954 Migel Medal for "outstanding contributions to the blind in America," given annually by the American Foundation for the Blind, was presented to Dr. Harry Best, emeritus professor of sociology at UK, at a ceremony held October 21 in New York City.

A citation, accompanying the announcement of the award, commended the UK educator for "unselfish and exhaustive labor to produce the outstanding history of work for the blind, 'Blindness and the Blind in the United States.'" It was on the merit of this book that Dr. Best was chosen to receive the medal.

Dr. Helen Keller, internationally known deaf and blind writer and educator presented the medal.

In 1951, Dr. Best assumed a change-of-work status at the University. At that time he was relieved of active teaching duties.

When Dr. Best retired, a group of his fellow faculty members and other friends contributed more than $200 to be given in his name to Gallaudet College for the Deaf, Washington, D. C. College authorities used the money to buy books as a tribute to Dr. Best's interests in the institution.

Dr. Best has been professor of sociology at UK since 1919. He was made head of the department of sociology in 1925 and a member of the graduate faculty in 1941. Before coming to Kentucky he taught in Nebraska, the state of Washington, Alabama schools for the deaf and the New York Institution for Instruction of Deaf and Dumb. He also served as a resident worker at the University Settlement in New York City.

In addition to the book responsible for the award Dr. Best has written three other books. In 1932 he was an honored guest of the American Association of Instructors of the Blind at its convention in New York, marking the 100th anniversary of work for the blind in the U. S. He holds an honorary degree from Centre College.

Review Of "Heat Transmission"

by

WILLIAM H. McADAMS
B.S. '13, M.S. '14, D.Sc. '45

Third Edition, 532 pp., McGraw-Hill Book Company, $8.50

(Editor's note: Dr. William H. McAdams was born at Cynthiana, Ky., received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from UK and in 1945 had the honorary degree of Doctor of Science conferred on him by his Alma Mater. He also holds the M.S. degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. McAdams served as an assistant professor of chemical engineering at M.I.T. from 1919 to 1927, and professor since 1927. He is one of the world's living authorities in the field of heat transfer.)

This excellent book on heat transmission has been written to serve both as a text for students and as a reference for practicing engineers. There are four new chapters in the third edition. In expanding the text, a great deal of new material has been added, including recent data and additional references.

As stated by the author, the purpose of the third edition is to bring the previous text up to date by a thorough discussion of new developments in heat transfer. The material in the second edition which is not new has nevertheless been critically reviewed and modified where necessary, in order to present a concise, unified treatment of heat transmission.

The chapter on radiation was nearly doubled, thereby providing space for a discussion of view and F-factors, gray and non-gray enclosures, radiation from gases and clouds of particles, combustion and billet-reheating furnaces, and petroleum heaters. Elsewhere in the text, heat transfer by the use of molten salts was briefly considered.

The treatment of graphical and numerical solution of transient heat conduction was extended to include methods of Binder, Schmidt, and Dusinberre. Two-dimensional steady heat conduction problems were solved by the relaxation method. A discussion of the analogies between the transfer of heat, mass, and momentum was considered.

The application of the theory is illustrated by the solution of a large number of illustrative examples. Many

Library Now Ranks 4th In Southeast

With holdings now totaling 740 volumes, the University Library has forged ahead of all but three university libraries in the southeastern region, which includes 10 states, according to a recent announcement from Dr. Lawrence S. Thompson, UK director of libraries.

"We are now ahead of Vanderbilt, and at the present rate of growth we can well be in third place before the end of another year," Dr. Thompson said. As of October 1, the rank of university libraries in the southeastern region was Duke, Virginia, North Carolina and Kentucky.

States included in the region are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

"Maybe Kentucky didn't manage to win the Southeastern Conference football championship last year, but we did win it in libraries," Dr. Thompson pointed out. "The continuing growth of the collections at a faster rate than in most universities in our general class is one of the most striking characteristics of the University of Kentucky libraries."

"During the last year we were unusually fortunate when the Court of Appeals decided to turn over to us the old miscellaneous collections of the State Library. This substantial accretion will hold up our acquisition rate for a year or so," said the UK librarian.

Dr. Thompson said acknowledgments to the University of Kentucky libraries and staff appeared in the preface of 26 books, including a best-seller novel, published during the past year.

"Alumni of the University can be of tremendous help to the libraries in seeking out and soliciting collections and individual books for the institution," said Dr. Thompson.

He also pointed out that the University libraries maintains a separate file of books and reprints of articles by UK alumni, and the staff welcomes additional contributions to these files.

Vito Parilli, '53, of Rochester, Pa., the "Sweet Kentucky Babe" of Wildcat football, has been traded by the Green Bay Packers, professional football team to the Cleveland Browns.

The Browns, planning at least one season ahead, traded away quarterback Bob Garrett and obtained Parilli in a six-player deal with the Packers.

Garrett, Stanford's star quarterback last year and the Brown's bonus draft choice, is expected to play this season before starting a probable two years of military service. Parilli, who played with the Packers in 1952 and 1953 is in the Air Force now and may not be available until the '56 season.

The Babe, Kentucky's all-time great quarterback and All-America, passed and sparked the Wildcats to outstanding victories in the Sugar and Cotton Bowls in his last two years of varsity competition.

Martin Dyche, publisher of the London, Ky., Sentinel-Echo, recently won the first prize in a monthly editorial contest sponsored by the American Press, a national circulated independent magazine for home town newspapers.

Sometime ago Mr. Dyche was asked to take part in a written discussion on the question: "What are the most important benefits you derive from membership in state and national press associations?" Mr. Dyche wrote his answer in the form of an editorial which won the grand prize.

The plaque was unveiled by President Herman Lee Donovan, and Dr. Frank J. Welch, dean of the college said, in a speech to the visitors, that the University will further expand and intensify its program of research and education for western Kentucky.

Great Coaching, Fine Spirit, Pay Off In Cats Mid-Season Grid Record

A few days before the Kentucky Wildcats opened their 64th year of football competition last September, new Head Coach Blanton Collier made a prophetic pledge to the effect that "we may be only a 50-50 team this year, capable of winning only three or four games, as many people would have you believe. But I'll tell you one thing—our opponents are going to have to prove it on the field every Saturday."

Such defiance of the traditional tendency of grid mentors to resort to the "crying towel" when viewing prospects for the season was refreshing to Kentucky alumni and followers, but not even the most optimistic could foresee even the 50-50 season for the youthful, inexperienced and graduation-depleted Wildcats. And not a voice was raised that suggested confidence in the remote possibility that Coach Collier's first team would reach its 50-50 mark by mid season at the expense of competition admittedly the toughest in Dixie.

Kentucky's schedule, which was not of their new mentor's doing, had been voted the most difficult slate in the Southeastern Conference by coaches of the league and the squad inherited by the Cats' new chief was viewed discouragingly as about equal to the '53 team minus 20 standout performers, including hard-to-replace men like All-Americans Steve Meilinger and Ray Correll, underrated fullback Ralph Paolone and halfback Dick Shatto.

However, Coach Collier stepped into the breach with his eyes wide open and put his pet philosophy to work: "I've never gone into a football game yet thinking we didn't have a chance to win. I realize we don't belong on the same field with many of the teams on our schedule, but there's always the chance that somebody might slip and when they do we are going to be there waiting—I hope!"

The record compiled by Collier's crew during the front half of their back-breaking schedule stands as a tribute to the determination of the coach and a wonderful attitude on the part of a great bunch of kids who refused to believe that they were not "the best darn football team to come down the pike."

The full impact of Kentucky's mid-season record does not begin to make itself evident with a simple review of the scores. Actually, as most opponent coaches and impartial press-radio observers point out, the record could easily be five wins against a lone defeat instead of the 3-3 tally shown by the scores. With just a little more luck, a few more breaks and less mistakes, the Wildcats might easily have vaulted like a prize darkhorse into the bowl picture.

Appropriately, in the sense that the opposition symbolized the difficult schedule that lay ahead, Kentucky opened the 1954 campaign by meeting powerful Maryland, the defending national champions who had visions of continuing their gridiron prominence and landing another New Year's Day bowl date. The cocky Terps fashioned a 20-0 victory over the Colliermen, but the experts said "Forget the score. It is most misleading." And it was! Never had a seemingly-sound licking stirred up so much optimism in followers of the defeated team.

Utilizing a potent mixture of pro savvy provided by their coach and some good old college try added by themselves, the upstart Wildcats pushed Maryland all over the field that opening day only to see their scoring marches stopped, mostly by their own miscues, repeatedly deep in Terrapin territory.

Next on the "suicide slate" came powerful Ole Miss, whom many people tended to underrate because of the softness of their schedule. However, when the Cats came away from Memphis, where the game was played as the nightcap contest on a unique doubleheader grid program, one and all were convinced that Mississippi not only deserved to win—perhaps not by such a convincing margin as 28-9—but ranked as one of the country's top elevens. Reviewing his team's showing a few weeks later, Coach Collier opined that Mississippi was the one team that UK had no business on the same field with although the Wildcats conceded ground grudgingly and showed flashes of offensive power themselves.

Returning to home ground, Kentucky found itself in the same position as their '53 predecessors—losers of two games and facing a tough SEC outfit in the quest to begin a comeback. With a hard-fought, mistake-marred, 7-6 victory over the fired-up Bayou Bengals from Louisiana State, the Cats equalled the feat of the 1953 Kentucky squad in breaking off their losing streak at two games.

When Auburn's Plainsmen rolled into town to renew relations in the Bluegrass State, hope ran high in the Kentucky camp for continuance of the comeback string but there also was the sobering realization that many had picked Auburn as perhaps the toughest team in the conference before the season opened. Again, however, the youthful Wildcats paid no attention to reputation of the opposition and proceeded to upset the Plainsmen, 21-14, and gain SEC "Team of the Week" honors on the basis of their stellar showing.

Florida came next and the Gators were just as upset-minded as the visiting Kentuckians. Proving themselves superior to the extent that they made less mistakes in an erratic contest, the Sunshine State crew annexed a surprisingly-easy 21-7 win. Inability of the Wildcats to adequately defense the Gator attack plus bogging down of their own offense after scoring first proved Kentucky's downfall in the tilt marred by errors. Most partial Kentuckians also could see the unsatisfactory result as directly attributed to the fact that the Wildcats simply ran out of emotional gas after being "up" for four straight encounters against major opposition.

But if the Cats were "down" for Florida, they bounced back rapidly and were sky high the next weekend for the crucial tilt with powerful Georgia Tech which climaxed the most difficult front-half schedule in the nation. Sparked by sensational individual performances by quarterback Bob Hardy (who won SEC "Player of the Week" honors following the game) and end Bradley Mills, the inspired Wildcats rolled over the heavily-favored Engineers without regard to the fact that Tech had been tabbed the team most likely to succeed in the SEC championship race. Again the score, 13-6, hardly reflected the actual calibre of Kentucky's almost-flawless play and even Tech Coach Bobby Dodd offered the opinion later that "if we played it over, I doubt we could do any better. This Kentucky team gave us our worst beating of the season. They played well against Maryland, Ole Miss and Florida and with good breaks could have won all three games. Where we got the idea we could handle them, I don't know. Give credit where credit is due. Blanton Collier had his team ready."

And that was the score at mid-season. Blanton Collier had his team ready and was getting a lot more mileage out of the woefully-shallow ball club than many people had thought possible. There were some very good individual performances, but the coach himself saw it as a great team effort.

UK Basketeers Prepare For New Season

By KEN KUHN
Sports Publicity Editor

In the past two decades, Baron Adolph Rupp's University of Kentucky cagers have forged to the forefront in the national basketball picture as no other team in any sport has ever done.

Not only have the Bluegrass Wildcats posted an astounding winning average of better than 85 percent against major competition and carried off the national championship five times, the 1953-54 edition shattered all records in becoming the biggest-winning perfect-record team of all time with 25 consecutive victories.

Further, the Ruppmen of last season were acclaimed national champions by every poll despite the fact that they declined to participate in the NCAA's post-season tournament—marking the first time a team had been so recognized. Justifying the selection as indisputable was the fact that the Kentuckians boasted a convincing win over LaSalle, the team that later won the NCAA tournament title.

However, all of the fantastic success of the past is history. The burning question again is: "Can the Wildcat basketball team continue its monopoly during the forthcoming 1954-55 campaign without its big guns?"

For the first time in the memory of many followers of Kentucky cage doings, Coach Rupp enters a season without an established offensive star in the fold to mould his racehorse-style fast break around. The "Big Three" of last season—All-Americans Cliff Hagan and Frank Ramsey and honorable mention All-America choice Lou Tsioropoulos—are among the missing and they were the "good right arm" of the club as they accounted for better than 80 percent of the scoring, rebounding and leadership.

The returnees include two seniors, seven juniors and six sophomores, but only Captain-elect Bill Evans was a regular throughout last season and none of the holdovers has a reputation of any extent as a top scoring threat in sharp contrast to recent years when there always seemed to be at least one around despite heavy losses. When the "Fabulous Five" of 1948 Olympic Games fame departed, sky-scraping pivotman Bill Spivey was around to take up the scoring slack. When Big Bill was sidelined by intimations of wrong doing during the scandal investigations, there was the sensational Hagan putting in his bid.

The job of filling the shoes of stars the calibre of Hagan, Ramsey and Tsioropoulos seems to add up to the biggest rebuilding job ever to face the veteran "Man in the Brown Suit."

Evans, the only consistent regular remaining, gained his reputation more on the outstanding nature of his defensive play than on his scoring efforts. He consistently drew the assignment of guarding the opponent's leading offensive star and was so successful that many observers called him the "best floor man in the country." The club's other senior, guard Gayle Rose, saw a lot of action during the last campaign but was beaten out for a starting assignment after mid-season by Linville Puckett, now a junior. Among the other third-year men available for duty, the standouts appear to be 6-7 forward-center Phil Grawmeyer, who was a starter in several games in mid-season, and 6-6 forward-center Jerry Bird, who was sidelined virtually all season with a chest ailment.

One of the potentially bright new stars is 6-7 Bob Burrow, a junior college transfer from Texas who was the sensation of the year in junior college ball. Twice a junior college All-American and player of the year last season, Burrow is expected to be given a try at the pivot spot vacated by Hagan and could lend a lot of help to an otherwise inexperienced lineup if he can come through.

Other juniors who will be making their bid for more extensive duty this season include Bill Bibb, a 6-4 forward who seemed to be coming fast at the end of last season; Harold Hurst, 6-7 center; Dan Chandler, 5-11 guard; and Charles Hadden, a guard back after a year's layoff.

The sophomore contingent, six top performers brought up from the outstanding '54 freshman team, could be the key to the Wildcats' success this season if they can provide backstopping depth strength. Heading the group of talented youngsters as the prospect with the best chance of breaking into the starting lineup is Ray Mills, a six-four pivotman who likely will be switched to forward where the Wildcats are hurting most. He led the undefeated frosh in scoring with an 18.3 average in six games. Among the others, Coach Rupp is looking for considerable help from Earl Adkins and John Brewer, both 6-3 and experienced at guard and forward respectively. It was this duo that Rupp considered bringing up to the varsity at one stage of last season when several top reserves were lost to the team. Rounding out the group are Gerry Calvert, 5-11 guard; Sonny Corum, 5-10 guard; and 6-3 guard Logan Gipe.

With the personnel available limited in experience and the losses greatest suffered by any team in the country, Coach Rupp foresees a big rebuilding job ahead this season. "We can't possibly be as strong this winter as we were last year," he declared. "I doubt that we will ever be that good again and probably nobody else will be either. That was my idea of an ideal team in every respect. We had a great first team, plus enough reserve power to carry on when we needed to make substitutions."

UK BASKETEERS

The transplanted Kansan who has moulded championship calibre teams with amazing regularity since he took over Kentucky's cage dynasty 24 years ago observed that the '55 Wildcats "may run into early-season difficulties because our team will lack experience at the start. However, I think we could have a very fine team by the middle of January with a little luck.

"I am not at all gloomy over our prospects," he continued, "despite the fact we lost the best three men in America and must play possibly the strongest schedule of any team in the nation. We apparently are not very highly regarded and we are not picked to be among the best in the country by any of the pre-season polls I have seen. But I suspect our boys will be getting more than an average share of mention when all the shouting is over."

Exactly how this year's edition of the Wildcats will line up for the opening gun is another big problem facing the Kentucky mentor. Capt. Evans, who operated at forward last season, may be shifted to a guard post to make room for more rebounding height. Once this key fits into place, the rest of the lineup might see Grawmeyer and Bird at forwards, Burrow at center and either Puckett or Rose at the other guard location. However, sophomore Mills could break into the starting group at forward if Bird beats Burrow out for the pivot spot.

And there are other seemingly endless combinations available too, all of which leads Kentucky's opponents to

I Walked Across the Campus ---

I walked across the campus today, just after the 11:50 bell had announced that it was lunch time, and students, gay, young, carefree, came pouring out of every building, busy with their friends, their thoughts, their dreams.

As I walked, I was conscious of many invisible footprints before me, some large, some small, the indelible marks of those who had gone before, printed, not on the concrete walks of today, but imbedded in the foundations of this great institution.

And thinking, as I always do, of the alumni, I wished that all of you might take that walk with me, might see the gradual evolution of dirt to concrete, wood to stone, small beginnings to great achievements—might, in fact have the privilege, as I have had, of watching the daily growth of Alma Mater into a University of breadth and achievement and a glorious future—a future which depends, in large part, on YOU.

Perhaps you will forgive the abandonment of the editorial "we" in this brief message, because there are two things about which I have a very personal feeling; the University and you, its alumni.

All of you have left your mark on the campus; all of you are part and parcel of UK; and, regard it as you will, you cannot possibly divorce yourself from your Alma Mater or your responsibilities to it.

This year, your Alumni Association is attempting to attain a membership never before achieved. You have already joined the ranks, thus proving your loyalty, but can't you go a little farther? Can't you take an hour or two from your busy life and contact, personally, one or more fellow alumni who are still without the fold and urge them to become active too?

This is the year of decision! We have been coasting along for too many years, complacent, sometimes indifferent, too often apathetic about what happens to UK, never realizing that the University's achievements will reflect glory on each one of us, and that, similarly, what we achieve will be written in the University's recorded history.

Try as you may you cannot abandon your Alma Mater; YOU, what you are, what you may have been, what you yet may be, are of great significance to UK, just as what the institution is or may become is of vital importance to you. The new member YOU draft into active membership may be the one who will balance the scales toward a greater University. Never let it be said that because of lack of effort on your part Kentucky failed to achieve greatness!
