

Dr. Bull Talks In UK Library

Of the 10,000 books in the Wilson collection at the library, at least 1,000 are rare books. Dr. Jacqueline Bull, archivist at the UK library, said in an informal talk in the Browning Room Monday.

Dr. Bull, who spoke on the "Wilson Collection of Kentucky," said that the materials were of particular interest in the fields of Kentucky history, the history of the Presbyterian Church, and genealogy. She cited special papers, maps, letters, and records in each of these fields, and said also that there are some 10,000 pamphlets, and 150,000 manuscripts in the entire collection.

Henry Clay Manuscripts. The Shelby family papers of the collection are of great interest because they cover a remarkable span of state history and reflect the many valuable contributions made by the family in several fields of endeavor," Dr. Bull said. She mentioned also such manuscripts as letters of Henry Clay and James Wilkinson.

Books, pamphlets, and papers of the Wilson library are accessible for the use of scholars and students, though the organization of the collection of them is not complete, Dr. Bull stated.

Prof. Matthews Will Lecture
Copies of an article on the Samuel Wilson library, written by Dr. Bull for the Register of Kentucky Historical Society, were given to members of the audience at the conclusion of the talk. Copies are now available at the library also.

William L. Matthews, associate professor of law, will deliver the next Browning Room lecture Monday at 4 p.m. His topic will be "Popular Legal Literature."

LEXINGTON TO UNION—Photographer Ben Williams got a shot of this takeoff Tuesday afternoon as Walton Smith, UK's airborne commutier, left for his home in Union, Ky., after completing his day's classes.

Flying Commuter Is Leader In Kentucky Education Work

Harvey V. Johnston
Even if he were not the University's first flying commutier, Walton Smith of Union, Ky., would be a remarkable student. An education worker and acquaintance of such men as Bernard Baruch and Billy Rose, Smith is attending summer session to his college degree and he is already a high school principal.

He joined the aviation cauldron instead of finishing his work at UK in 1938 and never got around to graduating. He went to work as a stationary salesman when he failed to make the grade as a cadet.

And it was as a stationary peddler that he sold a big bill of goods to a sorority girl at Ohio Wesleyan. After his marriage, he completed a circuit of jobs which included work at the Lexington Signal Depot, Wright Aircraft, the Woodbridge Plant in New Jersey, and eventually to the sales manager's position of the stationary company for which he had been a salesman.

When he went to work for Wright, Bernard Baruch advised him, "Give your best to the job you're doing and your job will do all right by you," and Mr. Smith has followed that advice well.

But he underwent an appendectomy and his doctor directed a change of jobs. So in October of 1947 he accepted the principalship of the New Haven High School at Union, Ky., largely as a gesture of respect for his community.

Since that time, the school has undergone tremendous changes. Since Smith was forced to commute 20 miles from Burlington, where he lived, he was hardly making automobile expenses.

Other principals usually quit the post after the first year, but he decided to stay. He launched a campaign for improvement of the school. Classrooms were painted with unorthodox color schemes by student painters.

Since there was no house for the school's principal, he enlisted the aid of 31 families, acquired materials and labor at reduced rates, and the community built and paid for a house for him and his family for $2000.

Continues School Improvement
Holding open house at his new home for all those who had helped him, Smith announced that several new courses would be offered at the school that fall, including psychology, social science and driver training. He used his own car to train drivers.

Turning to recreational facilities, practically non-existent, he went to Great Lakes Naval Training Station and procured athletic equipment worth $1250 from the athletic officer there.

Smith returned to his school and laid the facts before the board which granted permission to institute the course next year.

Then the need arose for him to attend UK and get his degree. He had been teaching on an emergency certificate, and the school patrons wanted better qualifications.

At the right, Pilot Smith and his air companion, Mrs. Ruth Mason, board his two-passenger Cessna in which they travel back and forth everyday.

Marching Band Clinic To Open

A concert and marching band clinic for Kentucky high school students and band directors sponsored by the music department will begin Monday.

The course, designed to teach Kentucky band directors and talented high school students the art of marching and concert band techniques, will end Friday.

The clinic faculty will include Bernard Fitzgerald, concert band director at the University of Texas; Hal Bergan, marching band specialist from Lansing, Michigan; and Don Wilson, American Legion national twirling champion.

Programs will be presented nightly for the visiting students and directors.

Howard Made New Trustee

J. Woodford Howard, Prestonsburg director of the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees by Governor Earl Clements recently.

The Prestonsburg attorney replaces the late Richard C. Stoll who served on the board for nearly 50 years.

Mr. Howard, a former UK football player and graduate of the University Law School, represented Morgan County in the Kentucky House of Representatives in 1924.

He was appointed by the governor to act as one of the special judges of the Court of Appeals last year.

He established law practice in Prestonsburg in 1925.

He is a member of the Kentucky Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the Kentucky State Bar Association, the Kentucky State Bar Association, the Kentucky State Bar Association, the Kentucky State Bar Association.

Veterans Must Report To Prevent Training Lapse

Any veteran under Public Law 349 who plans to enroll in the University of Kentucky for the fall semester, 1949-50, may report to the Veterans Personnel Office, Room 204, Administration Building, between August 1 and August 13 to accomplish the necessary papers for the Veterans Administration.

All veterans will be withdrawn from Kentucky high school Administration at the end of the summer semester. All veterans will have to file re-entrance papers when they return to school in the fall. Those who report between August 1 and 13 will not have to file their re-entrance papers during registration time.

Dr. Groves Explains 'Dynamic Marriage'

Miss Chloé Gifford and Dr. Gladys Hoagland Groves discuss plans for the Family Life Institute program which was held on the campus this week.

Persons dissatisfied with their home life have a social responsibility to correct their difficulties, Dr. Gladys Hoagland Groves, director of the Hoagland Conference on Conservation of Marriage and Family, said in a talk at Memorial Hall Tuesday night.

"An unhappy home life is more than a way of life," Dr. Groves stated, "they are the result of many centuries of social experience and have helped to make our society what it is today. The kind of world we are to live in tomorrow will be decided in part by the kind of home life we build now."

Many persons leading unhappy home lives can be helped by competent marriage and family counseling, she said, while others who are basically unhappy because of their own individual make-up and outlook should seek professional help.

Former UK Students Cover Bourbon Vote-Fraud Trial

By Bob Cox
Let's think back through the years for a few moments to those golden days of high school. Or, if you are an "old grad," just think of those college undergraduate days. Can you remember all your old chums and what their plans were, and then compare that to what they are doing now?

Some of you, think remember that you once had a friend who was a member of the War Assets Administration, but no equipment was available. Vice President Barkley was also unable to help.

Smith returned to his school and laid the facts before the board which granted permission to institute the course next year.

Then the need arose for him to attend UK and get his degree. He had been teaching on an emergency certificate, and the school patrons wanted better qualifications.

with you, and believe me our boat is overcrowded. The above reporters, who covered the trial for their respective publications, are all former students at the University. They are (left to right) Tom Gish of United Press; Joe Reiser, Louisville Courier-Journal; Miss Sue Fenimore, radio station WLAP and the United Press; Jim Bourke, Lexington Leader; and Mrs. Norma Weatherpoon Face, also of the Leader. Not present when the picture was taken were Bill Hudson, Associated Press; Dick Kirkpatrick, Cincinnati Enquirer; and Bush Brooke, Lexington Herald.

They were pointed out to me by Dr. Neil Plummer, head of the journalism department at the University, who noticed that most of the group were former UK students. They were the reporters who were covering the trial for their various newspapers. On a closer check, we discovered that of the dozen or so at the reporters table, eight were former students.

At the next recess, I began talking to various ones and discovered quite a parallel in their careers. Joe Reiser of the Louisville Courier-Journal is one of the oldest of the group. Joe was graduated from the University in 1934. He worked for a short time with the US Department of Agriculture, and in April 1935 he joined the staff of the Courier-Journal. Joe now heads the Lexington bureau of the Cincinnati Enquirer, a position he has held for eight years.

Kirkpatrick is another reporter of the Lexington bureau of the Cincinnati Enquirer is another of the elders of the group. Dick's education was obtained partly at the University of Kentucky. He joined the Enquirer in 1934. He is now a technical assistant in farm economics.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor: Possibly there are some people who know and some who don't know that the Junior League Horse Show preliminary horsemanship contest held last week was won by a demure young lady who wore a flowing orchid-colored riding habit and who rode side-saddle. She was the epitome of young womanhood. Her ladylike appearance made a favorable impression of the contest judges. This incident significantly reveals that there is a desire for reversionism in women, a desire to revert to their former state of being. For years women screamed for emancipation. According to Dr. Plummer, my instructor in equestrian, the word emancipate comes from Latin em, meaning out, plus manns, hand. In other words, women want to be out of hand, more specifically out of the hands of men, at least that is what they lead us to believe. We have been misled. The reversion to long skirts in recent years, and the numerous occurrence of incidents such as the one at the horse show, indicates clearly that there is a shapine in American womanhood a strong tendency to bow down before the strong superior arm of American men and return to their formerly well-protected state of ladyhood. Of course, several years will lapse before this reversion movement reaches full force. We will have to wait until the incorrigible die off. The incorrigibles are the young ladies who run around in public with their ruffy lips curled around foul cigarettes, who tell dirty jokes that will curl a person's hair, who expose their graces to the world wearing décollete dresses and short shorts, and who just aren't ladies. There are a number of these "I ain't no lady" types right here on the campus. Their hardened manners are entrenched in their characters and it will probably take them some time to realize the folly of their ways. How about it girls? When are you going to change? A Gentleman

Editor, The Kernel: As we have been students here for several years, we feel that we have a right to make some suggestions for the improvement of the campus. First of all, we believe that there should be white lawn furniture put in front of Jewell Hall—not the wooden variety but the ornate metal type. Also, we believe that water sprinklers which play in front of colored lights would be a welcomed addition. Fireworks one night a week would pleasantly break the monotony of summer school. Secondly, traffic speed on Euclid Avenue should be slowed down to 20 miles per hour from Rose Street to Limestone. This would keep the overall population up to enrollment number and allow us girls to get to class on time. Thirdly, we feel that S.G.A.'s "Hello Walk" has done nothing for U.K. Why not have something closer to the student's vocabulary, say maybe a "Go-to-Hell" walk? Fourthly, students are cursed with observing W.S.S.F. week, Community Chest Drives, ODR Tags, etc. Why not have a "Leave Me Alone Week"? In this period, everyone would be allowed to do as he pleases, giving money to no one but himself, and living as a normal individual. Pitying the food at the dorm is something to be corrected. U.K.'s "Pomarine Tavern" is at its height. Rice, gloo, gunky meat, messes, hot vegetable soup on 95-degree days are quickly diminishing the roof's disposition in the female quadrangle. The caloric value has not taken a needed drop. We get enough heat energy to last us through a -10 snow storm. Sixthly, the fly population in the library is increasing by leaps and bounds. Why not pay 45-cents an hour to some useful employee? His job would be to swat flies in the library and hang fly paper from all strategic points. Seventhly, this campus is, so they say, beautiful. However, the smoky dirt camouflage which is present over the windows in all the buildings makes it impossible for us to enjoy all this pulchritude. Haven't the officials heard of soap and water? Eighthly, we feel that the Kernel could stand improving this summer. Longer sports pages, more features, shorter editorials, more letters to the editor, and a new society page would create a new paper out of your seasonal four-pager. We do think, though, that several of the Kernel's features have had "something." George, the squirrel, had the "common touch." Mother's fight for equal rights made us all feel "grateful" to the author for reminding us of our debt to the older generation. The history of the library was uplifting. Your last feature on anthropometric bibliography was particularly "good" when read before dinner. It has made different persons out of us. Please, give us more features. We want to be lifted out of the darkness of ignorance. We believe that only by adoption of this eight point program of advancement can the university remain great. Sincerely, Plurality

Editor, The Kernel: I was so very pleased with the suggestion offered in last week's Kernel regarding an ivy planting program on the campus. Nothing could improve our old buildings so much I agree as to cover them with a delightful blanket of that lovely plant. And I would like to offer my services. You see, I'm an amateur horticulturist. This is I like to dabble with plants and such as a hobby. As soon as I read Miss Moss's letter I thought...I will take a sprig of the very ivy I have been growing so successfully in my own window box and plant it right under staid old McVey Hall. I discovered my "window box ivy" in woods just outside Lexington growing on a tree. It's a rare genus I believe, and quite lovely...three exquisite little leaves at certain times of the year—it has the cutest little white berries. And then I thought...a better still I will take my ivy to the Kernel office. The Kernel newsroom could be a central collecting point for anybody who had a plant to spare. Perhaps the reporters—as they go from building to building gathering news—could plant it just like modern Johnny Appleses. How about it, Mr. Editor. Will you and your staff join in this program to cover the campus with ivy? Rose Ellen Ogletorpe (Thank you, ma'am. Each week the Kernel staff attempts to cover the campus, but it ain't with ivy—Ed)

Editor, The Kernel: It is customary for students on probation at the University to write to Mr. Croft, director of personnel at UK, and explain to him exactly why they flunked. Last week while strolling across the campus I picked up this discarded, crumpled effort: "I flunked english becawz I didn't stidy 'is being my first semester o cawledge and so and as yit I aint on th' grind o things. I aint been usry to do dymestory lize store since it tuk me a time to git use to it, the dorm bargin all this time and tha noise allus remind me o the mad mule broke lize in ovr chikin house. I aint been use to a lot o talkin, my roommates are both city fellers ar good conversational-lasses, some times they talk about wine and wine and other times wim and wimin, hits tuk me some time to git use to th' two seljics, back whar I cum from whoosky and wimin want reaw so entersting. I promise to bare down close nex semester and pass. I m turnable sorry ye had ta go ta all the trouble o writin bout me ta ma ma cu she cant read. since seerly youws hoagy hoagies!" Amicably, R. E. Lee

Dear Editor: In recent issues of the Kernel, articles in your letter column on the "perennial" college girl by elder woman who are on the campus only for summer school have been outrageous. These women are not justified in making comments derogatory to the younger coeds character because it is obvious that they are ignoring that science and the arts have progressed considerably since they received their first "truth" from an institution of higher learning. It may be so that you younger coeds, after spending our afternoons swimming at Jopland and grabbing a few minutes at the library at night to memorize the latest volume of encyclopedias assigned to us, do not have time to press dresses and pin our broaches on at 7 a.m. We do, however, get all our work in before the last bell of the semester rings, and maintain our 1.3 academic average. This cannot be called levity. And as for the reflection on our morals—the references made to strapless dresses, etc.—these women are only looking through a (Continued on Page Three)

Ky. Kernel's Far-Eastern Correspondent Gets Instructed On Many Matters

Fort Monmouth, N. J. (Special). Funny, some of the people one can meet on an army post. There's one soldier here that has quite a reputation for keeping "the troops" amused. In the first place he doesn't seem to have any rank. One day maybe he's a recruit, the next day, tech corporal. I've seen him up as high as sergeant, which really isn't very high. But generally speaking the guy's a character. In the first place the man's in show business; wheels around the post theater. There his word is law, and he can kick a colonel out for not wearing the proper uniform. To all the boys in ROTC he is known as Shamus-on-ya. Sounds Chinese, but he's Jolsey from Newark to the west of Steel Pier. You see, before every training film or feature movie he mounts the stage, screams "Shut up," and goes into the following spiel. "Gang G Ocean Fishing. The policy of the the-ster is no smoling, and keep your feet off the back of the seats. If I ketch any man doing this here I'll take your name, rank, and serial number, and turn it in to your command officer. In other words - a shame on ya. You've had a." This is the sign for everyone to laugh and clap. Last week a gang of the boys decided to go in for a luxury sport, ocean fishing. I'd say about thirty making comments derogatory to the younger coeds character because it is obvious that they are ignoring that science and the arts have progressed considerably since they received their first "truth" from an institution of higher learning. It may be so that you younger coeds, after spending our afternoons swimming at Jopland and grabbing a few minutes at the library at night to memorize the latest volume of encyclopedias assigned to us, do not have time to press dresses and pin our broaches on at 7 a.m. We do, however, get all our work in before the last bell of the semester rings, and maintain our 1.3 academic average. Spent Saturday In The Field

Spent Saturday In The Field. Then came Saturday. We are preparing to spend this week in the field, and yours truly is picked as a volunteer to go up to the camp-in-area. Had to pitch squad tents and dig latrines. All this would have been fine, except - - the place is nothing but dirty white sand and little scrubby trees. Most of the afternoon I managed to "goof off" by riding in the back of a two-and-a-half-ton truck delivering tents to the various Regimental Combat Team Command Posts. But I did help with putting the old tents up, and I did get my hands on a shovel. So this week the whole battalion will be camping in pop tents, eating c-rations, and fighting the ticks. Right now the thunder is so loud that I feel like I'm sitting on an artillery battery, so I'll sign off while I can still hold pen in my hand. End communique.

Group See Weather Radar. Early last week we toured the Signal Corp Engineering Laboratories around here. The amount of technological equipment is simply astounding. We saw weather radar, an as-sembly of equipment that makes a map of the region within a radius of 150 miles. We were televised. We saw the latest design in telephone, teletypewriter equipment, and radio. Then later in the week we traveled to Camden, and took a whirlwind tour through part of RCA. Watched the assembly line of television receivers and cameras. Saw the manufacture of microphones and movie projectors. Saw the "dead room" where loud speakers were tested. Watched the process for making technical equipment like oscilloscopes. Everything went so fast that I couldn't see anything.

A Civic Responsibility

Having been reminded by a reader in last week's letters column that the Kentucky primary elections are to be held August 6, the Kernel earnestly recommends that all qualified student voters plan to exercise their right of suffrage.

Voting will work no hardship on students who live in Lexington or are registered in a Fayette county precinct. But out of town students might be tempted to skip this one, if it entails a trip home just before the final exam schedule becomes critical. There is, of course, a statutory provision allowing persons absent from their homes on election days to cast absentee ballots, which may be obtained by application to the clerk of the county in which the voter's home precinct is situated. These ballots may be obtained with a minimum of red tape.

It must never be said, however, that voting places a hardship on anyone. Even if a temporary inconvenience does result, it is nothing compared with the penalties of non-participation, among which are apt to be scandalous administration and poor officials.

A shamefully small percentage of eligible voters exercise their rights at the polls in this, which is touted to be the most democratic country in the world. Yet in no other country do people carp and whine more when the electoral processes produce a lennon.

We are convinced that the person who fails to vote is a common law ancestor of any known scoundrel who happens to get himself elected to public office, because a vote not cast is a vote for him. If college does nothing else, it ought at least to point out the undesirability of such parentage.

"Jawn" Is Insulting

Congressman "Jawn" Rankin has made another asinine statement, this time concerning attempts to extend the life of the "52-20" Club, a provision of the G. I. Bill which is due to expire on Monday.

Evidently anticipating a mad rush on the part of veterans newly graduated from American colleges to sign up for 52 weeks of "Backin Chair Money," the Mississippi legislator has de-scribled moves to extend the law as an effort "to get some of this sit down money for fellows who have spent the last four years in college with Uncle Sam footing the bill."

While it is notoriously true that a few veterans have taken shameful liberties with the provision allowing them, if unemployed, to draw $20 each week for 52 weeks, we do not believe that veterans who have been attending college under terms of the G. I. Bill are now anxious for a federal dole. All they ask is an opportunity to use the skills they have acquired in the best interests of their country, in keeping with the American tradition.

Rankin's statement is, then, an insult to all veterans who were graduated from American colleges last June, as well as to those who are to be graduated in August. It is not deserved, and not appreciated.

Music Room Programs

The Carnegie Record Library in the Music Room of the Student Union building each year makes a valuable contribution to the cultural life of the University community.

Under the direction of Mrs. Lewis H. Mills, programs of recorded music are played each afternoon Monday through Friday from 12:30 to 4, and on Thursday evenings from 6 to 8. The Library consists of some 4,000 records, including a great number of albums of operas and symphonies from widely varied com-posers.

Although receiving little publicity, these daily Music Room programs attract a number of students. Last year, well over 12,000 persons visited the room and heard, upon their requests, their favorite recordings of the world's great classics.

The Music Room programs are, of course, free; and they offer an opportunity for relaxation and enjoyment which is not duplicated anywhere else on the campus.

Two Entries Tie For First In "Greatest Player" Contest

Who is "The Greatest Baseball Player of All Time?" In the first week's contest sponsored by the Kentucky Kernel two entries tied for first place with Bernie O'Laughlin, student in the College of Law, nominating Teddy Williams of the Boston Red Sox and "The Corporation" of Jewell Hall selecting Samuel Crawford, old time Cincinnati and Detroit outfielder.

The entry from "The Corporation" at Jewell Hall selecting Samuel Crawford reads as follows:

"Samuel Crawford remained in the major leagues for 19 years. Bowling into the big league ball with Cincinnati in 1899 and switching to Detroit four years later, he was the senior member of the Tigers' renowned left-hand batting outfield of Ty Cobb, Bobby Veach, and Crawford.

"Even though home runs were unpopular in 1901, Sam batted 16 out of the lot for Cincinnati. He then switched to hitting three-baggers and compiled a record which still stands — 312 triples in 2505 big league games."

"The rivalry between Crawford and Ty Cobb was great. There were years when they did not speak. Runs batted in by Crawford when he followed Cobb in the lineup were the main dissertation points. If Crawford's run batted in had been counted, he would have been a champion."

"Starting as a left-handed pitcher, his batting attracted attention in 1898. In the years when 300 hitters were rare, Crawford batted .308 or better for 11 seasons. Although batting .276 in 1911, he seldom let his team due to Cobb's pace."

"E. S. Barnard constructed a 45-foot wire screen over the right field fence in League Park, Cleveland, to stop Crawford. It failed."

"Thus, even though playing sec-staff in 1934. Later he spent six years with Army Intelligence, and then he joined the Lexington bureau of the Enquirer in December 1947.

Bill Hudson of the Associated Press attended the University from 1939 to 1941. He is now night editor of the Lexington bureau of the AP. He began with the Associated Press in February 1944, and has worked with the Frankfort and Louisville bureaus. Previous to that, Bill worked with the American Tobacco Company, the Lexington Herald, Lexington Leader, and the Johnson City, Tenn. Press-Chronicle.

Sharing the job of covering the trial for the Lexington Leader were Mrs. Norma Westerspoon Pace and Jim Rourke. Mrs. Pace, who was graduated in June 1944, was editor of the Kentucky Kernel in 1942-44. Jim was graduated in August 1946. Both he and Norma have been with the Leader since their graduation.

Brooks Taught Class Last Semester Representing the Lexington Herald at the trial was Edith Brodie-Bush was graduated in June 1947 although his work at the University was completed in December 1946. He began work at the University on the Herald as a police reporter on Oct. 1, 1946 and held that position for exactly two years, relinquishing it Oct. 1, 1948 to Ray Fulton, another former UK student. Since that time, Bush has been on the federal and the burley market beats. He returned to the University last semester to teach a course in reporting while continuing with his work on the Herald.

Tom Gish, class of 1947, is a reporter on the Frankfort staff of the United Press. While in school, Tom was editor of the Kentuckian. Incidentally, his wife is the former Pat Burnette, another ex-University student and Kernel editor. Pat is also reporting locally now.

Another UP reporter in the courtroom was Miss Sue Penimore, who is also with radio station WLAP. Sue was graduated from UK in 1946 and began work as a reporter on the Lexington Leader.

The winner of next week's contest will have his entry printed in the Kernel and will also receive one carton of Coca-Cola. In the case of a tie, as occurred this week, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Reasons for the choice of the player in addition to the manner in which the reasons are presented will be the basis for selection.

One more weekly contest will remain after the one of next week. Entries for that contest will be due by Tuesday, August 2 at 6 p.m.

The SPORTING SCENE

A small item very pertinent to the papers we read and wonder if you happened to see it. It was announced from the front office of the New York Yankees of the All-American Football Conference that Gilbert Johnson had signed a contract to play pro football this coming fall.

Now this announcement in itself doesn't mean too much. But when you consider that Johnson was the brilliant passing quarterback of the Southern Methodist Mustangs and that the University of Kentucky plays SMU this fall — well, Johnson still had one year of eligibility remaining at SMU. However, his class graduated this spring so he was free to sign a pro contract.

Johnson has never received the attention that Doak Walker, Kyle Rote, and some of the rest of the boys down there have, but nevertheless, he has been one of the most important cogs of the great SMU machine.

Several times last fall when the running attack seemed to bog down and even the great Doak Walker had been momentarily stymied, Johnson was the lad who came through with his trusty right arm. He also helped Walker's running game by constantly threatening to cut loose with a long one and kept the defense open for Walker.

And speaking of the UK football team, this week was UK Football Ticket Sales Week. Fans had the chance to purchase season tickets for all of the UK home games. Home games for the 1949 season include Mississippi Southern, Sept. 17; Georgia, Oct. 8; The Citadel, Oct. 15; and Tennessee, Nov. 19. Still Field has been enlarged to accommodate some 35,000 fans now and some big and colorful crowds are expected this fall to watch the men of Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

And how about congratulations to Dale Barnstable of the basketball Wildcats who will wed Wilma Lee Haverly, a UK student from Corbin. She couldn't have gotten a nicer guy.

As you can see elsewhere on the page, we have a tie in our first week's contest to select the greatest baseball player of all time. Both the entry of Teddy Williams and the one of Samuel Crawford seemed about equal so we named two winners this week. Don't forget you can enter too. The rules of the contest and the other dope story in the "greatest player" story.

Yern "Junior" Stephens, shortstop of the still potent Boston Red Sox, appears to be on his way to knocking in the most runs either league has seen since at least 1938. In 1939 Teddy Williams knocked in 145 runs and only last year the Yankee Clipper, Joe DiMaggio, belted 155 Clippes. Joe DiMaggio, belted 155 runs in the 138 drives in by Johnny Mize of the New York Giants in 1947—the year he hit 51 home runs to tie with Kiner.

However, Junior Stephens after the Red Sox had played in 85 contests, had already knocked in 95 runs. This figures out that, if Stephens can continue his pace, he will knock some 172 runs across the plate.

Close behind him is the Splendid Sprinter, Teddy Williams, who has knocked in 98 runs in these same 85 contests. Teddy could easily knock in 163 runs this season if he

Nine Teams To Vie For Softball Title

The Intramural Softball Tournament was scheduled to start this Wednesday with two games slated the first day, William McClubb, intramural director, announced.

Nine teams are competing in the single elimination tourney. According to the schedule—barring rain—two games were to be played Wednesday, two Thursday, and one Friday.

Semi-finals of the tourney are scheduled for Monday and the championship game will be played Tuesday.

In the games scheduled for Wednesday, the Skeets were to meet the Midnight Imps and the Triangles were to play the Alloys. In games Thursday the PCKT club was scheduled to play the winner of the Triangle-Alloy clash to complete the semi-final billing for the upper bracket.

In the second game Thursday the Tavern team was to meet the PSK's while the semi-final game for the lower bracket will be completed when Break Hall meets the Sig Eps today at the Intramural Field.

As the tourney started, three clubs appeared to have the inside track for the title.

In the lower bracket the Break Hall team, co-winners of the League II title, looked like the best bet. Billy "Whiskey" Zoellers will try to pitch the Break Hall nine to the title of Intramural Champion.

In the upper bracket two teams probably will battle it out for the right to play in the championship game. The Skeets with Big Jim True on the mound looked like one of the teams to beat while the Phi Kappa Tau club, winners of the League I title, will probably furnish tight competition.

Following completion of the regular softball season, the Intramural Softball Tournament was scheduled to begin Wednesday. League play in the two loops was completed this past Tuesday.

Phi Kappa Tau won the League I title with a record of four wins and no defeats. Break Hall and the Skeets finished in a tie for the lead in League II. Each team won three games and dropped none.

In the final games of League II, the Skeets gained their third win by stopping the Alloys, 12-4.

In the final two games played Tuesday at Alumni Field, the Phi Sig's won the first game of the day by edging the Sig Eps 5-4 in a tight ball game. The Sig Eps had the tying run on third base in the fifth inning with one away but couldn't get him across the plate.

The Sig Eps turned around and won their second game of the day by defeating the Alloys 6-3. The Alloys threatened in the fifth when they scored twice and couldn't tie it up.

All five teams in League II will participate in the tourney because the final three clubs—the Sig Eps, the Phi Sig's, and the Alloys—all finished with identical records — one victory and three defeats.

Final standings of the two leagues were as follows:

Team	League I	W	L
PCKT		4	0
Midnight Imps		2	2
Triangles		2	2
Tavern Boys		2	2
Law School		0	4

Team	League II	W	L

Student Swimmers In Days Of Yore Found Joy Unbound On Campus Shore

By Joe Lee

We who have to plan an afternoon trip to Boonshore Beach or Jordan Park to go swimming should envy the days when a swimming excursion for State University students constituted a trip to Euclid Avenue. Believe it or not, the university grounds used to be a veritable island surrounded by pristine lakes.

The source of these lakes was gently bubbling Maxwell Springs once located in the vicinity of Patterson Hall. These springs, all now de-aerated and covered by construction, once conformed to form a shallow lake over Rose Street. From this lake a small stream ran along the back of the football stadium and emptied into a culvert under Limestone Street.

Students Dammed Culvert
Where the Education College stands today the water dipped into a rock quarry excavation to form a deep but precarious pool.

One day in the 1890's some students got smart and dammed the culvert under Limestone Street. The backwash from the dam inundated the present-day athletic field and formed a long standing artificial pool.

To this new-formed lake lesser denizens of the surrounding forests came to drink until they were frightened away by ungodly noises. In later years the only denizens to drink there were unfortunate freshmen being initiated. Also, the lake served as a tug-of-war battleground between State University and Transylvania students.

Along the length of what is today Euclid Avenue around the perimeter of the lake sprang up a thicket of willow trees. Here the boys hung their pants when they went for a splash.

COOL WATER—The inundated portions of the University campus once afforded an ideal swimming spot for students in hot weather. The lake was near Euclid Avenue, covering approximately what is now the Student Union Building, intramural field, and part of France Hall. It was formed by a small creek which ran diagonally across the campus. The creek was dammed up by ingenious students to form the lake.

dalous. Bathing beauties never graced the lake.

When the athletic field was constructed the lake water was funneled under the ground where today it empties out in the vicinity of Irish town.

The heat of these hot days makes one wish the lake were still here.

To dive out a window of the SUB or Alumni Gym into pellucid waters would be fun. And now that bathing beauties are here to stay it would be even more fun.

CONN-COX 'UNS

By Earl L. Conn and Bob Cox

Maybe it's the animal in us, or maybe we just don't believe in Be Kind To Animals any week, but we're led off the massacre this time with a dog story. Dog-gone if we know why.

A dog and his master were sitting on one of those downtown park benches one p.m., watching the scenery stroll by. The guest suddenly realized that he was out of cigarettes.

"Lemme a far, Dewey," he said to the dog casually.

Dewey looked bewildered and replied, "I don't smoke, John, but I'll go down to Walgreen's for you."

"Fine," said his companion. "Here's a half dollar. Go get me a pack."

After an hour's wait, the man went looking for Dewey. He wasn't at Walgreen's, so the man went down Main street and finally spotted his treacherous pal in a den of iniquity, sipping a double scotch.

"Dewey!" he cried, "what is going on here? I've always been able to trust you and now you fall me like this!"

Said Dewey, "You never gave me money before!"

A rather desperate young friend of ours once dated a pair of Siamese twins.

"Have a good time?" asked his roommate when he returned.

"Well, yes and no" he replied.

You know, one of our favorite types is the guy or gal who can come across with the perfect squelch. The world's full of 'em, and just as an idea of what we mean, here is a couple heard recently.

The prospective hotel guest looked around him and sneered laughably. "Why this room reminds me of a prison."

"It's really only a matter of what one is accustomed to air," replied the clerk.

Several years after the breakup of their love affair, the man met his old flame at the SUB dance.

"Let me see," she said icily, "was it, you or your brother who used to be an admirer of mine?"

"I really don't remember," he replied. "Probably my father."

She was the type who would whisper sweet nothings-doings in your ear.

SAE: Smoke?

Sweetie: Nope.

SAE: Drink?

Sweetie: Uh-uh.

SAE: Do you eat hay?

Sweetie: Indeed, not!

SAE: Gosh, gal, you're not fit companion for man or beast.

A wise senior is the one who informs us that soft soap has cleaned many a guy.

Pome of the week:
Of all sad surprises,
There's nothing to compare
With trading in the darkness
On a step that isn't there.

Pome of next week:
An amoeba named Joe and his brother
Were out drinking toasts to each other
In the midst of their quaffing,
They split their sides laughing,
And found that each other was a mother.

We have never believed a one of those absent-minded prof stories, but recently a few have cropped up from various sources that are hard to doubt. For instance:

Doctor: It's a boy, professor.

AMP: What is?

Then there's the AMP's wife who admonished him at the door with "Walk, dear. Are you sure you've forgotten everything?"

We're going to try to ignore the one about the prof who rolled under the dresser and waited for his collar button to find him.
