• The region is well supplied with all types of utilities. Chief developments will be two reservoirs on the upper reaches of the Patuxent and Little Patuxent rivers. Their watersheds will be developed as green spaces linking into the general park system. The greenbelt town will get its water from the Washington Suburban Sanitary District reservoir, which supplies a large semi-rural area in the south of the region. The Washington Suburban Gas Co. of Hyattsville plans to run an eight-inch pressure pipe through the town-site. Telephone extensions will be made from the Baltimore network and electric power extensions from Washington.
