Former student files suit against University

A FORMER UK medical student has filed suit against the University and five members of the UK medical faculty, charging that he was illegally dismissed from medical school while in good academic standing.

William H. Depperman, Jr., New York City, named defendants in the case as Dr. Peter Bosomworth, vice president for the UK medical center; Dr. William S. Jordan, dean of the medical school; Dr. Roger O. Lambson, medical school assistant dean for student affairs; Dr. David B. Clark, professor of neurology; and Dr. Cornelia Wilbur, professor of psychiatry.

IN HIS SUIT, Depperman asks for $150,000 in compensatory and punitive damages, and to be declared eligible for readmission to medical school.

Scott Wendelsdorf, Depperman's attorney, said although the figure accurately represents the damages suffered by his client, money is of secondary importance. "In his own mind, he'd much rather have a medical career than $150.000"

Depperman transferred to UK from the Bern Faculty of Medicine, Switzerland, in August, 1970. He was dismissed in April 1972 because of what was termed a "bad attitude".

IN HIS COMPLAINT, Depperman claims that, during a clinical course in pediatric surgery, he disagreed with the professor about the advisability of one surgical method over another. The professor then allegedly submitted a performance report indicating Depperman had a bad attitude.

Depperman contends the "unjustified rating" was circulated among the medical faculty and prejudiced him in their minds.

He further charges that Wilbur, who was in charge of a psychiatric clerkship clinical course in which he enrolled, was so prejudiced by the report she decided beforehand she would not award a passing grade to Depperman, regardless of his work in the course.

WILBUR DID. IN fact, award Depperman a failing grade. According to Depperman's complaint, however, "Plaintiff's performance was of passing quality and his work was comparable to and in some instances superior to the work of other students who received a passing grade in said course."

The complaint adds that the failing grade "was not based upon his academic performance or his ability to complete course requirements, but was based entirely upon Defendant Wilbur's prejudice against blaintiff."

Depperman appealed the failing grade in January 1972, and charges that the Third and Fourth Year Promotions Committee of the College of Medicine placed him on probation "allegedly because of his unacceptable 'attitude'."

According to Depperman, the committee in no way indicated his academic performance or professional competence was inadequate, what evidence the committee had based its findings on, or what constituted a bad attitude.

The compaint charges, "Said Committee merely informed Plaintiff that if his 'attitude' did not improve to the satisfaction of the Committee, he would be separated from the College of Medicine. Said Committee neither qualified what it meant by improper 'attitude', nor what corrective steps it considered necessary, nor what 'attitude' would be satisfactory to the Committee.

Depperman's appeal was denied on Feb. 11, 1972 and, according to the complaint, no reason was given. On April 1, the committee suspended him from the College of Medicine without stating its reasons or revealing the evidence upon which it was based.

UPON NOTIFICATION of his suspension, Depperman resigned from the medical school, but the complaint states, "Had Plaintiff not resigned, he would have been dismissed."

According to Wendelsdorf, Depperman's probation and suspension were illegal in that they were not based upong any academic, mental, physical, or disciplinary deficiency or defect, but upon the fact that Depperman had appealed his grade. The complaint adds that, because Depperman's academic and professional competence were satisfactory under University rules, his dismissal was in violation of the 14th Amendment.

Playboy, Penthouse deny cuts in service

By CHARLES WOLFE

Kernel Staff Writer

By MIKE CLARK Managing Editor IF MARK TWAIN were alive today, he might note the reports of the impending 'deaths' of Playboy and Penthouse magazines in Lexington have been "greatly exaggerated."

Amid a flurry of rumors, some local dealers have stopped sale of the magazines, for fear of possible arrest by Metro police.

Metro chief James Shaffer denied yesterday his department had begun a crackdown on magazine dealers, but emphasized the department will continue to enforce laws effective prior to the recent Supreme Court rulings on pornography.

SPOKESMEN FOR PLAYBOY and Penthouse denied either magazine was contemplating a cutback or cancellation of sales in Levington or cancellation of sales in Lexington.

Problems arose after United Press and WKYT-TV reported the two magazines for men were "withdrawing their publications from newsstands in Lexington due to what they described as 'local

PLAYBOY spokesman Lee Gottlieb denied his magazine had made any such announcement or had issued any joint statement with Penthouse.

Richard Smith of Penthouse explained he had been asked by a UPI writer to name areas where the magazine had experienced problems since the stricter interpretation of pornography guidelines was announced by the Supreme Court on June 23. Smith gave the writer a list of 17 cities, mostly in the Southeast, "and Lexington was on the list. But we haven't heard of any recent problems there."

"We are not stopping sales in Kentucky," Smith said.
"We will do everything we can to sell in Kentucky... we are eager to sell in Kentucky."

Kentucky doesn't need Red River Dam

Results of last Saturday's public hearing on the U.S. Corps of Engineers preliminary vironmental impact statement on the Red River Dam project points up one clearcut fact-the dam isn't wanted by a large contingency of Kentuckians

THE PROJECT HAS been tossing around for 20 years with Congressional authorization for actual plans coming in 1962. But two years ago former Governor Louie Nunn disapproved the initial site of the dam and the Corps moved it downstream five miles, ecologically accomplishing little.

Saturday's hearing capped off the most recent round of arguments about the dam. The Corps statement has several points which are cause for concern and we take issue with them.

--Several species of plant life won't be able to survive in the new lake environment. Also wild turkeys, beavers and fish, specifically the darterfish (a rarity in this part of the country) will be likely to die.

-- INDUSTRY WILL be able to move into the area as well as tourist attractions and recreational facilities. -- The cost of the dam will run around $30 million. These admissions by the Corps are the same things environmentalists and other opponents of the dam are fighting against and we join them.

UK ZOOLOGIST Dr. Roger Barbour said, at the hearing, the Red River Gorge and surrounding areas date back to the Ice Age and many plants are uncommon for southern climates. And if the dam does go up we stand a chance of looking at barren and organically destroyed land, wiped out by floods in the rainy season but left dry when the pool elevation of the lake drops later.

Wildlife will decrease immensely in the lake area because many types won't be able to conform to the new surroundings.

ONE OF THE strongest arguments for the dam is the fact it will deter the possiblity of flashfloods in the gorge's lower end near Clay City. But this problem could be solved with a system of floodwalls and levees along the river. The Corps says the price of this alternative system would be too expensive. But the price of the dam itself may have risen out of proportion since planning began in 1962.

At that time the rate of interest was three and one-eighths per .cent. The rate now is near seven and one-half per cent. The increase, according to State Senator Lacy Smith, D-protected by the National Forest Louisville, will amount to nearly $2 Service or Kentucky's service it million more per year. probably won't take too long before weekend lodges and commercial shops pop up on the lake's shore creating more eyesores.

The area already has enough recreational facilities in Natural Bridge State Park and its lodge nearby

At this late date opponents of the dam have to convince Governor Ford to turn down the plan or get Congress make "inoperative" to authorization of 11 years ago. Each of these will be hard but to save the gorge it has to be done.

Our biggest gripe against the dam is letting industry and commercial tourist traps move into the gorge. True, industry could provide more jobs for citizens of Powell and Wolfe counties but damage caused by pollution from the factories and new roads to accomodate the industries would be devastating to the aesthetically scenic landscape.

WATCHING POWER boats speed across the lake dripping oil and gas would turn many people's stomachs.
And unless the land around the lake is

WKYT deals large doses of people's opiate

on the role of television in America, said, "If television and radio are to be used for the entertainment of all the people all of the time, we have come perilously close to discovering the real opiate of the people."

Lexington's CBS affiliate, WKYT-V (channel 27), seems to have discovered that opiate and is administering large doses to its

THE STATION HAS replaced four network documentaries with entertainment or local programs in the past five months. It substituted a basketball game, "The Amazing World of Kreskin," "Bluegrass Fair" and local news for documentaries of historical and current importance.

John Hohenberg of Columbia University said in The Professional Journalist, "If networks have erred, it is in not producing as many documentaries as are necessary and in failing to provide the prime time that they so richly deserve.

THIS GOES BEYOND the networks however. If they provide the programs and the local stations refuse to show them, the fault lies with the local station.

WKYT-TV president, Raymond P. Holbrook, said the station's primary obligation is to cover local events and national events of local interest. That's fine, only the programs cut off by WKYT-TV were of national importance, therefore of local interest.

Holbrook explained that commitments to schedules and sponsors could not be changed. This commitment was firm in the case of the documentaries but it becomes flexible if an entertainment program like a football or basketball game runs over its scheduled time.

This inconsistency in station operation is confusing. Does it consider a golf match more important than the most serious Congressional inquiry of our time?

ON MONDAY OF this week Holbrook said it is difficult not to show a complete program, once it starts. On Tuesday the station adjourned the Watergate Hearings at 5:30 p.m. They neglected to tell Senator Sam Ervin though, and he continued the hearings for another 20 minutes.

WITH THE rotation of coverage between the three major networks, the hearings take up a maximum of 12 hours on a single network per week. With a total broadcasting time of 129 hours and 25 minutes (week of July 7 to 13), over 90 per cent is devoted to profit making. It isn't too much to ask that the remaining 10 per cent of the time be devoted to public service.

On this, Holbrook said the station had "lost money all day," and they "had to get some revenue." He explained that money is necessary to provide public service television like the Watergate hearings.

The documentaries not shown locally dealt with subjects which are of great national interest from a historical and sociological viewpoint. Interviews with the last five Presidents of the United States, on the office of the Presidency, and the historic confrontation between Edward R. Murrow, one of the first and finest television journalists, and Senator Joseph R. McCarthy were two of the programs not shown.

IT IS TRULY unfortunate that WKYT-TV has chosen not to show these and other valuable programs, denying their viewers in central Kentucky the public service that commercial television is, by law, supposed to provide.

Women change roles for new society

By LETTY COTTIN POGREBIN

New York Times

Women of my age and older are struggling now to remake real lives out of false expectations. We are re-negotiating the contracts with the ones we love. We are revising our values, reorganizing our homes and re-entering the world. But you can, at the very outset, get right to the business of making considered and careful choices from among a great

And it is nothing short of revolution that has been in the making during these years.

Because of it, you are the first generation of grown women who—I hope—has not swallowed the lie. You know too much

YOU KNOW that women with children, even college-educated, white women, are not economically secure. They are only one man away from welfare.

You know that society can't really be committed women's self-actualization when hopes of a national child-care program can be destroyed with a President's veto declaring that it would "weaken" the family.

You know that if you choose full-time motherhood you will work a 99-hour week at no pay, with no sick leave, fringe benefits or vacations. And the only way anyone besides your family will recognize the enormity of your job is if you die—and the surviving father complains about having to pay nearly $10,000 a year to replace your services

YOU KNOW that childbearing is not every woman's "ultimate fulfillment"—and that the promise of fulfillment through other lives is no substitute for a life that is full.

The average woman who does have children has sent her last child to school by the time she is 35 With women's greater life expectancy, you're still faced with forty more years of living. You may as well decide now whether you will live them as Portnoy's mother or as your own person. Today, you can make that choice

When I was graduated from Brandeis University in 1959, Pierre Mendes-France and Edward R. Murrow spoke of lofty goals and remote global problems. They were addressing the young men in our class who were expected to forge out and do the world's work. Even if we women had been included in their remarks, we would have exempted ourselves. The price of excellence and accomplishment for a woman was simply too great. As Matina Horner demonstrated in her study on "Why Bright Women Fail," the fear of success has a chilling effect on young women. We would rather be popular than President. We would rather marry power than possess it.

Four years ago, we wore derivative identities with pride. We were our father's daughter, our husband's wife and then our children's mother. There was no need for any debate about the use of Ms. Most of us were desperately trying to convert Miss into Mrs. so that we could wear the label as a badge. We never noticed that when we were pronounced man and wife, he was pronou person and we were pronounced a role.

MARRIAGE AND motherhood are becoming voluntary options rather than a manifest destiny for anyone born female. If marriage is no more than institutionalized male supremacy in the home then women must either avoid it or reform it.

We all know that one out of three marriages ends in divorce. Margaret Mead has said that one of the reasons marriage worked well in the nineteenth century was that people only lived about fifty years. But now, we are expected to live together for fifty years. If we are indeed perfectible, loving human beings and marriages still turn sour so often, then there must be something wrong with the myth that promises us that the key to the hope chest opens a rich, complete life

Former student files suit against Medical Center

It was subsequently learned that the committee based Depperman's dismissal upon page 18 of the "Bulletin of the College of Medicine" which states: student may be denied per mission to continue enrollment in the College of Medicine if, in the opinion of the Faculty Council, his knowledge, character or mental or physical fitness casts grave doubt upon his potential capabilities as a physician."

DEPPERMAN CONTENDS, however, he was denied due process of law, the regulation relied upon did not authorize the action taken "and is vague, ambiguous, and standardless. He also charges that the regulation did not discern between behavior resulting in probation, suspension, or dismissal, and contained no standards as a guide to requirements alleged to be the cause of his dismissal.

A major contention is that on May 10, 1972, Lambson wrote a letter to Depperman stating he would be eligible for readmission providing certain conditions were stated, "I would suggest that you receive a thorough psychiatric evaluation and therapy designed to help you resolve your dif-ficulties in dealing with people.

"Should you do this, and be able to support this course of action with reports to us from your psychiatrist and letters of recommendation from superiors under whom you might be working, we would be willing to process an application from you for advanced standing, when and if evidence of improvement is forthcoming. However, I should point out that there is no guarantee that you would be admitted."

DEPPERMAN RETURNED to New York, began working as an electrocardiograph technician with the city's Department of Social Services, and began therapy with Dr. Leon Pomeroy of the Institute for Advanced Study in Rational Psychotherapy.

On March 7, 1973, upon completion of the therapy, Pomeroy wrote Lambson, "I have absolutely no reservation in recommending that your investment in his medical education be renewed and that he (Depperman) be given the opportunity to distinguish himself as a student of medicine and thence as a member of the medical community."

Despite the recommendation, however, the committee unanimously voted against Depperman's eligibility for readmission. According to Wendesldorf, the move ef-fectively banned Depperman from enrollment at any medical school in the world, because a student desiring to transfer to another school can not do so as long as he is ineligible for readmission to his former school.

CONCERNING settlement of the case, Wendelsdorf said, "It definitely will not be settled out of court because we're not in the mood to settle...Once suspended him, they couldn't go back and readmit him."

Bosomworth, Jordan Lambson were unavailable for comment, while Clark and Wilbur said they had no

Lexington's Bluegrass Fair, sponsored by the Lions Club, opens tomorrow at the fairgrounds on South Broadway. The Fair will run for eight days, from July 20 to 28. It will be closed on Sunday.

The Fair offers activites for every age group and those activities are varied so that a wide area of interests will be covered.

OPENING THE FAIR at 6:30 p.m. will be an Army parachute team followed by country music stars, Ray Price and Jan Howard in two free concerts.

Throughout the eight days, there will be free concerts every night. The performers include Kenny Rogers and The First Edition, Tommy Cash, Dawn, Del Reeves, and several gospel groups.

Captain night, Schreiber's Chimps will have three shows. Capt. Schreiber claimed one of his chimps was used in the space program. He also said that one new-born Chimp is the only one born in captivity.

THE SOUTH LEXINGTON Lions Club will operate the games on the midway. The rides will be run by Deggeller Amusements of Florida

The Deggeller organization has worked the Bluegrass Fair every year except one since its beginning, according to Claude Sechrest, a manager of the company

Sechrest said there will be 28 to 30 rides at the fair depending on the amount of space that can be used. He said the most popular ride is the "Super Himalaja", a 90 miles per hour ride imported from Europe.

"This will be bigger and better than last year's Fair," Sechrest reckoned. The reason is because of more new rides than last year,

AN ART EXHIBITION and contest will be at the fair every day. The paintings and other artwork may be purchased from the artist.

No fair would be complete without the displays of farm animals and the Bluegrass Fair is not to be left out. Dogs, cattle, sheep and swine will be judged every night.

Many local clubs businesses will have booths at the fair with educational and informative displays.
