Students scramble to cover tuition hike

Options: Working longer hours, finding scholarships, taking out loans can help pay increased tuition costs

By Lindsey Keith

Since UK increased tuition, students are searching for ways to cover the costs.

Tina Moch, a special education sophomore, has increased her workload at Texas Roadhouse since she heard of the tuition increase earlier this semester. She is certain she will have to work even more hours this summer to save enough money to cover the tuition increase.

"My grades are already suffering because of work. There is no way I could take on another job to cover the increase in tuition that is coming next fall semester," Moch said. She said she will try to take out more loans or get grants, but is worried she may not get them.

The Board of Trustees approved a 14 percent tuition increase March 18 to cover state budget cuts. The increase will raise $14.5 million in revenue for UK, but the school will still be at a deficit.

The increase for resident undergraduate students is $572 from last year. For non-resident undergraduate students, the increase is $700.

Tiffany Wohner, an undeclared freshman, decided to leave UK after she learned of the increase.

"I was leaning towards staying through at least next year, but the tuition increase was the last straw. After I heard of that I knew I wanted to leave," Wohner said.

But there are options, said Lynda George, director of Student Financial Aid.

"[Students] qualify for at least a loan; any student who has not qualified for financial aid before should come in and apply," George said.

Students who think they do not qualify for federal financial aid should search for other funding, she said.

Outside scholarships are your best bet," George said of how students can come up with extra tuition money if they do not qualify for need-based aid.

Great Britain's Princess Anne, center, greets UK President Lee Todd Jr. and his wife, Patsy, outside UK's Maxwell H. Gluck Equine Research Center on Nicholasville Road Saturday. Princess Anne toured the research center to learn how UK scientists are contributing to equine research, such as gene mapping and the study of diseases. Princess Anne visited Lexington to help open an art exhibit entitled "All the Queen's Horses: The Role of the Horse in British History." The exhibit, which opened Saturday, is showing through Aug. 24 at the Kentucky Horse Park.

Author: Leaders act like monkeys

Mostly male: Professor finds links between behavior of alpha-male primates and many world leaders

By Christy Freadreaux

CONTRIBUTING WRITER

When Arnold Ludwig set out to study all the great world leaders of the 20th century, he didn't expect to find that the typical ruler has a great deal in common with alpha male primates.

Ludwig, a UK professor emeritus in psychology, spent years researching 1,941 rulers in 199 countries to determine how they came to power and why military prowess is so important in elevating them. He published his findings in a book entitled King of the Mountain: The Nature of Political Leadership.

Political science professor Ernest Yanarella said Ludwig's work is bringing positive attention to UK.

"His earlier work has brought great respect and acclaim, and he is noted as a keen and subtle student of the human psyche and human heart," Yanarella said.

As Ludwig studied the rulers, he noticed several trends. After 18 years of research, Ludwig concluded that the most powerful leaders engaged in plenty of monkey business. Much like a strutting, puffing alpha male, many leaders liked to wear military finery and parade around in public. They were aggressive, starting conflicts and fiercely defending their territory.

Some had mistresses, harems and as many as 7,000 wives, just as alpha male primates have access to any females with whom they want to mate. Both alpha monkeys and alpha men have access to the best resources, commanding deference and submission from their followers.

Other trends he points out include the tendency for the top political positions to be filled by men. This situation mirrors that of primate group organization. Only 27 of the rulers Ludwig encountered were female, and almost all of those were wives or daughters of powerful men. Even those women who achieved political prowess were advised primarily by men, he said.

"Women are as bright, as talented, as capable — if not more so — than men," he said.

As he questioned why so few females rise to power, he found answers in the behaviors valued in a leader, many of which are not commonly fostered in females.

Ludwig developed his own scale for predicting greatness with seven major pillars: dominance, contrariness, presence, vanity, courage, wary unease and being a change agent. People who rank highly in these areas are often supremely confident and inspire a cult-like following. Often impatient, they tend to be risk takers and seek to change the nature of their societies.

The leaders he chronicled made drastic changes. A large majority of these leaders had some sort of military background and affected their countries through war.

"We're almost always at war," Ludwig said. "But in the 20th century, we've really outdone ourselves."

According to Ludwig, 200 million deaths can be attributed directly to war or to social policies instituted by political leaders. Ludwig searched for a common denominator among rulers who committed such atrocities. He found no similarities in their childhoods and

Robertson, Pinner picked in NFL draft

Payday: Former Cats will take their skills to NFL; Robertson drafted fourth overall, Pinner 99th

By Jeff Patterson

STAFF WRITER

The New York Jets turned Dewayne Robertson's dreams of playing in the National Football League into reality Saturday by drafting him fourth overall in the NFL Draft.

It was the highest any UK football player has been drafted since Tim Couch was the first overall pick by the Cleveland Browns in 1999.

Fans and players at Commonwealth Stadium applauded when they saw Robertson drafted on the video screens.

Some of Robertson's former teammates were unsure of his draft status when the Jets traded up from the 22nd pick with the Chicago Bears for the 4th pick.

UK defensive coordinator and former Pittsburgh Steeler linebacker coach Mike Archer told the players Saturday morning that Robertson would go fourth.

"I kind of knew it when the Jets traded up last night because a good friend of mine (Rubin Carter) is going to be Dewayne's coach," Archer said. "When Rubin was here for his workout in March he told me, 'If we could trade up to get him, we are going to take him.'"

Robertson, a second-team All-SEC performer last season, saw his stock rise dramatically from a projected early second-round pick through impressive workouts with NFL scouts.

But teams were raving about Robertson's speed and compared him to All-Pro Warren Sapp. The 317-pound Robertson ran the forty-yard dash in only 4.86 seconds.

"We'd love to have him back out here, but he is going to make a lot of money," Archer said.

Last season's SEC Offensive Player of the Year, Artose Pinner, joined his former teammate in the NFL ranks on Sunday. Pinner was drafted by the Detroit Lions in the fourth round with the 98th overall pick.

U.S. officials planning to keep bases in Gulf

Rumsfeld: U.S. 'intends to do what is necessary to make sure there is a secure environment in Iraq'

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — The United States wants to keep using military bases in friendly Persian Gulf countries, including a high-tech command center in Qatar where planners directed the war in Iraq, U.S. officials said Sunday.

Officials are considering moving the air operations center at Prince Sultan Air Base in Saudi Arabia, which ran the Iraq air war. One possibility is a shift to the Qatar base, Camp As Sayiyah.

Gen. Tommy Franks, the top war commander, and Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld met with officials in the United Arab Emirates on the first stop of a tour of the region. After talks with the UAE's defense minister and chief of staff, Rumsfeld and Franks said American military forces were not going to leave any time soon.

"We assured them that the United States intends to do what is necessary to make sure there is a secure environment in Iraq," Rumsfeld said.

"There's no question but that the people of this region are safer today than they were when the Saddam Hussein regime was in power."

Rumsfeld is in the region to meet with U.S. troops involved in the war in Iraq and to discuss America's role after overthrowing Saddam. Rumsfeld also plans to visit Afghanistan this week to see government leaders and U.S. troops.

Man attacked with chain saw

Women are as bright, as talented, as capable — if not more so — than men.

Arnold Ludwig, UK professor emeritus in psychology, discussing the dearth of women as top-ranking leaders. Ludwig studied 1,941 leaders in 199 countries throughout the 20th century. He found only 27 women in top leadership roles.

CAMPBELLSVILLE, Ky. — A Campbellsville man has been arrested and charged in two attacks — one of them with a chain saw — that occurred in two central Kentucky counties early Saturday morning. Jeffrey Craig Dudgeon, 39, was arrested by police just after noon Saturday according to a statement from the Taylor County Sheriff's Department. He was charged with two counts of first-degree assault. Police received a call that Jimmy Dowell had been assaulted in his home in Green County by a man wielding a chain saw. Dowell was taken to University of Louisville Hospital, where he was recovering from surgery Saturday evening. His condition was not known. A second attack happened about an hour later in Taylor County at the home of Sally Dudgeon. Dudgeon suffered several stab wounds to her chest and neck. She was being treated at Taylor County hospital.

Report: KSU needs funds, leaders

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Kentucky State University is in desperate need of strong, stable leadership for the long term, a team of experts concludes in a report delivered Friday. In addition, the state's smallest university needs more state funding to support part of its mission — educational access to students who are poorly prepared — though it often wastes some of the money it already has. And though being small also is part of its mission, enrollment needs a boost if for no other reason than economy of scale, the report says. The report was released at a joint meeting of KSU's board of regents and the Council on Postsecondary Education. The regents' chairman, William Wilson of Lexington, said his board intended to get to work on the report's recommendations immediately. "The issue becomes execution," Wilson said. "We will step up to the plate. We will execute the plan."

U.S. arrests 'mayor' of Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The U.S. military arrested a political pretender in Baghdad on Sunday, while a Shiite Muslim group signaled a new willingness to cooperate on the eve of a pivotal U.S.-sponsored conference to help form a provisional government for Iraq. The arrest of Mohammed Mohsen al-Zubaidi reflected U.S. determination to brook no interlopers in its effort to build a consensus for administering Iraq. Timed just before Monday's high-profile conference, it sent a clear message: Don't meddle.

COPPERLINE: James Taylor didn't have a guitar or even a microphone when he sang during the weekend, and he was backed up by North Carolina Gov. Mike Easley and the Chapel Hill High School band. The song was "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the occasion was a ceremony to unveil a sign naming a bridge in his honor. The "James Taylor Bridge" sign will soon be posted where U.S. 15-501 South crosses Morgan Creek. The award-winning singer and songwriter spent much of his childhood in Chapel Hill in a home near the creek, and the memories inspired his hit song "Copperline." Taylor told the crowd of hundreds he felt strongly connected to the area, and he remembered waiting for the school bus and seeing a group of inmates chained together as they worked on the highway, while a truckload of chickens passed by. "It was a different time," he said Saturday. "Things have gotten a lot better in many ways. Things have gotten more complicated, too."

The defense secretary has said the United States is considering reducing or rearranging its presence in the Persian Gulf region now that the threat from Iraq is over.

But Franks said a possible reduction in the American use of ports and air bases in the UAE did not come up Sunday. He said the issues needs more study.

Franks said the U.S. military presence in the region might increase, at least in the short term, as stability and humanitarian relief missions in Iraq and Afghanistan continue.

The United States also wants to keep using the Qatar command center built just before the war and used by Franks as his headquarters for the Iraq campaign.

"We do know that we want to use it, now that we have it," Franks said.

Rumsfeld and Franks said they are pleased with progress in the search for top members of Saddam's government. Ordinary Iraqis are a big help, Franks said.

"They want these people out of their country," Franks said.

U.S. forces announced Sunday they had captured Lt. Gen. Hossam Mohammed Amin, Saddam's chief contact with U.N. weapons inspectors.

Amin was No. 49 on the U.S. list of 55 most wanted Iraqis. His capture brings to 13 the number of officials on that list whom U.S. officials have acknowledged as being in custody.

Former Iraqi deputy prime minister Tariq Aziz seems to be cooperating with his American interrogators but his claims must be checked to see if they are true, Franks said.

Aziz turned himself in to U.S. forces in Baghdad on Thursday.

"How cooperative and how truthful he is, we'll have to see over time," Franks said.

The general said the United States will have to search several thousand sites for evidence of Iraq's chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs.

American forces started the war with a list of about 1,000 suspect sites, and for each site on the list, Iraqis tell Americans about one or two others, Franks said.

U.S. troops found about a dozen 55-gallon drums in an open field in northern Iraq, and initial tests indicated one of them contained a mixture of a nerve agent and mustard agent, an American officer said Sunday.

Iraq is becoming more stable and secure every day, Franks said, but it is up to President Bush and Rumsfeld to decide when to declare that major combat is over. Tensions inside Iraq still simmer, he said.

"There is a great deal of uncertainty. There is a great deal of fear," Franks said. "There are tribal animosities.

There are religious animosities."

In Abu Dhabi, Rumsfeld and Franks said they thanked the UAE leaders for their war help, which included sending troops to Kuwait and humanitarian aid to Iraq. UAE officials did not speak to journalists or issue a statement after the talks.

Franks and Rumsfeld met with Crown Prince Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed Al Nahyan, the son of the UAE president. The UAE's defense minister, Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, and chief of staff of the armed forces, Lt. Gen. Sheikh Mohammad Zayed Al Nahyan, also participated.

U.S. troops have used bases in the UAE since the 1991 Persian Gulf War, in which the UAE joined the coalition to oust Saddam's invading forces from Kuwait. American aircraft using the al-Dhafra air base near Abu Dhabi have included U-2 and Global Hawk surveillance planes as well as refueling tankers.

The UAE government has not indicated it wants to close off its bases to the United States, a U.S. official said Sunday.

The UAE's concerns include a territorial dispute with Iran over three small islands in the Persian Gulf.

U.S. officials say the UAE also has helped in the war on terrorism, and a top former Iraqi nuclear weapons scientist, Jaffar al-Jaffar, turned himself in to authorities in the UAE after fleeing Iraq through Syria.

LEADERS

none in the type of interests they pursued outside of the military. Ludwig concluded that the corrupting denominator is likely power itself.

Another major trend in political leaders is one not likely to be admired by the people.

The number of leaders who were alcoholics, drug addicts or manic-depressives surprised Ludwig. There were also a considerable number society would classify as crazy, and some had actually suffered brain damage. Most of them never sought help, out of stubbornness or because they were advised not to for the sake of their images.

"Some of his conclusions don't seem unreasonable. Patton and Clinton had mistresses, and Bush was willing to go to war," said Bryan Gnaul, a UK sophomore.

Ludwig would not comment on whether or not our current leaders embody any of the tendencies he found.

Are You Experiencing Anti-Christian Bigotry on Campus?

Deliberate discrimination against Christians is now the official—or unofficial, but actual—policy at an increasing number of publicly funded colleges and universities.

In the name of "diversity" and "tolerance," schools are systematically violating the rights of students who follow Jesus. Are you or a campus Christian group to which you belong being singled out for unfair treatment? The answer may be "yes" if your school:

- Dictates leadership standards, including requiring leadership positions be open to students who don't believe in your group's mission (think of an atheist Bible study leader!).
- Restricts where or when your group can meet or engage in expressive activities, but places no such limitations on other groups that, for instance, advocate radical feminism or abortion.
- Enforces a speech code that limits you or your group's right to speak disapprovingly of extramarital sexual, homosexual, or other behaviors.
- Restricts how or where your group can advertise (i.e. speech zones), or censors the ads' content—but places no such requirements on other student groups' ads.
- Mandates "diversity training" that attempts to force you to affirm behavior or viewpoints that violate your faith or conscience.
- Applies one set of rules for Christian groups seeking access to the student fee funding pool, and other rules for secular student organizations.

Hand-me-down junk or valuable antiques?

Could you be rich? If Grandma gives you a couch, it might be worth more than you ever thought

By Moira Bagley
STAFF WRITER

You could be sitting on a gold mine.

Take a look around your house and notice all the old furniture you have inherited from friends and relatives. It's possible that a chest of drawers, a couch or even your bed frame could be valuable antiques.

It can be hard to tell whether or not you have a valuable piece without taking it to an antique dealer. Maury Bederman, of the Old Hitching Post, an antique store on Clay Avenue, offered advice for people questioning the value of eclectic home furnishings.

"Hand-hewn wood, hand-pegged pieces and dovetailed joints are all signs to look for when determining whether or not you have an antique piece of furniture on your hands," Bederman said.

"There are also many other things to take into account when inspecting an item, such as condition, solid wood construction and the age of the piece.

At Heritage Antiques, manager David Field said he receives calls every day from people questioning the value of an antique. He can give a ballpark estimate over the phone, but without actually looking at a piece, it's virtually impossible to give an accurate appraisal.

"Valuable antiques aren't just limited to furniture and fine china, either," Field said. "Paintings, silver and older toys are also valuable items."

Those who have watched Antiques Roadshow know the possibility of having a valuable piece under your nose and not even knowing it.

On the show, people bring in antiques and have them appraised by professional antique appraisers. Sometimes the people are nicely surprised by the estimated value, and other times they can be deeply disappointed when they find out their piece is worth less than they bought it for.

"Not all antiques are great finds and great investments," Field said.

The only way to know if you have a valuable piece is to bring it to a dealer and get it appraised.

You never know you might be able to pay off your student loans with your kitchen table.

“Not all antiques are great finds and great investments.”

Cats conclude spring ball in impressive fashion

Practice makes perfect: Head coach Rich Brooks pleased with his team's final spring performance

By Jeff Patterson
STAFF WRITER

After Arliss Beach fumbled the opening kickoff of the Blue/White game, the White team had to know that they would be in for a long afternoon.

In UK's final practice of the spring, the Blue team, consisting of first-team offensive and defensive units, dominated the White team 39-0.

Despite such a lopsided score, UK coaches were fairly satisfied with the outcome. "I was pleased with what the defense did because when (first-team defense) went against the twos, we expected them to be three and out," defensive coordinator Mike Archer said. "The first six possessions were three and out, and from that sense it was encouraging. It was a good way to end the spring on."

The White team, consisting of second and third team units, did not manage a first down until the last play of the first half when backup quarterback Rocco Maragas scrambled for 11 yards. The White team only scrapped together four first downs, while the Blue team had 23.

Quarterbacks Shane Boyd and Jared Lorenzen capped off a splendid spring by adding the wide receiver position to their resumes. In the second quarter, Lorenzen connected with the H-receiver, Boyd, down the middle for a 58-yard gain for the Blue squad.

"We made the right read and I made the catch," Boyd said. "It's part of our game plan."

Boyd later returned the favor by completing a 6-yard pass to Lorenzen.

Lorenzen was the stellar

16-for-23 passing for 297 yards, including a 13-yard touchdown strike to an outstretched Derek Abney in the corner of the endzone to give the Blue team an early 10-0 lead in the first quarter.

The versatile Boyd was 5-for-9 passing for 79 yards. He also ran for 30 yards on seven carries.

"Shane is a great running back, but he is also a great receiver and a great quarterback," said Lorenzen. "You've got to put him somewhere where he can make plays."

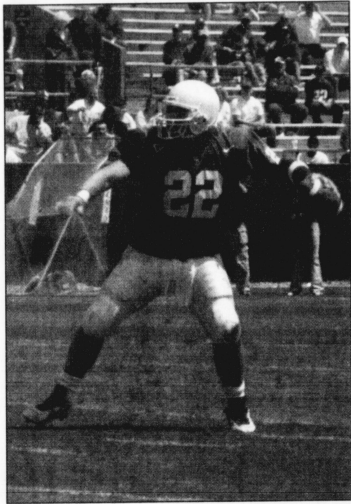

Alexis Bwenge came away from the game as the front-runner for the tailback position, at least until Draak Davis, a junior-college All-American transfer, comes this fall to challenge for the spot. Bwenge rushed for three touchdowns and 64 yards on 12 carries.

The receiver position looks to be in good shape with Abney, Tommy Cook and Glenn Holt being the primary targets. Abney caught eight passes for 112 yards and one touchdown. Holt concluded a productive spring by catching three passes for 68 yards. Cook caught two passes for 49 yards.

Some of the questions on defense appear to be answered, namely at cornerback. Bo Smith and Antoine Huffman stepped up their game in the final ten days of practice to give UK the coverage it needs.

"We have four corners who we are comfortable putting into the game," UK head coach Rich Brooks said. "In this conference, with the speed of the receivers that we will be facing, it is a critical thing to have."

The Cats also fixed some of the missed assignments,

Spring fever

Quarterback Jared Lorenzen fires a pass in Saturday's Blue/White scrimmage. Lorenzen shared time at quarterback with Shane Boyd, and the two shared the same backfield several times.

and the "false starts went down completely" for the first-team offensive line.

"They are the greatest people in the world," Lorenzen said of his offensive line. "They protect my butt every game and I love them for it."

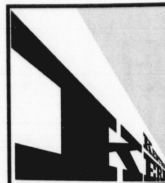

UK punters battled high snaps and oncoming blockers all afternoon. Anthony Thornton did boot one for 59 yards with the assist to several bounces. There was one blocked punt and the White team fumbled the ball, mostly off the snap, six times, luckily recovering them all.

Addressing the punting situation will be a top priority, as UK coaches will look to avoid a promising season gone awry.

"If we do a lot of good things on offense and defense, it can all go down the toilet if we don't punt the ball well," Brooks said.

GymKats coach retires after 28 years at UK

Big shoes to fill: After building gymnastics program, Leah Little retires, leaving behind a brilliant legacy

UK ATHLETICS

Leah Little, who built the Wildcat's gymnastics program into one of the UK's most popular varsity sports, announced her retirement Friday after 28 seasons.

Little, a two-time Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year, started the program in 1974-75 and is considered by many a pioneer in helping integrate women's athletics into the collegiate environment.

Little

"As someone who was raised in Lexington and who bleeds blue for this athletics program, this was a very emotional decision for me," Little said. "But I've reached a point in my life where I'm ready for a new challenge, and likewise, I think it's time this program gets a fresh look."

The gymnastics program began as a club sport, and as a result of Title IX, a law requiring gender equity in educational offerings, the GymKats reached varsity status in 1980. In the past 23 years, Little's teams have reached the NCAA Regionals 16 times. Highlights of her career include eight gymnasts advancing to the NCAA Championships, three earning All-America recognition and 77 earning Academic All-SEC awards, including 47 who earned scholastic All-American honors.

"I've been here nine months, but one of the first things I learned about Leah was that many identify her as UK gymnastics, and there's no question she has been a fixture around this athletics department for many, many years," said Mitch Barnhart, UK's Director of Athletics. "She's had an outstanding career, a terrific run. She will be difficult to replace, but we wish her well in her retirement."

Little's crowning achievement was coaching All-American Jenny Hansen to eight national championships during a three-year period from 1993-95, which still ranks as the most individual national titles ever won in women's collegiate gymnastics. Hansen broke nearly every NCAA record, becoming the first gymnast to capture four event championships in a season, record 25 perfect scores and win three all-around championships.

Building relationships with student-athletes has to be the first and foremost memory I will have of this gymnastics program," Little said. "I've been blessed with so many highlights in my career there are too many to list. But Jenny's run was a dream come true. She will always rank as one of the finest student-athletes, collegiate gymnastics has ever seen."

"Overall, I'm excited about the direction that Mitch Barnhart is taking this athletics program. There's a new environment here that emphasizes all sports. I will continue to tailgate, go to basketball games and be involved in this University community. After all, coaching this program has been the best experience of my life and I can't help but miss it."

Little is responsible for creating "Excite Nite," an annual event the past 20 years that serves as the official start to the upcoming season. It's raved on campus only by Big Blue Madness, the first official practice by the men's basketball team. Yet, each January, Excite Nite helps fill Memorial Coliseum with a themed show and gymnastics event.

Barnhart has not set a timetable on naming Little's replacement.

She's had an outstanding career, a terrific run."

Dawgs slam Bat Cats, 12-0

Shutout: Bat Cats lose rubber match, but win two out of three over Georgia this weekend in Lexington

By Ben Roberts
STAFF WRITER

The Bat Cats are still in search of their first conference sweep of the season after dropping Sunday's series closer 12-0 to the visiting Georgia Bulldogs.

UK (18-24, 6-14 SEC) was shutout for only the second time this season, but they did manage to take its second consecutive SEC series of the year after defeating the Bulldogs in both games of Saturday's doubleheader.

Reigning SEC pitcher of the week Scott Wade took the loss for UK, slipping to 2-5 on the season. The senior started the game on only one day of rest after pitching the first three innings of Friday's series opener.

"It was pretty tough to come back out here," Wade said. "I didn't feel like I had anything behind my pitches today. They just came out and beat us. There's not much you can say about that."

Wade surrendered six runs off eight hits while striking out three Bulldog batters over 3 1/3 innings. After the game, coach Keith Madison defended his decision to start the right-hander on such short rest.

"I thought it was the right thing to do," Madison said. "He only threw 25 pitches Friday night and he looked good. I thought he came out with good velocity today. He just got the ball up in the zone."

The UK bullpen didn't fare much better after Wade captured the contest in the fourth inning, giving up six more Bulldog runs in just over five innings of work. In all, six Bat Cat relievers took the mound.

Another low point for

UK Sunday afternoon was its lackluster performance at the plate. After managing 17 runs on 22 hits in the first two games of the series, the Cats could muster only six hits on Sunday, never crossing home plate.

"We don't stay on balls and drive them like in Friday and Saturday's game," Madison said. "We need to work on being more consistent in our approach at the plate." Junior Joe Nail went 2-3 with two singles, which made him the only UK batter with a multi-hit game. Senior Brad Pickrell gave credit to Georgia for coming out ready to play on Sunday.

"They hit the ball a lot better today than they did on Friday and Saturday," Pickrell said. "You have to give them some credit for hitting that well and pitching that well."

UK track and field team perform well at Penn Relays

The UK track and field teams closed out competition at the Penn Relays in Philadelphia, Pa., on Saturday. The team competed in the women's and men's 4 x 800 meter relay teams in the event's final day, taking second and third, respectively.

The women's team, comprised of Roseline Addo, Caitlin Phillips, Brooke Patterson and Beth Heimann, finished second in its race with a time of 8:31.24. The men's team of Hunter Spencer, Paul Ciarlurs, James Doaty and David Freeman crossed the line in 7:18.77, setting a new school record.

The previous record of 7:19.10 was set at the Penn Relays in 2000 by Spencer, Thomas Morgan, Chard Johnson and Jeff Lamber.

The Cats return to action on Friday at the Stanford Cardinal Invitational in Palo Alto, Calif.

Men's golf finishes ninth in NCAA tune-up

The UK men's golf team finished in ninth place at the SEC men's golf tournament, at the par-70 Sea Side Golf Course, on Sunday. The Cats shot a third-round 289 to finish with a 59-over par 899 for the weekend. UK finished eighth in last year's tournament, which was held at the same venue. Florida won the tournament with a 16-over 856.

Mark Blakefield finished in 28th place with a three day 222, 12-over par, to lead UK. John Holmes was one stroke behind in 29th with a 13-over 223. Brandon Waldrop finished in 43rd with a 228, while Matt Kohn with a 230 and Ryan Coyne with a 239, finished 46th and 55th.

This was UK's final tournament before selections are made for the NCAA regional championships, which will begin on Thursday, May 15.

Women's tennis coach runs Boston Marathon

UK women's tennis coach Mark Guilbeau participated in and finished the 107th Boston Marathon Monday in a time of 3:08.56. This was the UK coach's third consecutive year running in the marathon and his fourth overall.

Guilbeau, who is an avid runner, has competed in a total of 10 marathons and has a personal-best time of 2:40.00. Guilbeau, who was missing his running mate and former tennis player Christy Sigurski also said the event teaches several lessons, which he uses as inspiration to be able to compete in the 26.2 mile test race.

"This race teaches a great lesson in perseverance, relentless effort and positive thinking," he said. "And I am inspired in these traits by the members of the UK women's tennis team. Much of the time running was spent thinking about them and due to that it was a fun day."

Guilbeau's finishing time on Monday automatically qualifies him for next year's race.

Democrats should sell party better

I admit it, some things I just don't comprehend.

I completely understand the need for the nine prominent candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination to engage in a spirited debate (May 3), allowing those who are interested, albeit not a great many at the moment, to get a better feel for the candidate they might pick over President Bush.

There is also nothing wrong with hosting an event in South Carolina, which, despite its questionable past, remains, along with Iowa and New Hampshire, one of the most crucial state battlegrounds for those who pursue the presidency.

No, President Clinton did not win in South Carolina in 1992, but Bush won a key victory over Sen. John McCain there in 2000, perhaps one of the roughest and toughest political battles since at least the 1988 general election. South Carolina is critical, no one disputes that, and the Democratic Party needs to improve its chances in the South. And few states are more southern than the first state to secede from the union.

The South Carolina Democratic Party failed to get Alex Sanders elected to the U.S. Senate in 2002, so now they're trying again, and that's to be expected and admirable. South Carolina, once a bastion of Democratic politics, has gone dead-red in the last quarter of a century, and, accordingly, President Bush won the state by 16 points in 2000.

I only ask this. Just what kind of a message do you send when you hold such a gathering (at least initially) at a certain theater named after a certain southern "patriot"?

Longstreet Theatre, named after one of the most fervent secessionists and rigorous defender of slavery, should absolutely not be used for such a forum. Democrats have appropriately, I think, criticized the president for failing to take a stronger stance against the flying of the Confederate flag at the statehouse in Columbia, or Georgia's state flag, and have rightly asserted that the G.O.P. is not quite as hostile to the old Confederacy as it should be.

Now, if the Republican Party hosted such an event at the Longstreet Theatre, cynics would assail the party for pandering to the base and engaging in wholly inappropriate honoraria. That is clearly not what the Democrats are doing, although we'd be remiss not to add that if Longstreet were still alive, two of the candidates would have been admitted over his dead body.

Longstreet was an intellectual who used scriptures to validate his misguided notions, but it is not for us to single him out as a despicable human being, because we must remember the context of the era. It was different back then, an absolutely inferior and disappointing era to be sure, but different.

The larger issue is why the Democratic Party surely rather thorough in its research, feels it has to embrace this embarrassing form of campaigning, where it tries, often in vain, to persuade everyone that it's not big, bad, libs from the Northeast or other progressive areas.

In its last attempt at finding gold in South Carolina, the party showcased a candidate who spoke in a drawl and campaigned with rifles — and the electorate didn't buy it. All they saw, and not in very positive light, was Tom Daschle. Because they knew, no matter how "down-home" the candidate seemed, at the end of the day, Sanders was going to vote with Daschle.

The Democratic Party would be far better served to avoid their carefully-rehearsed "southern" rhetoric and just engage the president on the issues. Yes, it is true that many of these candidates hang out with individuals that many in South Carolina distrust at best, and despise at worst, but results, or principled program offerings, ought to count for something.

South Carolina is not New Hampshire, but in many respects that is quite unavoidable. What is avoidable is the erroneous doctrine that the loyal opposition needs to act G.O.P.-like in "selected areas," or it has zero chance of winning a national election. Such a tactic worked with Clinton and almost with Gore, but times are, or at least ought to be, a-changin'.

Even if the Democratic Party realizes the firestorm it has created and opts for a change in venue, the point remains the same. Gov. Dean, Sen. Kerr and Congressman Kucinich are who they are, and at some juncture, they're going to have to act to change the lingering disposition (born out of a plethora of Civil Rights legislation of the 1960s) of anger and bitterness toward the Democratic Party, and not attempt to put on a different face in a different place just because something doesn't sell well. So sell it better.

IN THEIR OPINION

America should start accepting, not appeasing

Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Penn., has received a flurry of criticism because of his comments outlining a 1986 court decision that banned "homosexual acts." This comes at a time when the Supreme Court wrestles with a similar case and is due to release a decision in June. In his statement, Santorum compared sodomy to incest, bigamy and adultery, saying that by allowing one, then all others would be permitted.

Santorum's comments were not necessarily out of line, as they merely echo the current law of the country. To blast Santorum would be to attack the country as a whole for the law that prohibits sexual acts between homosexual couples. That is, in itself, the problem.

The 1986 Supreme Court decision is outdated and based on ultra-conservative views that allows the government to say what you can and cannot do in your own home. It is time for a change so that homosexuals can feel as safe with their own sexual practices as any other couple in private.

To equate sodomy with incest and polygamy is simply a poor comparison. When done purely between two consenting persons, it effects no one but themselves. The jury is still out in terms of prolonged physical effects of such practices, but that is irrelevant. No one, besides the consenting parties, is party to the act, whereas incest and polygamy have societal repercussions that reach far beyond the bedroom. A child raised to believe incest is OK and not made aware of the genetic repercussions and can easily be taken advantage of. Polygamy may be more of a moral call as well, but it is still much more visible in society than sodomy.

Perhaps America would be much more accepting if it knew that oral sex falls into that category. Because of that, this is a controversy that extends much further than the homosexual community. If the Supreme Court rules that homosexual practices are permissible — and it should — it will be another step in abolishing the "blue laws" that restrict our rights as free citizens.

Santorum is distinctly pro-family, and in a way his views are merely those of someone who wants to maintain the concept of a "traditional family" in our society. As he said, "I have no problem with homosexuality. I have a problem with homosexual acts." This seems to be the clichéd "accepting attitude" in today's American society. Even the Presbyterian Church allows homosexuals to be ordained, but still considers sodomy a sin. It's time for America to stop trying to appease the middle and start accepting.

The idea of a "traditional family" is evolving, but as long as Santorum and other ultra-conservatives continue to pervade our government, there's little hope for change.

Mayor should have worked to keep center open

When she first won the election, many in Lexington, including me, doubted whether Mayor Teresa Isaac was up to the task of running our city.

Just a few months into her tenure, the mayor has quieted the critics who accuse her of being "too liberal" and has put our city on notice that progress, the underlying fear of the Lexington elite, will not take place under her administration.

Yes, our forward-thinking mayor has decided that, in light of the budget crisis in Lexington, the city won't be able to continue funding the Carnegie Center, Lexington's hub for writing and literacy.

One of my first post-high school memories is taking a class at the Carnegie Center. I'm not illiterate, nor was I when I got to college. I know this is hard to believe; humor me.) Still, working with writing instructors helped me improve my grammar, style and ability. Literacy is not a goal to be accomplished; it's a skill to be kept sharp.

The state of Kentucky has among the lowest literacy rates in the nation. What a sad statement, that in the richest country on Earth we can't even afford to teach our illiterate to read. Literacy can be the difference between surviving and thriving, and a well-educated populace is good for our state and our city.

In a democracy where the power rests with the people, we have a vested interest in helping people better themselves. An educated populace will govern itself better; it will make better choices, elect better leaders and keep the politicians accountable.

Unfortunately, there are those who have a vested interest in keeping the population down. Is it any wonder that the television stations cheer on our war-mongering president, while the print media has been much more critical?

What does this mean in a city that doesn't consider literacy to be important? Closing the Carnegie Center will effectively leave Lexington's illiterate in the lurch. Any glance through the Herald-Leader's editorial page will reveal that Lexingtonians are of exactly one mind about the center: I doubt even 10 percent want it to close.

In a time of so much bad news and turmoil, it is tempting to shut the world out, let the TV tell us what to think and not really consider the way our world is being managed. We've been kept passive by embedded reporters and flashy diagrams, but we've lost our ability to question our leaders effectively.

The Carnegie Center isn't just for those who can't read. It's a community resource, an asset that can help us all improve our writing skills and learn to analyze more effectively. Since its days as Lexington's public library, the building has been a place of community learning and improvement for so many people in our city.

If the Carnegie Center closes for a lack of funding, Isaac will have some tough questions to answer from her supporters. We naive students who saw her as the antithesis of arch-conservative Scott Crossbie are forced to consider if he, too, would have stopped funding the center.

Isaac has let her constituency down. Her decision to stop funding our literacy center is backward and irresponsible, and we voters must give her office grief while the Carnegie Center still has a chance.

Despite the lack of a good night life, the terrible public transportation and a street grid designed by M.C. Escher, Lexington is a beautiful city, brimming over with potential to become a great city. Our people are our greatest asset, and their literacy and intellect should be our highest priority, not our last. Shame on Isaac for letting all of us down.
