

10 219 Grant Ave

THE JACKSON TIMES

We are in Business to Print the News of Jackson and Breathitt County and to Co-operate with Every Enterprise Tending to Their Moral and Financial Welfare.

JACKSON, BREATHITT COUNTY, KENTUCKY, MAY 4, 1917.

TWO SOILED DOYES CAGED.

Celia Easter and Lillie Helton, a couple of denizens of the underworld were, on the complaint of Mrs. Crouse, the Missionary in Snake Valley, arrested and brought before Judge Collier Monday, who after hearing the evidence gave to the soiled doves their choice between leaving the town and going to jail, they finally saying they preferred to take the latter horn of the dilemma giving as a reason that times were hard and board high and that by going to jail they would at least be fed and to the went jail they and the "Duke of Buckhorn" is now acting as purveyor to these two who only so recently were heard in the famous valley singing "This is the life for me." They will likely soon get tired of their cramped quarters and the sameness of their bill of fare and agree to seek other and newer pastures—say about Middletown or Hamilton, Ohio.

July 20 1917