Messrs. Adams & Sullivan,
Contractors,
Fifth Street,
Louisville, Ky.

Gentlemen:

I would advise that suit has been filed, styled N. P. Napier versus the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company and Sullivan & Adams, in which it is sought to recover in the sum of $240.00 for injury to dwelling and barn, watermelon patch and truck patch, on account of material being deposited on the same from blasts set off in grading the Walker's Branch Spur; also $1,000.00 for injury to land as the result of wash caused by material being placed in the margin of the river opposite his property.

I would advise that this suit is one in which your Company is required under the terms of the contract for constructing the Walker's Branch Spur to protect and save harmless this Company from judgment, costs or attorneys' fees and I would be obliged if you will address a letter to the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company to the effect that you will undertake the entire defense of the case and hold it harmless from judgment, costs or attorneys' fees that it will
