Bakker trial pending psychiatric evaluation

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Bakker was committed to a mental institution in handcuffs and manacles yesterday after a psychiatrist reported the television evangelist was hallucinating and covering in a fetal position in his lawyer's office.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's fraud trial and ordered him taken to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner, N.C., for up to 60 days for psychiatric evaluation.

"Please don't do this to me," a sobbing, disheveled Bakker said as he was led from his lawyer's office by U.S. marshals to the courthouse for processing of the commitment order. He curled up in a fetal position in the back seat.

"Mr. Bakker, I'm going to have to ask you to sit up, please," a deputy marshal said.

After the paperwork was completed, marshals left for Butner, about three hours away, where Bakker will be spending his first night behind bars since the PTL scandal broke. The evangelist is accused of fleeing followers of his evangelical empire.

Dr. Basil Jackson, a psychiatrist who has been treating Bakker for nine months, told the judge that Bakker began hallucinating Wednesday after a former PTL executive testifying against him collapsed on the stand. The witness was revived within seconds and said he was laid low by illness.

"Mr. Bakker reported that when he left the courthouse Wednesday, suddenly people outside took on the form of frightening animals which he felt were intent on destroying him, attacking him and hurting him," Jackson said.

Jackson said Bakker's condition worsened overnight, even after he was given Xanax, an anti-depress-sant sedative. Bakker was not in court for the hearing.

Yesterday morning Bakker "was lying in the corner of his attorney's office with his head under a couch, hiding," Jackson said. "He was expressing thoughts that someone was going to hurt him."

"To put it in lay language, the man is stressed out," Jackson said later.

Prosecution and defense lawyers are under court order not to discuss the trial outside of the courtroom. But during the hearing, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller described the psychiatrist as a "hired gun."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Scofield said most pre-trial psychiatric evaluations take about 45 days. And the judge told jurors, who were not told the reason for the suspension in the trial, that it could resume as early as Wednesday.

Kentucky education officials seek the ideal school system

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — An ideal public school system would have enlightened leadership, generous financing, a strong sense of mission and the backing of a motivated public, educators said yesterday.

But in Kentucky the group said there are several obstacles: direction from the top that shifts with the political seasons; hand-to-mouth funding; underpaid and overworked teachers; and a public that has neither an appreciation for education nor the will to pay for it.

"We are not preparing our kids to go out in the world and compete," said Charles Terrett, superintendent of Fulton County schools.

Terrett was one of the educators invited to a roundtable yesterday sponsored by a committee of the Task Force on Education Reform.

The task force, 21 voting members from the General Assembly and Gov. Wallace Wilkinson's staff, was created to redesign Kentucky's school system. It was prompted by the state Supreme Court's ruling in June that the current system is unconstitutional.

The conference, which began yesterday, brought together teachers, principals, school superintendents and board members, and private citizens for two days of brainstorming at Kentucky State University.

The conferees harmonized on several points, including a call for more money for education.

Terrett said too few Kentuckians value education — an attitude reflected in its politicians, who have not pushed for the taxes that a good school system needs.

"The reason we are here today is that we have failed to make that commitment," Terrett said.

William Hardin, principal of Washington County High School in Springfield, said many local schools frequently have mandates imposed from Frankfort, but they have no money to implement the programs.

Faye King, principal of Stanton Elementary School in Stanton, seemed to voice the consensus. "Give me the resources," she said. "Hold me accountable."

Several complained of a lack of leadership continuity from the Department of Education, where the state superintendent is limited to a single term in office.

"What we find is our agenda changes every four years with a new superintendent," said Connie Allen, principal of a Warren County elementary school.

New class helps ease adjusting to college

By ROBYN WALTERS
Contributing Writer

UK freshmen have a new opportunity to take part in a special orientation class that is designed to ease the transition from high school to college.

"The course is designed to help freshmen get on the right track with college," said Christa Collins, a speech pathology sophomore and one of the student assistants to the class.

The syllabus for the eight-week class, called UK 100, includes topics such as study skills, learning how to use the library system and getting the most from an academic adviser.

Beth Wakefield, a forestry freshman, said she took the class because it was recommended during her summer advising conference. "I really like it and it has helped a whole lot. It helps orient you to campus. I don't know what I'd do if I hadn't taken it," she said.

One focus of the class that impressed course instructor Jane Peters was the study-skills sessions.

Kevin Tabler, a communications freshman, said he decided to take the class to improve his study skills.

Lisa Keeton, a marketing freshman, said she looks forward to doing the assignments for her UK 100 class.

"The class helps a lot and it is pass/fail, so I don't feel the pressure of other classes. Also, I have gotten to meet people that I would never have met otherwise," Keeton said.

UK 100 is a pilot project that not only tries to make the transition from high school to college a bit easier, but it also tries to improve the University's freshman retention rates, said Assistant Dean of Students Becky Jordan, who is one of the program's coordinators.

The idea for the class came out of a special committee that was appointed by Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Donald Sands to find ways to help students better adjust to college.

Sands said he hopes the program will encourage more UK freshmen to return after their first year. The current freshman retention rate is 75 percent, Sands said.

The retention rate increased from 67 to 75 percent after the University implemented selective admissions. But Sands said he doesn't "think that is high enough" for a selective-admissions university.

Dancers hope to sweep the campus off its feet

By REGINA SWIFT
Contributing Writer

Ballroom dancing is swinging back in style across the nation, and this semester it has waltzed its way to UK's campus with the formation of a new dance organization.

"It's more romantic to be able to hold somebody and dance with them than it is to go out and jump up and down," said Daniel Garnett, one of the founders of UK's newly formed Ballroom Dance Society.

The group plans to offer dance instructions for UK students and faculty.

"Ballroom dancing is not just for old folks," said Andrea Marshall, who also was involved with establishing UK's Ballroom Dance Society.

"I would much rather go out with a man that I know is going to hold me in his arms and we're going to dance together," Marshall said.

It is not necessary to have experience to join the organization, Marshall said.

"We welcome anybody who wants to walk in the door," she said, adding that she could not walk and chew bubble gum at the same time before she took dance lessons.

Not only is ballroom dancing fun, but it is "excellent for your health," Marshall said.

The dance society is a branch of the Kentucky Collegiate Ballroom Dance Society which is a non-profit corporation that includes universities and colleges in the state.

Garnett and Marshall said they decided to begin the organization because there are very few opportunities on campus to dance.

"We wanted other people to have fun with us," Marshall said.

Although only about 12 students are involved in the society, more than 10,000 student dancers are involved at 50 universities in the United States.

The group's short-term goals are to have events, "which are really parties," once a month and provide space for students to practice, Marshall said.

The group plans to sponsor a team of dancers to compete in January in Orlando, Fla., for the third annual Inter-Collegiate Inter-Collegiate Match of Amateur Ballroom Dancers.

More than 200 U.S. students and 40 British students will participate in the match. There also will be a formation team presentation, Marshall said.

Timoney is appointed acting equine director

Staff reports

Peter J. Timoney was named acting chairman of the veterinary science department in the UK College of Agriculture yesterday and acting director of the Maxwell H. Gluck Equine Research Center.

"I certainly feel very honored to be selected to assume the responsibility as acting chairman and as acting director, and certainly feel the research program and the extension of the department will continue to expand," Timoney said.

The appointment was made by C. Oran Little, dean of the College of Agriculture. Timoney replaces James Rooney who returned to teaching and research.

"He was chosen because he is the natural leader over there right now," Little said.

Little said a search committee will be formed within the next few weeks to conduct a nationwide search for a permanent director.

He said the University is looking for a candidate who is a recognized leader in an area of science related to the horse, a scholar and a person with a "good track record of leadership."

Timoney, a native of Dublin, Ireland, has been an associate professor in veterinary science at UK since June 1983. He is a virologist and performs research on selected virus diseases of the horse.

Before coming to UK, Timoney was adjunct associate professor of virology in the diagnostic laboratory and department of preventive medicine in New York State College of Veterinary Medicine, Cornell University.

He holds degrees from the National College of Ireland, the University of Illinois and a doctorate from the University of Dublin.

He held a fellowship from the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, London in 1978.

Among the national committees on which Timoney has served are the Equine Advisory Council of Cornell University and the equine subcommittee of the Irish Veterinary Association.

Timoney also has served on the Kentucky Department of Agriculture's Equine Viral Arteritis Advisory Committee since 1984.

Shoe sales benefit homeless, Jaycees

By TOBY GIBBS
Contributing Writer

Residents of Lexington can help the city's homeless and get some "wear" out of their efforts by buying a pair of UK blue and white tennis shoes.

Since May 15 the Lexington Jaycees have sponsored "Stepping Out For the Homeless," a drive to raise money for homeless people by selling high-quality leather tennis shoes for $35 a pair, said Shirley Riley, community development vice president for the Lexington Jaycees.

The shoes feature the wildcat emblem on the heel and the UK emblem on the tongue.

The Jaycees have sold 375 pairs of the shoes, which has raised $2,000.

The organization makes a $7 profit on each pair of shoes.

They hope to sell 7,125 more pairs, which would raise $52,000, more than half of which will be

American sin

Habits and lifestyles of U.S. students are a poor example for international students

This is a message to the international students studying here at UK.

Many of you came to the United States hoping to find a Christian nation. Instead, you have disappointedly found everything but Christianity.

Everyone around the world hears that Americans are Christians. After all, Daniel Webster, in agreement with our other founding fathers, said:

"Finally, let us not forget the religious character of our (nation's) origin. Our fathers were brought here by their high veneration for the Christian religion. They journeyed by its light, and labored in its hope. They sought to incorporate its principles with the elements of their society, and to diffuse its influence through all their institutions — civil, political or literary. Let us cherish these sentiments and extend this influence still more widely; in the full conviction, that is the happiest society which partakes in the highest degree of the mild and peaceful spirit of Christianity."

I am grieved to tell you that we have not heeded his words. We have forgotten the religious character of our origins. We have not valued Christ's principles as our forefathers did. We have not continued to influence every area of our society with Christianity.

Instead, America's young people are consumed with their own selves, alcohol, drugs, homosexuality, pre-marital sex and other forms of rebellion.

By our actions we proudly proclaim how we have turned from following Christ, yet with our lips, some of us still call ourselves Christians.

Jesus Christ was not given to alcohol. He did not sleep around with women (or men) — nor did he even think about doing it. He never stole anything. He never hated anyone.

Instead of doing those things which do not serve a good purpose, he went around healing people. He brought peace and love to the world. Then, to top it all off, he sacrificed his life for every person in the world, including you and me. He is alive today and he knows who are his true friends.

There are a few real Christians in the United States who sincerely love Jesus. They are working to bring the knowledge of him back into our schools, families and government. They are working to bring the knowledge of him back into our schools, families and government.

Please do not think that what you see is Christianity. There are a few real Christians in the United States who sincerely love Jesus. They are working to bring the knowledge of him back into our schools, families and government.

My prayer is that you would meet these few individuals during your stay.

It takes more than gambling for baseball to lose any face

This is for those who think "baseball has no integrity," most notably Raghuram Ekambaram, the author of the above-titled work.

If you are going to scream the next time anyone writes or mouths the words "integrity of baseball," now is the time to open your windows and commence doing so.

While baseball is an arm of the entertainment industry, its "integrity" does not have to lie outside of its elements. Without the sum of the parts, there is no whole.

If one thumbed through the annals of any history looking for wrongdoing he is very apt to find it. The one who assaults baseball the most is you, Raghuram Ekambaram, because you assume that those of us loudmouths who love America's pastime will believe that the only elements that exist are strikes by players and referees, moonlighting by players, owners' avarice, etc.

Well, it's too bad that you failed to mention those elements such as the Dave Winfield Foundation and the True Value Cubs Care, which were set up by people with "integrity" in baseball to help those who are less fortunate.

We, the loudmouths, failed to see mention of how players such as Kirby Puckett, Ryne Sandberg, Orel Hershiser, Glenn Davis, Dave Stewart and others donate free tickets to ballgames and money to charities such as the United Way, but more importantly they donate time, love, and understanding because they have integrity.

I hate to burst the bubble of baseball's detractors, but it is a game that is different than other sports. It is a game that has to be loved to be appreciated. It is not a game that needs loudmouths to take potshots at it.

It is irrelevant whether Pete

I hate to burst the bubble of baseball's detractors, but it is a game that is different than other sports. It is a game that has to be loved to be appreciated.

Rose will be inducted into the Hall of Fame, because neither you nor I will have any say in that decision.

Alas, aren't you able to see that this affair is a speck in the larger scheme of things? That baseball must learn from these incidents to make this already-wonderful game even better?

Education never enough

I went to college every other year as I had to drop out to work during the years in between. I also had non-interest-free loans.

When the early 1980s recession hit, I lost my job running an engineering lab (my degree was actually in the physical sciences). I was wiped out financially, lost my few possessions and didn't have enough money to return to graduate school. That means I also defaulted on my loans and became ineligible for more. I now haven't had a real full-time job since 1981.

Employers keep telling me that they will hire me if I get a graduate degree, but I have no money to return to school.

So I'm stuck in two "Catch-22s." I can't work without another degree, and I can't get another degree without first working. And they refuse to hire me for normal physical labor jobs because I'm "over qualified" (their opinion not mine) and because I'm not "skilled" in working with my hands. I also can't get new loans until I pay for the old ones and I can't pay my loans until I get a job, which they won't give me.

Students should make note of this as I know others with the same problem. To have a bachelor's degree is often worse than being a high school dropout. The dropout at least learned skilled labor while we were reading esoteric books.

Now if I could come up with a few dollars, I'd first retake some of my undergraduate physics and math courses as I've become rusty.

Then I'd go back to grad school and get a graduate degree.

Those of you who are able to go to college for four straight years do not realize how lucky you are. There are plenty of us out here who would love to spend the entire day just going to classes and studying without worrying constantly about where the next dollar is coming from.

Some guys just go to school to party and don't appreciate the chance they've got.

Ken Chandler is a graduate of the UK physical science department.

10 Foot Pole, composed of UK students Billy Quinn, David Farris and Brian Arnett, is back and their unique sound, which fuses jazz and rock, is funkier than ever.

Funky 10 Foot Pole revived

By JODI WHITAKER
Staff Writer

Funky. Fun. Fusion. Those words are synonymous with the Lexington band 10 Foot Pole, and the musical blending of these traits makes them one of the liveliest bands in town. Standing still while they play is impossible. The beginning of the summer looked to be the end for the band, but as fate would have it, they're back — and as funky as ever. And funky is the word. Although they don't really know how to categorize the type of music they play, funk seems to be the first word to come to mind. They prefer to say they create their own sound. A few covers may exist in their set, but bassist and UK biology junior Brian Arnett says they are first "warped into our own style." Fusion. Arnett, formerly with the punk band The Resurrected Bloated Floaters, plays with guitarist-vocalist and UK compuser science senior Billy Quinn and drummer/UK music sophomore David Farris. They have been together less than a year. Quinn previously was with the local rock 'n' roll band Rebel Without A Cause, and Farris had been playing in a variety of jazz bands. The players' differences in style are even more evident with what influences them. Arnett says his influences are The Red Hot Chili Peppers and Led Zeppelin; Quinn lists Jimi Hendrix as his idol; and Farris says his influences include a variety of jazz artists, including Weather Report, Elvin Jones and his dad. But the differences, as unusual as they may seem, make for a better, more well-rounded band. "This gives us a lot of room for improvising that most bands don't have," Farris said. "It's somewhere between Christmas morning and being buried alive." As for their future, uncertainty still exists. As with all local bands, they hope to make it big someday. But they refuse to use commercialism or change their style to make it happen. Quinn says he feels the band is not established yet. "We're still changing," he said. "If you love something, set it free. If it comes back, it's a band."

Family moves to erect Orbison memorial

Associated Press

WINK, Texas — Roy Orbison gained fame as a singer during his lifetime and now his family, musicians and fans want to make sure his name lives on. About 2,500 fans gathered Saturday in the town where Orbison grew up for a memorial concert, which Mayor Maxie Watts hopes will become an annual event. Proceeds will be used for a statue of the singer and a museum honoring him. Orbison died Dec. 6, 1988 of a heart attack. He was 52. Orbison's son, Wesley, and the singer's 43-year-old brother, Sam, came from Tennessee for the concert at which 10 musical acts including a Roy Orbison imitator performed. "I know that Dad never went in for publicity, but then again, he was very honored when people respected what he did," said the 24-year-old son.

Fake Vuittons still major problem

By MARIE McCARTAN
Gannett News Service

It's no phoney baloney. The art of imitation is big business. Copies of luxury items in such high profile brands as Gucci, Rolex and Louis Vuitton are being sold across the nation for a fraction of the real thing. The watches and handbags used to be available only to those who went to Korea or had a connection on one of the coasts. But recently some retailers have shown a genuine interest in the fakes. Selling an ersatz is legal. Or is it? The issue is as confusing as trying to tell the difference between a good Gucci and a fabulous fake. William Roach of the Iowa attorney general's office said the Iowa fraud law prohibits misrepresentation, either implicit or explicit, in the sale of goods. "Clearly if the seller says, 'This is an imitation,' then there is not a misrepresentation," Roach said. "If the seller says, 'This is a Rolex,' and it is not, that is a misrepresentation."

That interpretation leads one to assume that, as long as there is no misrepresentation, the sale of imitation goods is legal — at least in Iowa; but not everyone agrees. "It's like selling replicas of dollar bills," said New York lawyer Michael S. O'Rourke. He heads a task force for the International Anti-Counterfeit Coalition — brand-name manufacturers against counterfeit merchandise. The coalition was formed 10 years ago by Monsanto, Levi Strauss, Louis Vuitton and Cartier to combat the counterfeiting problem. The problem, O'Rourke said, is that with such luxury products as Polo and Rolex, "There's a Robin Hood approach. Consumers think they're getting the goods at a certain price because they came through another channel," he said. "Then there's the attitude that 'I know it's fake, but I should be able to buy it if I want to.'" Francois Poirer, president of Louis Vuitton USA in New York City and chairman of the anti-counterfeit group, was emphatic. "It's totally illegal," he said. "It is a trademark that is registered, and it's criminal to sell something that is counterfeit. Selling a counterfeit bag is no better or no worse than stealing a necklace." The fakes are considerably less, but not all that cheap. A good imitation Louis Vuitton satchel bag was spotted for $110 and a fake Rolex with a leather band was seen for $99. So why would anyone trade a real $100 bill for a fake brand watch or bag? A $100 price tag doesn't faze people and Louis Vuitton handbags, luggage, and accessories can run anywhere from $350 for a barrel-shaped Toolsee Roll bag to $10,000 for a trunk. "It's definitely the status," said Lynda Kiehne, co-owner of Action Accents in Des Moines, Iowa. "People want the look." "A $100 price tag doesn't faze people who know the genuine bag could cost as much $300 or $400," she said. "We don't have seconds," said Kim Harrington, store manager for Louis Vuitton in Dallas. "We don't ever distribute damaged goods or sell seconds at a discounted price." And how do you know if you're buying the real thing? "It's most certainly a counterfeit if the price is low," Poirer said. "Don't buy anything that is not sold in a respectable store."

Former UK player Douglass says he deserves second chance in NFL

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Former UK football player Maurice Douglass believes he deserves a second chance with the Chicago Bears after the National Football League handed him a 30-day suspension for using anabolic steroids.

"I'm going to try to fight this thing," Douglass said Wednesday. "I want to be because, to be honest, I know deep down in my heart that if I had taken steroids and knew I had it in my system then I would have taken some kind of a masking agent to cover it up."

Douglass, a fourth-year pro, was one of 13 players suspended by the NFL Tuesday for using steroids. He will be placed on the Bears' reserve non-football illness list without pay.

Douglass, 25, will not be able to return to the Bears until after the third regular season game on Sept. 24 against the Detroit Lions. Cornerback Lemuel Stimson will start in his place on the Bears' defense in Saturday's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Raiders.

After the suspension was announced, Douglass met Tuesday with Bears personnel director Bill Tobin, team President Mike McCaskey and trainer Fred Caito.

"He was embarrassed, disappointed, upset with himself. And I think he had a lot of thoughts going through his mind," Tobin said. "I think he was genuinely surprised."

Douglass said he was naive in taking the banned substance without a doctor's prescription on the advice of a friend who said it would speed the healing of a wrist injury the cornerback suffered late last season.

On Tuesday Tobin refused to offer any guarantees that Douglass would remain a Bear after his suspension ends.

Douglass admitted he's concerned about his future with the Bears. But he said "they should give me a second chance."

"I have never tested positive before for any type of drugs," Douglass said. "And I have never done anything to make this team look bad..."

On March 21 NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said players using steroids would be handed the same punishment given to players for illegal drug use — a four-game suspension. He also said players would be banned if traces of "masking agents" for steroids turned up in tests.

High school officials deny recruiting excellent tailback

Associated Press

PIKEVILLE, Ky. — Pikeville High School football coach Hillard Howard denies that his school recruited a star running back from Logan, W.Va., a charge being leveled by a district rival.

Virgie coach Greg Newsome made the charges Monday after Steve Bailey, a 6-foot-2, 180-pound senior, led Pikeville to a 21-7 win over Raecelad on Saturday in the Pike County Bowl at Pikeville.

Bailey scored two touchdowns and rushed for 140 yards on 12 carries in leading Pikeville, the defending state Class A football champion, to its 30th consecutive win over three seasons.

Bailey's transfer has been approved by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association. Howard was joined by Pikeville principal Tom Swartz in denying Newsome's charges of recruiting.

Newsome said the "Pikeville community and not the coaches" lured Bailey from Logan by giving his stepfather, Doug Starghill, a job with a coal-related company.

The job that Starghill took is the same one offered 2½ months ago to Edgill Roberts, father of Virgie quarterback Mike Roberts, Newsome said. Edgill Roberts said he declined the offer because his son wanted to remain at Virgie. He said that Howard did not recruit his son.

"The Pikeville coach called and said he heard I was considering moving to Pikeville, and he told me when (football) camp was starting," the elder Roberts said. "Hillard never talked to my son."

However, the elder Roberts wondered why Stargill's employer would go to Logan to hire someone "when there are 1,000 people out of work here."

Wayne Bennett, Bailey's former coach and also assistant principal at the Logan school, said he agrees with Newsome that Bailey was recruited to play his final year at Pikeville.

"I can't prove it, but I feel the same thing," Bennett said.

"Look at the work situation over there. Does a man go to Kentucky to find a job? Why would (Bailey) go there for just one year? I could see it if he was going to stay three years or five. They (Pikeville) had everything but a (running) back."

Bennett said Bailey left Logan on Aug. 14 after having practiced 29 times in three-a-days drills with the team there, and had played in one preseason scrimmage.

"In my estimation he's the best football player for a back in West Virginia," Bennett said. "He gained 1,000 yards as a sophomore, and last year he gained 1,500 yards, scored 18 touchdowns and three three touchdowns passes. He's that good."

Tom Mills, commissioner of the KHSAA, said he approved the transfer because it was signed by principals of both schools, and "they saw no reason why the boy shouldn't be eligible."

UK volleyball team begins season this weekend with Kickoff Klassic

By KRISTIN WECKWERT
Contributing Writer

The 1989 UK volleyball team might not be the most experienced team that UK lacks in experience, it more than makes up for it with determination.

"I have three sophomores starting and the first two off the bench are freshmen," DeBoer said. "They're going to be hungry and fight all the time."

The Wildcats open their season at 8 p.m. tomorrow when they face Morehead State University in the opening round of the Kentucky Kickoff Klassic at Memorial Coliseum. Eastern Kentucky University and the University of Louisville open the four-team tournament at 6 p.m.

The tournament's second round will be held Sunday. The consolation match will be at 1 p.m. and the championship match will follow at about 3 p.m.

In last year's match against Morehead, the Wildcats won the match 3-0, but they do not expect such an easy victory this time.

"It's not going to be an easy win," DeBoer said. "Morehead has some very experienced players, and they haven't lost many people."

"I think it will be a good match," said Laura Linder, a junior All-Southeastern Conference setter. "If we set up like we know how, we can win."

Mary Jones, a senior outside hitter and this year's captain, shares her teammate's enthusiasm.

"I think we're ready," Jones said. "We should beat them (Morehead) if everything goes smoothly."

As for the other teams in the tournament, Louisville has brought in a new coach and a good freshman class. Eastern Kentucky retained the majority of its 1988 squad.

"(Louisville is) very young now, and this may give the edge to Eastern Kentucky," DeBoer said.

DeBoer is very confident of her team's ability, even though two players will be unable to play because of injuries.

Karen Creates, a junior middle blocker, will be sidelined for about 10 days with Achilles tendonitis. Freshman Amy Axel, an outside hitter, is out of action indefinitely with a head injury.

DeBoer said that Axel is on the injured list "due to stresses resulting from a head injury that happened over summer break."

"(The injuries are) probably not enough to hurt our game, but there is not enough players to run an effective scrimmage," she said.

The Wildcats have an undefeated record in SEC play over the past two years, but DeBoer does not foresee anyone dominating the SEC like her team did the last two seasons.

"I don't think that the winner of the SEC will be undefeated this year," she said.

DeBoer's squad lost three seniors, but gained three very promising freshmen — Axel, Angela Salvatore and Ann Hall.

"Salvatore will be a fine player," the UK coach said. "She will see significant playing time. Ann Hall is one of the physically strongest players on the team. (Hall's) focus is defense."

Lawmakers mull ending elected PVAs

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Some urban lawmakers say they won't vote for higher taxes to improve funding of rural schools unless they see improvement in rural property value assessments.

"I don't want people in my neck of the woods to pay more unless everybody is paying their fair share," said Sen. Joe Meyer, D-Covington.

Meyer and other state legislators are beginning to think the days of elected property valuation administrators should come to an end, especially in light of Kentucky's need to improve its school system.

"It's the only job I know of where if you do a lousy job, you win votes, and if you do a good job, you lose votes," said Sen. Art Schmidt, a member of the Pritchard Committee for Academic Excellence.

Some have advocated appointing PVAs rather than electing them, but assessors say that would not necessarily be an improvement.

Half the 50 states have appointed assessors. But only in Maryland and Montana are they appointed by the state.

Some PVAs acknowledge that election campaigns make their jobs more difficult. "Every four years you sort of neglect your duties if you want your job back," said former Martin County PVA Betty Muncy.

But PVAs staunchly defend their performance and complain that they are being made into scapegoats for the problems of Kentucky's schools.

They say that unless legislation which in effect limits increases in property-tax revenue to 4 percent annually is either scrapped or modified, it won't matter if assessments are increased dramatically because tax rates will have to be rolled back accordingly.

They say the property tax provides only 18 cents of every Kentucky school dollar and predict that assessments won't climb significantly even if assessors are appointed.

Kentucky PVAs warn that with assessors appointed from Frankfort, property owners would lose their local voice.

Kentucky already has strong state oversight of assessments. The Revenue Cabinet, along with Hopkins County PVA Melvin Hicklin, president of the state PVA association, argues that recent reforms have set the course for a fairer assessment system.

As a result of a 1988 law, state auditors are required to visit each county every two years to check the PVA's assessments. PVAs also must visit each property once every four years.

James Coffman, Kentucky's commissioner of property taxation, predicted that with the new tools, assessments statewide will be acceptable within four years.

Shoe sales help attack homelessness problem

used to benefit the homeless, Riley said.

The Jaycees' shoe drive in part celebrates the organization's 50th anniversary, which is Sept. 5.

Lexington's homelessness situation is considered to be the city's most serious problem, according to an April survey the Jaycees conducted of community leaders.

The Jaycees plan to use any remaining money to find a permanent residence for their chapter.

Riley said her chapter has "gone from restaurant to restaurant to have meetings" and that "after 50 years, we deserve a permanent residence."

Riley said she believes the drive will benefit all involved by "letting us combine two homeless situations and make a community impact."

The new Jaycees residence also will provide a place where people can get more information, Riley said.

When the drive is over, the Jaycees will hear recommendations

Bakker trial pending psychiatric evaluation

Bakker and other PTL executives are accused of diverting for their own use more than $4 million of $158 million raised from followers who gave $1,000 for three nights' free lodging each year for life at the ministry's hotels.

If convicted on all 24 counts, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

"If you came to see me cry, you got your wish," Bakker's wife, Tammy, told reporters outside her home in Orlando, Fla., yesterday afternoon.

"I would like to tell the people, you be in our shoes and see if you can hold steady for 2½ years," she said. "He was very distressed last night after what happened in the courtroom."

Defense attorney George T. Davis told Potter that Bakker, 49, kept saying he wanted the trial to continue but was "on the floor in a fetal position."

"If Mr. Bakker is handled gently and carefully he may be able to proceed with this trial," Davis said. The defense had tried to persuade the judge to allow Bakker to stay in a private institution.

Last year Bakker's wife described a similar scene, saying in a fund-raising letter to supporters that her husband had stayed in a fetal position for hours after he was forced to leave the ministry in 1987.

A few supporters were on hand to offer encouragement.

"He will come back," said Loreta Mays of Jacksonville, Fla. "Jim's a fighter. He's not a quitter... but it will take time."

Staff reports

About 3,000 student tickets were dispersed yesterday as student ticket distribution continued to soar.

About 100 fewer students turned out yesterday than Wednesday, said Rodney Stiles, student affairs officer.

"It was almost another record day," Stiles said. In addition to group seating, about 4,200 seats remain for the Sept. 9 game when UK plays Indiana University.

Group seats will be distributed Tuesday from 8 to 9 a.m.

Although all lower-stadium seats have been distributed, endzone and upper-stadium seats still are available.

Stiles said if students want tickets for the game, they should pick them up soon.
