BASKETEERS ARE PREPARED FOR OPENING GAME

Georgetown Net Aggregation May Give Big Blue a Hard Game

Kentucky Will Use "SUBMARINE OFFENSE"

Reserve Strength of Coach Mauer's Machine Is Very Potent

By LAWRENCE CRUMP

Saturday night at 8 o'clock, the 1930 edition of Coach Johnny Mauer's Whitecat basketball team, will tangle with the Georgetown College Tigers in the Men's Gymnasium.

Three years ago, Georgetown took the State boys for a ride so we have the right to expect a successful basketball season in his first year at Georgetown and who would like nothing better than to catch Coach Mauer's crew of guards to make his basketball team a howling success.

All reports from Georgetown indicate that the Whitecats will arrive in an ambulance and expect to be taken to the hospital immediately after the game which, of course, is so much bunk and for the reasons mentioned above the game should prove an interesting for a curtain raiser.

Coach Mauer will start a team composed of senior and junior. The same combination that started practically all games last year.

The Whitecats should enter the Southern Conference tournament in March as one of the most feared and respected teams in the South.

In addition to the starting lineup, the varsity has a number of capable reserves who can hold their own with any of the boys who will get the ball tomorrow night.

WELCOME

MR. BASKETBALL

Pans of the hardwood court will heartily welcome the opening basketball fray between the Wildcats and the Georgetown Tigers Saturday night. After a long lay off the Wildcats net men will once again appear on the court to sustain concerted drive for the Southern Conference championship crown.

Last year the net men won with consistency over the best teams the South could offer. A scrapping net squad from the University of Georgia, however, sent the Cats home just short of championship honors.

Johnny Maurer and his basketballers have been practicing daily since October 25. Prior to that time drills were held three times each week. This the Wildcats are in perfect condition for their opening season. Whether or not it is the duty of University students to do all within their power in support of the team.

ANOTHER GUIGNOL

SUCCESS

The closing of the second Guignol play of the current season marks another step forward for the Guignol Players under the capable direction of Frank Fowler. Successes at the little theater are becoming such an established fact that patrons of the drama in Lexington and surrounding towns are looking forward to an even more brilliant future for this organization.

University students are always urged to try out for places in the cast of the productions, or for positions in the various departments at the theater. Aid and talent are always rewarded by the key award.

And the person who wears the Guignol should feel that he has indeed won a mark of distinction. The Guignol combines in its program the interest of Lexington people and the University, and is a cementing factor between the two. The theater has reached its present place in the spotlight only through months of united effort on the part of Mr. Fowler and his excellent staff, and the Kernel wishes to extend its highest praise and most sincere wishes for a future as brilliant as the past.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Lexington is taking on its annual Christmas dress; the windows, the streets are clothed in the traditional red and green. University students walk briskly down the streets with shining eyes and glowing cheeks with laughter on their lips, in anticipation of the Christmas holidays.

Soon December 20 will arrive and students will merrily embark for the homestead. Once there, it will be easy to fall back into the irregular routine of family life, forgetting the cares and tribulations of college. But only for a time. Every good thing must come to an end, and so must the vacation. January 2 will roll around with uncanny speed. With the return to school there will be a few weeks of grace before the final exams. Then, off! the weeping and wailing of students who have made too much whoopee during the first part of the semester. And the cramming that will be included in by those unfortunate lagards. Then it will be all over, and the whole University campus will emit a gigantic sigh of relief.

The Kernel, however, will not expound on their mournful predictions and on the eve of the vacation we wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

A GRIDIRON BANQUET

It has been a nationwide custom of long standing for chapters of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity, to sponsor on the respective college campuses an annual Gridiron banquet. This social affair receives its name from the tactics employed by the "roastmaster" in placing the reputation and activities of University celebrities before the public eye.

Until this year the Kentucky chapter of Sigma Delta Chi has not felt financially able to sponsor the banquet. However, plans are being formulated by members of the fraternity to stage a banquet sometime during the early part of next semester.

The banquet is strictly an invitation affair, and only those persons high in point of campus activities will receive invitations. Noted newspaper men of Kentucky and outstanding business men of Lexington will also be allowed to participate in the fun making.

This banquet should grow to be one of the most popular social events on the University campus. Certainly the plan will be an innovation on the University campus and the results will be measured by the response of the leading students on the University campus.

WELCOME VISITORS

The annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States held in Lexington the past week, brought to the University five hundred visitors of note from all sections of the South. Acting as the meeting place for numerous conventions, the University has adopted the best possible plan for becoming widely known; and thoroughly advertised. The favorite place for a convention in Kentucky, during the past year our campus has been host to more than thirteen thousand visitors.

More and more as the University exemplifies Kentucky hospitality and congeniality, the South and the nation as a whole is selecting Lexington as the best place to thoroughly enjoy a convalesce.

To people of every age and every occupation, the policy of friendship and welcome has been extended and received with sincerest appreciation. Thus may it always continue as the University grows and makes friends.

A CHRISTMAS TREE

The University Y. M. C. A. sponsors each year a Christmas tree for the children of Lincoln school, financed by funds donated to the Y. M. C. A. by students who are anxious to help unfortunates obtain Christmas joy. Certainly, at this season, we should let our thoughts and efforts concentrate on bringing good cheer to all mankind.

Activities of the University Y. M. C. A. in spreading genuine joy at Christmastide are to be highly commended. University students cannot fail to appreciate this opportunity to share with these little unfortunates the joys of a small portion of their own Christmas joy. The Kernel can do no less than urge every student to avail himself of this opportunity to lend financial aid to such a worthy cause.

"THE BIBLE AND EDUCATION"

Seventh Day Adventist Pastor Discusses Wisdom

By J. G. MITCHELL

If the Bible were studied as it should be, men would have a breadth of mind, a nobility of character, and a steadfastness of purpose that is rarely seen in these times. If the student will take the Bible as his guide, and will stand like a rock of principle, he may aspire to any height of attainment. The Bible is the greatest Book of knowledge that the world has ever known. There cannot be a well-balanced, well-rounded education without a knowledge of this Book.

It has lifted slaves to world leadership; it has made his students premiers in the greatest generation of the world; it has developed character that is impeccable; it has made its masters ten times better in all matters of the then known knowledge to be gained, over those who knew nothing of its contents.

Wisdom and knowledge have their source in the Creator of the Heavens and the earth. He is the author of this greatest of all Books of Knowledge. "The fear of love, rather of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. The Lord giveth wisdom, out of His mouth cometh wisdom and understanding. Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding." Job 28:28, Prov. 2:6 and 7:4.

According to this analysis, education is composed of two elements: wisdom and understanding (knowledge). Speaking in the terms of chemistry, the educational compound is composed of two elements: wisdom and knowledge. Water is composed of two elements: hydrogen and oxygen, the former being in the larger proportion, as indicated by the symbol H₂O. Now, representing the educational compound by the use of the symbols, we have WK. Thus, using the proportions in this analysis given for true education, we have, according to Solomon, more use of wisdom than of knowledge, "wisdom is the principal thing." So we shall designate education as W₂K.

Realizing that the "fear" spoken of by the prophet is love, or reverence and respect for the Almighty, we find that the object of true education is the restoration of the image of God in the soul. Lack of respect for the Almighty breeds anarchy, lawlessness and crime, while love for the Creator of the universe cultivates all the good graces necessary for the leadership the world is needing today. Let this then be a challenge to you.

Look at the achievements of Joseph, Moses, Daniel, Solomon, David and other leaders of Biblical renown, search for their source of greatness. In modern times, look at Gladstone, Newton and Woodrow Wilson in politics and science; look at Luther, the Wesley's, Knox and other reformers, leaders in religious thought; and find the secret of their powers of leadership. "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore with all thy getting get understanding." According to the Biblical analysis, "wisdom" comes FIRST, and in larger quantities than KNOWLEDGE. If you put knowledge first, and in wrong proportions, direful results follow.

PATHS OF GLORY

Clemenceau, Beloved "Tiger" of France, Rests "By the Sea"

Ed's Note—The Kernel has asked permission to print the following editorial by Pauline Carpenter, written by her as an assignment in a journalism class in editorial writing.

Clemenceau, beloved "Tiger" of France, after a long and brilliant career of over fifty years spent in public service to his country, is dead.

Glory, he called "wisps of smoke" and for that reason desired to be buried simply, without elaborate religious rites, in a grave beside his father in a lonely forest of Vendee, the land of his birth, close to the roaring sea.

Clemenceau was a man of colossal energy, both mental and physical. It was said "ses ennemis craignent et sa plume, et son epee." His enemies fear his pen and his sword. He fought for his ideas with his pen, fought many a duel with sword and pistol, and was never known to be defeated in a political fight. Clemenceau's desperate courage and almost super human power did not cease with the coming of old age. In fact, the work by him in the last years of his life was more important to the world than that of all France's other premiers combined.

It was he who managed the World War for France. Although seventy-three years of age when the conflagration began, he stood behind the young and middle-aged battling Verdun, supplying moral stamina that brought victory. And he stood beside them, also when there was the greatest danger, he held his ground with common soldiers to learn how they were treated.

It is said that he never feared bullet, shell, sword, or the fact of any man. His courage cannot be exaggerated, his grim ruthless determination in time of danger to his country cannot be measured. A young man, he had seen the humiliation of France, after the war of 1870 when an imitation Napoleon, controlled by a bigoted woman, plunged the French into disaster. He was determined that it should not happen again.

The French, with the exception of the few narrow souls who hated him, call him their pere la victoire, "Father Victory." He was indeed the actual saviour of France, and he would value that title above all others.

Clemenceau was sometimes referred to as an atheist. It is true that he believed in a different doctrine from that of the average man, but he was not an enemy of religion. He fought only against control of State by church. He believed that death was a dreamless and endless sleep, and like Herbert Spencer, doubted existence of a future life. "We must accept that," said he, "as we find it," and in the closing hours of his life, when all hope of recovery had been abandoned, he fortified himself with his usual impenetrable armor of fearlessness, of courage, and walked bravely into the valley of the shadow of death, the only foe to gain a victory over the hitherto invincible "Tiger."

But despite his sternness, his fortitude, Clemenceau was after all just a lonely, mild old man, who passing the long, sunny hours of his autumn days, in the peace and quietude, of a secluded villa, after the intense and stormy years of war and politics, took leisurely walks along the rock-fringed sea, and found time for roses, poetry, and children.

Grey said in his immortal elegy, "The paths of glory lead to the grave." A sacred spot for all Frenchmen, and for all who love liberty, and exalt courage, are those lonely graves of father and son, near the ever murmuring waves of the ever fretful sea, looking out toward the peaceful, purple west.

A group of sixteen Lehigh University students were arrested by the Bethlehem police following an attempt to force their way into a theater after a football victory demonstration. Lehigh University officials contested that the boys arrested were not guilty and they stood solidly behind the students.

The recent yo-yo fad has caused much criticism in the University throughout the country. Several institutions have framed penalties for students caught engaging in the new sport.

Something ought to be done about the longer skirts which the fair young co-eds are wearing this season. What is the use of living if there is no inspiration to go out and do good deeds? The answer is in the negative unless one considers going out and doing naughty deeds.

Where is the student's honor who leads a very retired life, devoting himself to his books entirely? The answer is not known with any degree of certainty, but it must be in the wife's key to the front door.

LOST ECSTASY

The knotty boughs of ancient oaks
With scarlet leaves are hung.
For Autumn is a tired old man
Whose trying to be young.

Autumn is a patchwork quilt
Stretches with threads of gold
Into a pretty crier:
From fragments that are old.

Autumn is a lover's note,
Yellowed now with age,
And the leaves are faded flow'rs
Pressed upon its page.

Autumn is a vagabond,
In brilliant raiment clad,
But the tune upon his lyre
Somewhat new.

ASQUIRREL FOOD

By C. E. BARNES

Well, it's getting to be just about time of year for the college boys to begin singing their favorite Christmas carol: "I can't give you anything but love, Baby." About the same time the girls will probably be indulging to some extent in the tenuous strains of "Worried." An' they should be for it's been a cold, hard winter so far.

Our old friend, Joe McDowell, from the Kansas Aggies finally worked up enough courage to make an oration that's been percolating through the minds of college men for quite some time. The title of Joe's remarkable address (in case you don't read your papers) was: "The Uselessness of Women on the College Campus." For years and years, in a wee, still sort of voice we've been remarking much the same thing. Joe's triumph was short lived, but after the girls had considered the matter seriously they gave him a loving cup—in appreciation of his parental advice, I suppose!

Looks like the older the stunts are the more people fall for 'em. Way back about the time that we were still kicking slats out of our cradle we remember the old gag about somebody calling up to advise another somebody to take their house off the street car line because the street car was coming. Some bashful little lady down at the house of the Owls could break down and tell us all about it but she won't. And we're not going to report her because we fell for the same thing once.

We've just figured out that we still only have to get up and turn off our alarm seven more times now before we can begin enjoying a long-looked-for vacation. We've quit sleeping of late because we have so much work to do before the holidays that sleepin' seems like a foolish habit.

This column couldn't begin to exist without a pet gripe of some kind, and here and now we enter a protest against the assault and battery we have suffered to date in being "tagged" at different dances. Back in the old days there was an element of gentle courtesy in asking the permission of another gentleman if you might dance with his lady. You even thanked the gentleman and when somebody else came to claim her, you thanked the lady for her graciousness in dancing with you. Like the old times, such activities seem to be "only a dream of the past." We've been stepped on, beaten, pushed, shoved, insulted, mauled, embarrassed, and imposed on until we're well nigh the end of our patience. As a matter of public policy, for the health and morals of the community, and for the physical well-being of certain social duffers, we ask the privilege of extermination on the next offense.

After all this exertion we're reminded of an old verse more expressive of our present feelings than anything we know.

I wish I was a little rock.
A sittin' on a hill.
Doin' nothin' all day long
But just a sittin' still.

I wouldn't eat, I wouldn't drink
I wouldn't even wash;
I'd just sit still a thousand years,
An' rest myself, by Gosh!

LIGHTNING HAS LONG BEEN A COSTLY RAIDER OF POWER LINES

Wild lightning meets his master . . .

REMEMBER how you used to sit on the porch during a thunderstorm and shudder just a little at the forces that seemed to tear open the sky and shake the hills? Electrical men have often shuddered in grave seriousness over those same forces. For lightning has been a costly raider of power lines. Now, however, many means of defense are available, and many more are being developed. Science has been studying lightning, and experimenting with it. Down in the mountains of Tennessee a group of Westinghouse men have been making photographic records of the voltages developed by lightning, with the cathode-ray oscillograph and the klydonograph. Guided by their findings, another group in New Jersey is enabled to reproduce lightning artificially, and study its effects on a high-tension line. And in East Pittsburgh, with a generator that will produce lightning strokes equivalent to 35,000,000 horse-power and with a laboratory that duplicates power line conditions, others are learning new facts about the behavior of protective devices. Much of this work is carried on by young men recently out of college. Their achievements will save millions for power companies, and eliminate many hazards to life in sub-station operation.

Lightning jumps the gap between these Westinghouse arcing horns, and spares the insulators.

Frosh Open Season Thursday With Goldberg Tailors

FOOTBALL STARS REPORT ON COURT

Gridders Strengthen Prospects for Big Green Net Season; Independent Five Is Strong Team

By ELBERT McDONALD
Coach M. E. Potter's basketball yearlings are getting in some real practice in anticipation of their first game Thursday, December 19, with the Goldberg Tailors, a local independent team that numbers in its roster some former U. K. basketball stars.

Basketball aspirants from the frosh football squad reported Tuesday afternoon and have been practicing daily in an effort to catch up with the other members of the squad who have been out for about six weeks. Tonight the latecomers will start practicing with the regular squad but will soon have to face a "cut" because of the large number working for the coveted numerals. Fifteen additional men have reported from the football squad. Among the most promising is Ellis Johnson, former captain of the Ashland Tomcats, national champions in 1927, and chosen to captain the mythical All-American basketball prep team of that year. Riffe, also a member of the former national champions and chosen on the third All-American team, is also a member of the team. Others of the football squad that are looking good are Montgomery, Wilder, and Belvins.

winning one for the green-jerseyed lads. Aside from the game Thursday, the schedule is only tentative but will very probably contain games with every freshman team in the state except Centre. The schedule will also call for a few games with some of the strongest prep schools of the state.

Value of Alumni Support for U. K. Voiced by Student

The following article was handed to the Kernel Sports Editor by a student of the University who has made close observations along the athletic lines and is in a position to speak with authority on this subject.

It is generally considered that the September enrollment contained the greatest array of outstanding prep school athletes ever to enroll at the University of Kentucky, and in the writer's opinion it is just another tribute to the Gamage regime. It seems that at last someone has realized the necessity of doing a little outside boosting for the University. This writer would not attempt to place either the credit or the responsibility to any one person or group of persons. Maybe it's the officials in charge of athletics at the University; maybe it's a long-slumbering alumni association come to life; maybe it's anyone. Suffice it to say, that at last, after many years, some one has begun to take a little interest and pride in their University and boost it to the graduating high school stars over the state.

Too long, have the other Universities been getting "the cream of the crop" leaving Kentucky only a few loyal youngsters in the skimmed milk. It isn't a question of proselytizing but merely one of interesting the prep youngsters by boosting. It is no secret that the Universities of Tennessee and Georgia Tech have the strongest alumni associations in the south and the results of those associations speak for themselves—not only on the football field but also off the gridiron.

Magazines "Say It" every month in the year. What else does? E. W. Wallis Magazine Agency, Phone Ash. 3788.—adv.

Of course, there are a few who claim that publicity given to athletes in connection with colleges is detrimental to that particular institution and all that rot, but to date his writer fails to see where it has ever held back Tennessee, Tech, or Vandy.

It takes more than a degree to make an engineer

It's pretty hard to keep your mind on a study of fatigue-of-cable-sheath-alloys, when you are thinking of the joys of artistic creation. And why try? There is work aplenty in this world for engineers and artists, for doctors, lawyers, builders, salesmen. The difficulty is that the individual doesn't always connect up with his work. Too many college men never take the trouble really to analyze themselves. Self examination now with the aid of your faculty advisor may save years of groping later on. And at graduation it will help you off to a good start.

THE FINISH
As 1929 closes its doors on the theatrical world it is the pleasant duty of me people who are so concerned as to think we know enough about motion pictures to be called critics to summarize the past year by selecting what we consider the best productions that we have witnessed since last January 1. Although it is rather early this is the last edition of this paper before Christmas so I must express my views in order that the gentlemen who make more money for the same work may have the advantage of my opinions upon which to base theirs. Don't I tell you critics were conceited?

It is obvious that an considering only those presentations that have exhibited in Lexington. There are several motion pictures, notably "Sunrise Up," "The Love Parade," "Rio Rita" and "Disraeli," that have been produced but not yet shown in this city so I have to disregard them.

Due to the tremendous influx of talking pictures the screen has never had a year more crowded with impressive attractions. This situation creates a difficult problem when it comes to selecting a set number of the very best representatives of the silver sheet. From my notes I have chosen an even dozen motion pictures as being the most outstanding ones that have been shown in Lexington during 1929. It will be noted that the vast majority of them are all talking.

With no particular order in mind the following twelve have been selected as the best: "In Old Arizona," William Fox picture. All talking. "The Man Who Laughs," Universal picture. Silent. "The Broadway Melody," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. All talking. "The Letter," Paramount picture. All talking. "Alibi," United Artists picture. All talking. "The Dance of Life," Paramount picture. All talking. "Show Boat," Universal picture. Part talking.

Of course there were many other great pictures in 1929 so I am placing under "honorable mention" the following: "The Cockeyed World," "Hearts in Dixie," "Speakeasy," Fox Movietone Follies, and "Through Different Eyes" from the William Fox studios; "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "Madame X," "The Mysterious Island," "The Trial of Mary Dugan," and "White Shadows in the South Seas" under the banner of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Interference," "The Lady Lies," "Innocents of Paris," "Close Harmony," "Welcome of San Luis Rey," the last scene in "Show Boat" and the startling use of music throughout that picture. From "The Dance of Life" I vividly remember the "beef trust" chorus and the execution of the chorus work in "The Hollywood Revue" stands out prominently.

My Mind's note book shows Walter Huston in "Gentlemen of the Press," Ruth Chatterton in "Madame X," Jeanne Eagles in "The Letter," Dorothy Burgess in "In Old Arizona," Conrad Veidt in "The Man Who Laughs," Thomas Jackson in "Broadway" and Norma Shearer in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" as being great performances. The subtleties and the direction of "The Trespasser," the songs in "The Broadway Melody," the half-witted night watchman in "Alibi" saying "Na, na, Tommie, I got an alibi," the river scenes in "Show Boat," the direction of "Hallelujah," Owen Moore saying "rat" in "Side Street," Will Rogers saying "It's awful doubtful" in "They Had to See Paris," the dialogue in "The Cocoanuts," and the English accents of so many talking pictures occupy brilliant positions in my memory.

The year's screen has been studded with brilliant spots among which I recall the color of "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "It's an old Spanish custom" from "Bull Dog Drummond," the photography of "White Shadows," "Fox Movietone Follies," "The Man Who Laughs," "Lonesome," "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "The Mysterious Island" and "Through Different Eyes," the eggs frying in "In Old Arizona," Lionel Barrymore saying "Be yourself, Valentine" in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" the "see you, see me" business in "The Cockeyed World," the musical score from "The Bridge Danger," "Charming Sinners" and "Gentlemen of the Press" from Paramount; "The Iron Mask" and "Coquette" from the United Artists lot; "Street Girl" and "Side Street" from Radio Pictures; "Broadway" and "Lonesome" from Universal and "The Desert Song," the sole contribution of Warner Brothers. Robert Benchley in "The Treasurer's Report" is, I think, the best short subject of the year.
