 RA682-D-FINISHING TOUCHES TO A MODERN DESIGN.
 Flat roofs and vari-colored paint will beautify homes for residents of Greenbelt who want the modern touch in architecture. The houses shown here are of cinder-block construction. Others are of brick. In all cases, however, foundations are of poured concrete, and in the cinder-block, modern houses the roofs also are of poured reinforced concrete topped with high grade roofing materials. Rows of boxes masquerading as homes won't be found here. Greenbelt homes are designed to combine beauty with practicability. Within the next few weeks shrubs will be planted to give a park like appearance to the super-blocks in which the groups of houses are spaced. From the houses in the picture residents will look out on the fields and hills of the greenbelt, that broad girdle of farms, parks and gardens which surrounds the town. Not only will there be professional farmers to work the farms but those residents who wish it may have allotment gardens here in which to raise crops for home use in spare time. Picnic grounds and a beautiful artificial lake will complete the recreational value of the greenbelt region from which the town gets its name. (Resettlement Administration Photo)
