Ford releases biennium budget

FRANKFORT — Governor Wendell Ford released his 1974-76 biennium budget recommendations to the state legislature Tuesday, with most of UK's appropriation following that already suggested by the Council on Public Higher Education.

The University will receive a state appropriation of $74.2 million the 1974-75 fiscal year and another $79.4 million for the 1975-76 fiscal year—if the legislature adopts the budget.

The Council recommended that Ford give the University $74.3 million for 1974-75 and $79.5 for 1975-76. This was the first time the Council has reviewed budgets before reaching the governor's staff.

DON CLAPP, special assistant to UK President Otis Singletary, said Ford's appropriation "is about what we expected" since it varies very little from the Council's recommendation.

Clapp, who was UK budget director when the original budget was formulated, explained that less than 50 per cent of UK's total budget comes from the state.

Reciprocity program now brewing

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS seem to be adopting a "wait and see" attitude toward the reciprocal tuition program proposed between Kentucky and Tennessee.

If passed, the program would allow residents of one state to enroll at any state-supported school in the other state at resident tuition rates. A new law, however, is required in the Tennessee legislature before final enactment. The way has already been paved in Kentucky.

The only other states in the nation which provide a reciprocity program are Wisconsin and Minnesota. Officials there pointed out that different problems and advantages have been realized since the program was initiated in 1969.

AT THAT time, reciprocity was extended only to schools situated close to the states' borders. It has been expanded since that time to include all state-supported colleges, universities and vocational schools with lower tuition being extended beyond undergraduate programs to include all graduate and professional fields of study.

• WASHINGTON — Oil company executives predicted Tuesday that even with an all-out effort, 15 years will be needed for the United States to become self-sufficient in energy production.

In the interim, two of the seven executives predicted, gasoline prices can be expected to increase by 10 to 15 cents per gallon this year alone. Representatives of five other companies said such a forecast cannot be made.

"I have every reason to believe that our success in the negotiations mark a major step toward ending the oil embargo," Kissinger told reporters.

• WASHINGTON — Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday he knows President Nixon had nothing to do with the 18.5-minute erasure of a key Watergate tape.

LEXTRAN needs a push

Lexington's mass transit system (LEXTRAN) has added a dimension specifically designed to aid student travel in the community.

The corporation is now selling student tickets for a reduced fare. The ticket is good for 10 rides (20 cents each). Each time the ticket is used LEXTRAN drivers will punch out one fare. Although the reduced fare is only five cents cheaper than the regular adult single ride fare, this is the first time in several years such an opportunity has been offered. Purchasing of tickets involves presenting a valid UK I.D. to sellers located at different spots on campus.

One drawback to extended use of the tickets is its validity Monday through Friday only. Few classes are held on the weekends. This cancels thoughts of using the reduced fare for shopping in the regional malls on the weekend.

Mass transit systems are slowly blooming across the country in an effort to cut back on energy consumption. With a gentle push from the participating public in its early stages, mass transit could become a reliable method of efficient transportation. LEXTRAN needs this push now.

Stay on the right track

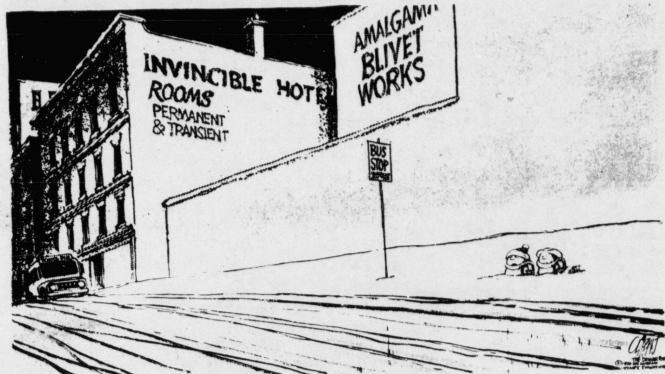

"Horsin' around", a story in the Jan. 17 Kernel (page 11) states the track team is being forced to practice at the Red Mile Trotting Track this winter because of scheduling conflicts at various campus locations.

Although we see how a horse barn could be less than adequate for the UK track team we don't agree with coach Paul Ward who contends a new fieldhouse is the answer of his problem. He says the fieldhouse could be used by several varsity teams as well as a recreational facility for students.

We consider the Seaton Center to be the fieldhouse of UK and although there were conflicts with scheduling this year we see no reason why members of the Athletic Department and the Intramural Program couldn't settle the scheduling problem before next winter. This would hush foolish talk of a new fieldhouse. Money for this idea would be better spent on some phase of the University's academic track.

Meal editorial sheds little light

In my opinion, the Kernel editorial on the proposed meal coupon system was very weak. The editorial shed no light on the system at all, as far as I could see.

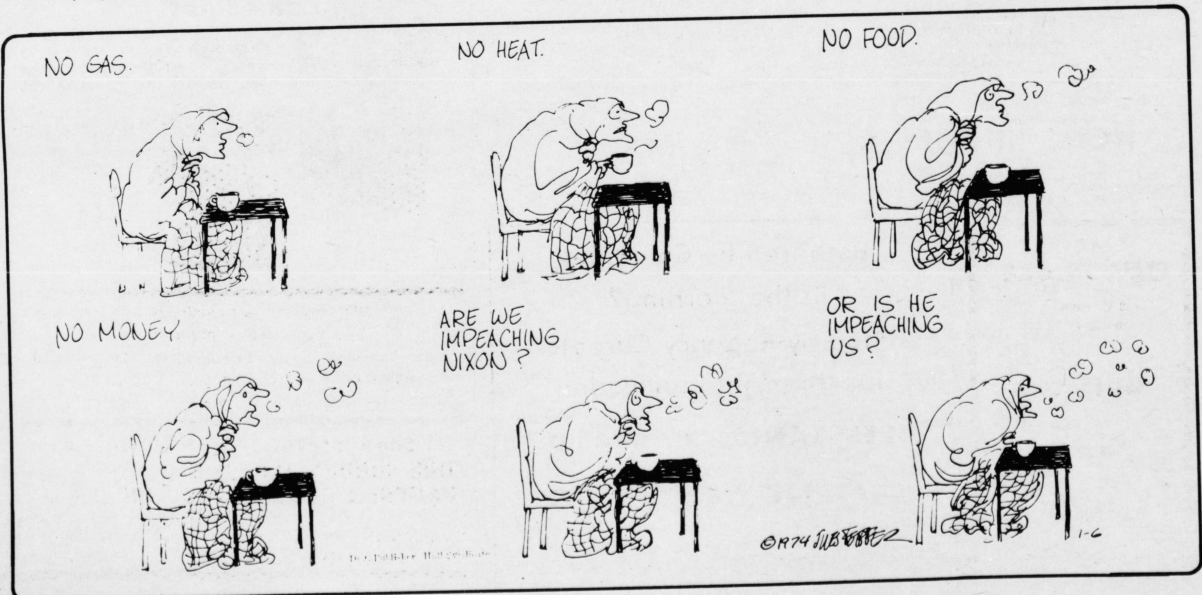

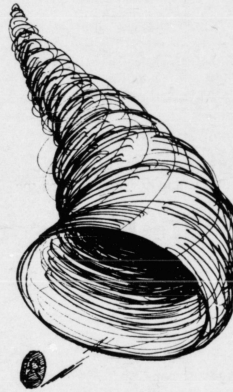

What, then is important about the plan? A trivial objection is to the awkwardness of the coupon book—it will be bulky to carry and easy to steal. But much more important is the problem of inflation. We all know how the various agribusiness concerns have created shortages and price hikes of late. Price hikes of this kind will be passed on to the student under the coupons system, whereas now the student is protected—the price of his/her meal has been paid in advance, before the price hike. This will especially hurt the scholarship students, students from oppressed minorities, students from working class families.

Students supporting the proposed system would do well to consider two other facts. First, the estimated daily (3 meal) coupon cost for a full meal will be $3.50. Multiply that by the number of serving days and you far exceed $700. Second this figure does not include seconds, which will be available, but which must be bought, whereas now, the cost of seconds is included in the cost of the meal ticket.

Meetings are being held this week in dorms all over campus. I urge everyone in every dorm to attend these meetings against the proposed coupon system. I urge everyone to write the Board of Trustees, requesting a rejection of the proposal. And, I urge everyone to attend the Board of Trustees meeting, Tuesday the 29th at 2 p.m., 18th floor of the Patterson Office Tower.

Possibly illegal

Stored gasoline hazardous

Persons trying to beat the energy crisis by purchasing gasoline and storing it in their vehicles or garages may be breaking the law—unless they've taken certain precautions.

Kentucky Fire Marshall Warren Southworth emphasized the possible illegality and dangers of such storage.

SOUTHWORTH QUOTED Kentucky statutes as saying "delivery of gasoline... shall not be made into portable containers of five-gallon capacity or less."

The containers referred to include those made of glass or plastic, but exclude, said Chief Deputy Fire Marshall Ernest Murphy, "those metal containers which are labelled as being safe and have a spill-proof spout."

The hazards involved in the storage and transportation of gasoline are largely due to the highly flammable nature of the fuel.

SHOULD AN automobile carrying gasoline in the trunk be struck from behind, it's likely the fuel will explode—even at the lightest impact.

A demonstration conducted by Southworth resulted in the destruction of one vehicle when the auto, containing a small amount of gasoline, was rammed by another vehicle traveling at only five miles per hour.

This is the result of a demonstration conducted to show what can happen to those who try to beat the current fuel shortage by carrying gas in the trunk of their car.

Other hazards include the danger of static ignition during the transference of the fuel from one container to another, as well as the possibility of gasoline fumes exploding at the most minute spark.

THOSE DRIVING "jacked-up" autos would do well to return the vehicles to their original height, since such vehicles are in danger of acquiring ruptured fuel tanks in case of an accident.

Despite what might be expected, however, storage of gasoline has not increased noticeably. Murphy attributes the lack of increase to public knowledge concerning the unstable nature of fuel.

OWS folds after seeking formal recognition from University

By WALLY HIXSON
Kernel Staff Writer

Organization for Winter Survival (OWS) has now folded, according to John Junot, the club's founder.

OWS sought formal University recognition at one time, but the move was never made.

"It got rained out there for a few days," said Junot, referring to his attempts to promote interest in the club. "Then finals came along and people just lost interest," he said.

To attain University recognition, an organization must register with Dean of Students Jack Hall. This requires the signature of the officers and a faculty representative. But, Junot said, "I couldn't even find anyone to be president."

A possible explanation for the lack of student following for OWS is that many students are skeptical as to whether or not there is an energy crisis. However, Junot said, this was irrelevant. "It doesn't matter if there is a real oil shortage or if it is a conspiracy by the oil companies. The fact remains that we are not getting enough oil," he said.

In order to survive the oil crisis, Junot said the country must return to "tinker toy technology". That is, people working individually or on a neighborhood basis rather than on a nationwide scale. Converting methane gas and starting bus lines operated by private individuals are examples of this.

In regard to the decline of OWS, Junot said he was "entirely prepared for it". He remembered standing on street corners selling apples to promote the organization. "People would ask me: don't you feel stupid standing out here in the rain?" he said. I told them that I would feel stupid if I didn't try to do something."

John Fisher, assistant director for admissions and records at the University of Minnesota noted that, even after tuition rates for Wisconsin residents were lowered, the university experienced no perceptible increase in enrollment.

"I think the number of students from Wisconsin is about the same as it was before," said Fisher. "I think a lot depends on what special programs are available to them, but this is not a limiting factor."

ONE CHANGE which did occur was the raising of non-resident admissions to Minnesota's veterinary school. Fisher said about 20 per cent of those admitted are from out of state, with many coming from Wisconsin.

On the other hand, Reciprocal Program Supervisor Arthur Gill at the University of Wisconsin noted that "traditionally, Wisconsin has had more Minnesota students than Minnesota has had going the other way."

Concerning Minnesota's loss of revenue from lowered rates without corresponding rise in enrollment, Gill said the state realizing the larger capital gain from the program would pay the difference to offset disproportionate deficits.

ASKED ABOUT the possibility of UK experiencing the same difficulties as Minnesota and Wisconsin, Vice president for Business Affairs Lawrence E. Forgy and Registrar Elbert W. Ockerman said it is simply impossible to tell for sure at this time.

"My judgement is the same as what has been experienced at Minnesota and Wisconsin," Ockerman said, but added he is having records prepared which will give an overall picture of non-resident enrollment between Kentucky and Tennessee.

Forgy, however, voiced support for the program and said he hopes for the program's success. He said reciprocity will make more convenient the educational opportunities of students and would have a "profound impact" on Western Kentucky University and Murray State University, both of which lie close to the Tennessee border and have experienced an enrollment deficiency.

"GENERALLY SPEAKING," Forgy said, "I think it's the kind of thing we should be working to achieve, to obtain the best educational opportunities for our students."

Gov. Ford releases biennium budget

The overall budget for UK is $155.5 million for 1974-75 and $164.5 million for 1975-76. Clapp noted that $16.5 million of the total budget for the University in each of the two fiscal years is "allocated balance".

ALLOCATED balances are funds that have previously been appropriated for certain projects but have not been paid out.

The governor also set aside another $9.7 million for capital construction. Funds for the projects are non-recurring and provide for initial building costs.

These projects, the amount allocated and the source of the money is as follows:

—HEALTH SCIENCES Learning Center, $4.5 million for 1974-75, federal revenue sharing funds;

—Lexington Technical Institute building, $6 million for 1975-76, federal revenue sharing funds;

—a new Fine Arts Building, $5.2 million, revenue bonds.

Ford also approved an allocation of $4 million for the Lexington Civic Center. This facility will be leased by the University for basketball games and other events.

A matching sum of $2 million from the state was proposed by Ford for the Research Center for Biology of the Aging, which would be located at the University. The same amount has been pledged by John Y. Brown Sr. for the facility.

A 45,000-square-foot Energy Research Center to be used in studying the development processes to convert coal to meet environmental standards was given $4 million in Ford's budget.

The facility will be located on state property adjacent to the Spindletop Research Center.

Ford proposed a $25 per year decrease in tuition for University of Louisville students for each of the two years, rejecting the $100 per year requested by the Council and the university.

FORD presented the budget to the legislators in an hour-long address in which he explained the advances made since the last budget was drawn up two years ago.

The speech was very favorable to the past legislature and the state as a whole in regard to conserving money during the past two years.

Ford's hour-long speech was interrupted some 30 times by applause from legislators and the packed gallery.

With juvenile sound New Yes album falls short

By RONALD D. HAWKINS
Kernel Staff Writer

Although Yes' Tales from Topographic Oceans has its good moments, the album features generally blah music with the good being rare and hard to remember.

Only Rick Wakeman rises above average in this almost totally weak album. His keyboard play continues to improve and place him in the company of such stylists as Keith Emerson and Nicky Hopkins. This performance follows The Sixth Wives of Henry the Eighth, Wakeman's brilliant solo album.

TALES FROM Topographic Oceans as a whole, however, gives the impression Yes is trying to do things beyond its reach. The album is a brave attempt, but the group falls short in its vocals, guitar playing and general musical direction.

The double record set is divided into four "movements", each of which fits into the album's theme of the beauty of spiritual search. It's a relevant theme, but it has already been covered by the Harrisons, Dylans, McLaughlins and even the Townshends of rock culture.

The "counter-culture" may still like the album for its non-Christian religious directions. Yet, Yes seems to be beating the subject into the ground—like many of the other ideas the counter-culture has adopted as its own.

Yes' choirboy vocals were pleasant for a few albums, but now their childlike sound is growing old. It seems time for Yes to grow up. Although music has long been regarded by philosophers as its own reality, Yes should be expected to progress to some degree.

Fortunately for Yes, Topographical Oceans will draw little AM radio play since there isn't much to find in the way of a single.

Many people will regard the lack of an outstanding single as a plus—in keeping with Yes' classical-rock tradition.

Such talk is nonsense. For, while much of Yes' work has been innovative, the great bulk is tentative and never reaches its full potential.

Give Yes a "C" for Topographical Oceans.

Drury, Ball State fall

Swimmers off to fast start

By JOHN VOGEL
Kernel Staff Writer

UK SWIM TEAM sparked in its first dual meet of the year crushing Drury College on Friday and Ball State on Saturday at the Memorial Coliseum pool.

A strong overall team performance was the key to the Wildcats fine showing.

Steve Stocksdale, UK's 200 yard backstroke specialist, paved the way for a surprisingly lopsided 71-35 victory over Drury. Stocksdale smashed the pool record for first place in his specialty. Swim coach Wynn Paul said he was "extremely pleased with Stocksdale's time for this early in the season."

ANOTHER HIGHLIGHT of Friday's meet was the performance of Bill Schwartz and Rick and Dave Rubenstein.

"Schwartz and Rick (Rubenstein) turned in good performances in the 200 yard individual medley" according to Paul. The pair finished one-two in the event.

"Dave Rubenstein gave us a tremendous swim in the 200 yard butterfly in taking first place in his event," Paul said.

THE BALL STATE meet attracted an enthusiastic crowd of 250 who cheered the Wildcats to a 68-38 triumph. Ball State had previously lost only to Purdue in four meets.

Though no records were set Saturday, Stocksdale again comprised an integral part in UK's victory when he tied the pool record he set Friday in the 200 yard backstroke. Mike Suchy put in a fine performance winning the 1000 yard freestyle in his best time of the season and finishing second in the 500 yard freestyle.

Phil Wilder's breathtaking victory in the 200 yard breaststroke and Bob Lohmeier's performance as the anchor man in the 400 yard medley relay sent a charge of excitement through the crowd.

BALL STATE MET its Waterloo in the 200 yard individual medley against three Dukes of Wellington: Dave Rubenstein taking first place, Schwartz with second and Richard Siggs coping third. Paul called it, "A triple good performance."

Paul said he "expected Ball State and Drury College to be a little stronger than they were. Our squad, though, has had far better times this year than last year at the same time. The team has confidence in itself."

Right-to-Life group packs state senate gallery

By RON MITCHELL, Kernel Staff Writer

FRANKFORT — Several hundred members of the Right-to-Life organization packed the state senate gallery Tuesday to witness the passage of an amended controversial anti-abortion resolution.

The resolution, which urges Congress to adopt a constitutional amendment "protecting all unborn human life," passed by a 34-4 vote.

ABOUT 100 of the spectators came from the Covington area, the others from Lexington and Louisville, according to Dr. Tom Donovan, vice chairman of the Northern Kentucky branch of the group.

Donovan insisted the group's presence was "in commemoration" of the first anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision that essentially nullified state laws prohibiting abortions.

The gallery remained silent throughout most of the time the senate was in session, although Lt. Gov. and Senate President Julian Carroll had to halt the applause after one senator spoke in favor of the resolution.

TWO OF the strongest opponents of the measure, Lexington senators Joe Graves and Mike Moloney, spoke briefly on why the resolution should not be adopted.

Graves, R-12th district, offered a minor amendment to the document, saying the present wording implied that no abortions could be performed at all, regardless of dangers to the woman's life.

Graves gave two reasons for opposing the legislation—the language is vague and it violates the rights of the individual—and requested the senators to oppose it.

"IT SEEMS to me that if we put ourselves in the Supreme Court's position—having heard all of the evidence on both sides of the issue—they are in a better position to make a fair decision, which I think they did," Graves said.

Moloney, D-13th district, also delivered a speech against the resolution saying it would be "dangerous" to oppose the Supreme Court's decision.

He did not deliver the address as originally planned, explaining that it was such an emotional issue, he could say very little about the legislature's action.
