

You ask my opinion with regard to Slater's book. It is quickly told.
The book is thoroughly ex parte! It recounts most of the letter, with few of the unpleasant features of the command. It pictures Morgan as a hero in fact - & not of Romance.
It accredits him all of noble & soldierly elements, & endows him with some of the faults which were most glaring in his character as an Officer! It makes heroes of nothing, & makes nothing of heroes! It gives credit to men for heroism who have been little known save as politicians, and passes unnoticed men who have been conspicuous for their gallantry! Services of importance to the command are unnoticed, & those of insignificance magnified into importance! It is incorrect in its details, & inferior in composition.
It is not a work of History! It is a work of fiction!

What do you think of it?
If I pass thru yourburg next week, I'll telegraph you to meet me at the cars.
Write me on receipt, & address 58 Green St. Louisville. Love to Mrs & Miss Hines.
Regards to our comrades.

Yours devoted friend.

I have written to Thompson Beech, Castlemain.

"Refuge," Fayette Co. Ky.
Feb. 7th 1867.

My dear Dow.

Within a week after writing you a few days since, I received your letter telling me that all prospect of affairing the Journal was at an end.
If I could command $5,000. w. I should propose to you to purchase a Steam-Press and start a daily. I believe 'would do well, but can't just now entertain the proposition. I am always open to such proposals, & always ready to take hold of any thing which promises to be a paying enterprise. Ergo, you can investigate costs & profits of such a scheme quietly & fully, in all its details, & if will suit you and 'would be the best thing for you — and if at the same time I can raise the funds — and it is highly probable I shall be able to do so — we can then with your brains & my money engage
