No. 1 Old Dominion intimidates Lady Kats Monarchs pull away after UK's 2nd half drought

By BRIAN RICKERD
Assistant Sports Editor

"I think UK mentally copped-out in the second half. They just couldn't take it anymore."

So said Old Dominion's 6-6 center Inge Nissen, referring to the Lady Kats' second half drought that allowed the top-ranked Lady Monarchs to pull away to an 81-65 victory yesterday at Memorial Coliseum.

Leading 38-29 at intermission, Old Dominion exploded in the first 10 minutes of the second half and outscored Kentucky 20-4, making it 58-33 with 9:49 left in the game.

Old Dominion extended that to 71-44 on Nissen's five-footer with 4:46 remaining and the Lady Kats had to battle the rest of the way to avoid a humiliating final margin.

"We just got frustrated in the second half," said UK Coach Debbie Yow. "We didn't play with the poise that we had earlier."

Yow said the primary culprit was Nissen who blocked nine Lady Kat shots, most of which came in the second half when UK seemed to tire and lose the spirit it had early in the game.

"We told them to shoot inside in the second half, and it was just very frustrating to get the shots blocked," Yow said. "Nissen affected us a lot."

Monarch Coach Marianne Stanley said the Kats may have forced the ball inside too much at intermission.

"They were hitting outside late in the game, but they should have done shot outside sooner," Stanley said.

Nissen was dominant on offense as well. She poured in 25 points, hitting 11 of 14 shots and three of four free throws. Most of those points came on layups as the Monarchs successfully fed the ball into Nissen throughout the contest.

"Nissen is the best center in the nation," said Old Dominion's All-American guard Nancy Lieberman.

Kentucky came into the game obviously sky-high and pushed its own weight around through the first 16 minutes. UK led on several occasions early, and ODU didn't finally take the lead for good until Nissen hit a layup to give the Monarchs a 28-27 lead with 3:54 remaining in the first stanza.

But those 16 minutes seemed to empty the Kats' gas tank. ODU cranked up its fast break and outscored Kentucky 10-2 over the final four minutes of the half.

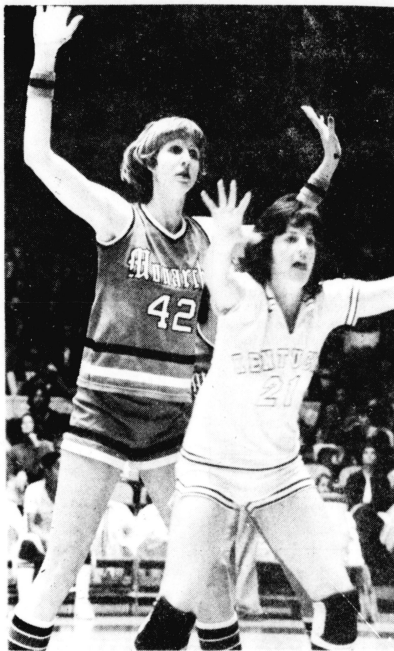

"I think that spurt took the steam out of UK," Stanley said. "At halftime, we emphasized the fact that we couldn't let Kentucky get back in the game. We needed a quick start in the second half and we got it."

Lieberman said the Monarchs intimidated Kentucky after intermission.

"Kentucky was not the same team in the second half," Lieberman said.

"They backed off."
Despite the closeness of the score early in the contest, Lieberman said she was never worried.

Kentucky's Maria Donhoff (right) tries to prevent 6-6 center Inge Nissen of top-ranked Old Dominion from getting a pass in yesterday's game at Memorial Coliseum before an estimated crowd of 3,500. Nissen had a game-high of 25 points as Old Dominion won the contest, 81-65.

St. Joseph's plans to close obstetrics unit

By DALE MORTON
Staff Writer

Reduced occupancy in St. Joseph Hospital's obstetrics ward during the past eight or nine years initiated a proposal to close it, according to Sister Michael Leo, president of St. Joseph's Hospital.

Although St. Joseph's has already requested approval from the East Kentucky Health Systems Agency, the proposal to close the obstetrics unit must be approved by eight agencies. The EKHS is in charge of coordinating health planning for Eastern Kentucky.

Steps to approve the proposal will begin in the next few weeks, and Sister Leo said she believes it will be approved.

Three years ago St. Joseph staffed 16 obstetrics doctors, now only four are on the staff. The hospital has the capacity to accommodate 18 births per day; "You have to staff for full occupancy," Sister Leo said.

Only 85 births were recorded from September to November 1978 — down 63 from the same period in 1977. This decrease in births caused the hospital to lose $49,000 in 1977; $47,000 in 1976 and $64,000 in 1975.

One reason for the decline in occupancy is the trend for group practice, Sister Leo said.

Doctors must go to another hospital, such as Good Samaritan or Central Baptist, to perform sterilization or abortions which are against the Catholic belief. "We're not allowed to do sterilization procedures," she said.

In contrast to St. Joseph, Central Baptist Hospital's birth figures have increased to 406 since 1973, and two new doctors were added to the staff. Mr. Francis Bobbitt, obstetrics unit coordinator for Central Baptist Hospital, said, "I can't tell you how its (St. Joseph's) closing will affect us."

Unlike St. Joseph, tubal ligations (a sterilization procedure for women are performed at Central Baptist. "I think young people are interested in starting small families," Bobbitt said. "There is a desire for the Lamaze method — natural child birth."

Dr. John Greene, hospital director of the University Hospital's obstetrics and gynecology unit, said the closing of St. Joseph's obstetrics ward would have no effect on UK's center. Its unit also performs sterilization; "We take care of the high-risk patients now," Greene said.

Although the yearly capacity of the University Hospital's ob-gyn unit is officially 1800, it has served as many as 2400 yearly, Greene said. "We've been holding pretty steady."

The Medical Center has also had a steady increase of births during the past three years, from 2,181 to 2,368.

Approximately 40 per cent of the hospital's business comes from indigent patients, who don't have insurance and are unable to pay for their care. Although many university hospitals are private and provide care exclusively for students, Greene said the UK Medical Center is open to all and provides a valuable teaching experience for UK medical students.

"Many hospitals throughout the country have had to close their obstetrics units because of a lack of business," Don Harrison, of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's region four headquarters in Atlanta said in a recent Lexington Herald article.

"Many states are considering regionalizing obstetrics care," he said.

"More hospitals in Kentucky may have to close their obstetrics units in the future," EKHS director Tony Goetz said in the same article, adding that "they won't necessarily be Catholic hospitals."

The last agency meeting will be held May 9, and until the decision to close the obstetrics ward is made, St. Joseph doctors will still be operating in the ward.

Dwight Anderson's 25 sparks Cats to victory

By THOMAS CLARK
Staff Writer

The Kentucky State Police trooper approached the reporter in the warm moments of Saturday night's UK-Florida game in Rupp Arena.

"How many points did Anderson have?" he asked.

"Twenty-five," the reporter replied. "Fourteen from the floor and another 11 at the line."

The cop smiled big. "You watch him. Some night he'll get hot and score 40!"

Dwight Anderson laughed when told about the episode. "Oh, I don't know about that. I'm just trying to help the team."

More or less the understatement of the night.

Anderson started his third game of the season and turned in the type of performance that usually transforms substitutes into starters. In addition to his 25 points, highest single-game total for a Wildcat this season, Anderson contributed four rebounds and one assist to an 87-81 victory in a grudge match that saw Kentucky revenge a Jan. 3 loss in Florida's Alligator Alley.

The victory was the third straight for the Wildcats, a team looking more like national champions than the Southeastern Conference cellar-dwellers they were two weeks ago. One of the big reasons for the turnaround has been freshman Anderson.

"I'm trying to use my talents as best I can," said Anderson. "We know we got to win every game now. Before, that pressure just wasn't there. We'll be all right. I just hope the team stays together."

Anderson's play seemed to reflect his awareness of early-season criticism that he couldn't shoot from the outside. All but one of his shots were from closer than six feet and he continually made the move to the inside.

KEWAL SINGH

Former Indian ambassador shares past experiences

By CHRIS BLAIR
Staff Writer

As a former Indian ambassador to many countries, including the U.S., Kewal Singh has seen the world, its leaders and its people. While a visiting professor in UK's political science department, 64-year-old Singh is sharing his 40 years of experience in international affairs with students and professors.

Distinguished, genteel and soft-spoken, Singh represents the spiritual heritage imbued in the Indian culture.

Acting as a voice between nations, he said he gained an understanding of the world's different cultures and traditions which often lead to misunderstanding and disruption.

From his office in the Patterson Tower, Singh spoke of other countries with respect and admiration. But discontent with war's destruction, he expressed bitter disappointment toward current unrest.

"The world has become extremely interdependent. Awareness of international developments on the part of students and citizens is most important," Singh said. "But because the United States is a vast country, domestic preoccupations do not encourage young people to think more of international problems and the future of the world community."

"Americans can not be indifferent to world events because American decisions shape the fate of other nations," he said.

Singh said he respects President Jimmy Carter's policy to strive toward world peace and saw favorable progress between Israel and Egypt brought on by the Camp David Summit talks.

"Israel and Egypt had not sat at the same table for nearly 30 years. One human being made it possible for them to once again negotiate," Singh said. "I was very pleased with Camp David."

His career in international relations began in 1948, when he joined the Indian Foreign Service for one year as First Secretary for the Indian Embassy.

Between 1949 and 1957 Singh held many other high government positions in Indian districts. He was awarded the Indian President's Award, "Padma Shree," in 1956 for distinguished services leading to the merger of French establishments with India.

LEGISLATION TO LIMIT PROPERTY TAX INCREASES will be hammered into final shape this week and readied for passage as the House and Senate strive to tie up loose ends and adjourn the special session of the Kentucky Legislature.

The consensus in both chambers appears to be that the Legislature will wind up this week in excellent shape to adjourn by the middle of next week.

Legislative leaders say they don't anticipate any major stumbling blocks, with two possible exceptions: legislation to limit property taxes, and how to balance the budget after tax cuts.

The House favors limiting annual property tax increases to 4 percent or an even lower rate, while the sentiment in the Senate is to allow a 5 percent or higher lid. How much of an obstacle the difference will be depends on how inflexible the lawmakers are.

POPE JOHN PAUL II, CHEERED BY MILLIONS as his car inched its way to Puebla, Mexico, told Latin American bishops in a major address yesterday that social justice must be sought spiritually and not politically.

The pope encountered opposition as a group of rebel priests, demanding that the Roman Catholic church take a more active role against oppression, organized a "dissidents' conference."

They said it would discuss human rights and social reforms, which they claimed would be ignored by the bishops' meeting. The third Latin American bishops' conference is expected to determine the church's future role in the social and political life of turbulent Latin America.

TROOPS FIRING MACHINE GUNS AND ANTI-RIFTERS armed with firebombs turned central Tehran into a bloody, flaming battlefield yesterday in the city's worst violence in months. At least 27 persons were reported killed and more than 300 wounded.

The street warfare exploded as Iran's political crisis reached a new and dangerous impasse. Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, spiritual leader of the anti-shah movement, rejected a proposal by Iran's Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar for a meeting at Khomeini's exile headquarters in France.

TWO MORE SKELETONS AMONG THE 27 FOUND at the home of accused mass murderer John Wayne Gacy Jr. have been identified. Authorities said they were 20-year-old men missing since late 1977.

The Cook County medical examiner identified the men Saturday as John Mowry, of Chicago, and Matthew Bowman, of suburban Crystal Lake.

So far, 12 victims have been identified, including 10 whose remains were found at Gacy's home and two whose bodies were recovered from the Des Plaines River. Gacy, 36, has been indicted in the murders of seven young men. He reportedly told investigators that he killed 32.

TENG HSIAO-PING, THE DRIVING FORCE in CHINA'S outward reach to the West, came to the United States yesterday for talks with President Carter and a coast-to-coast tour that will draw the world's most advanced nation closer to its most populous one.

The first of China's communist leaders to visit this country, Teng is at the center of a nine-day whirl of meetings and ceremonies trumpeting a new era in the relationship between China and the United States. The new era began Jan. 1 with full diplomatic recognition between the two nations.

Teng and Carter have scheduled six hours of conversation, starting with the first of two White House sessions this morning after a formal greeting on the South Lawn. That formal welcome, with its speeches and ceremony, will be Carter's first face-to-face encounter with China's 74-year-old vice premier.

A STUDENT'S INALIENABLE RIGHT TO BOOKS AT UK

To have a class, you usually need a room, an instructor and some books. For many students at the beginning of a semester, getting two out of three is the best they can do.

The missing element is textbooks. For a variety of reasons this semester, like always, there are gaps in the shelves at the bookstores. In a story last week, the various ways that textbooks can be delayed were described: professors can send in their orders late, teaching assignments can be made late, shipping can be delayed, books can be out of stock, etc.

Fifty to 75 percent of professors' orders for textbooks come in after the University Book Store's Nov. 1 deadline for the spring semester, said William Eblen, store manager.

Late orders that dwindle in cost additional time and money, because they have to be processed individually, said Joe Kennedy, owner of the UK store's competitor, Kennedy Book Store. Those extra costs must eventually be passed on to customers.

According to Eblen, the problem is at the departmental level. "There are few departments that get the information all in on time. Those that are best at getting it in have a coordinated effort," he said.

Evidently, more control needs to be placed on the book ordering process at the University. Professors should be required to submit textbook orders by the necessary date, and academic offices should be responsible for checking to see that orders have been turned in.

If a course assignment is being changed at a late date, then the previous professor should select textbooks for the next semester, or the old textbook should automatically be used. The new professor may then switch to a new book later in the semester, once it is available.

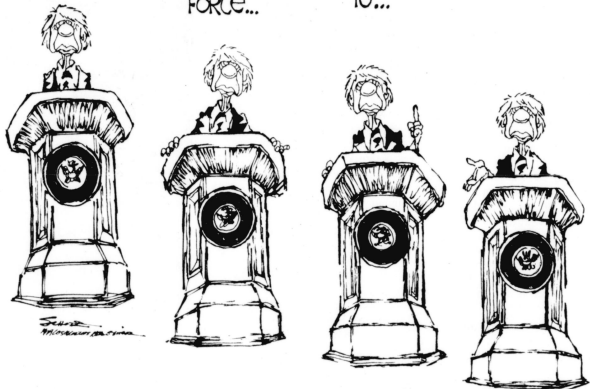

Students can help enforce the process, too. If books for a course are not available, complaints can be made to the department, individual academic adviser and the academic ombudsman. There should be a right to have textbooks on time, just as there are rights to have a syllabus and to know an instructor's grading criteria. Two out of three isn't good enough.

'Iranians go home!'

Student supports his country not the Eleven

By Steve Goldstein

George Potratz and the other Iranian students on campus are very angry because of the attitude of Jimmy Carter and the majority of American people who are "joining in the chorus of 'Iranians go home.'" For over a year there have been protests by the Iranian students denouncing the Shah and the Americans. In San Francisco and Beverly Hills last month, there were violent demonstrations in which Iranian students were actually involved in arson, vandalism and assault. I believe that this started the chorus of "Iranians go home."

Now George Potratz has the gall to ask the Americans, to support the Committee to Defend the Eleven. Here are my reactions and thoughts. I was neutral in my opinion of the Shah of Iran last year. I disliked the suppression of his people, the brutality of his secret police and so on, but by the same token, I understood the importance of Iran to the United States, both in terms of oil and in its strategic location to the Soviet Union. When the Iranian students marched around campus and Lexington shouting "Down with the Shah!" I was impartial. But when they began yelling "Americans go home," and "The American government is fascist," etc., I took this as a personal attack against me.

I can see how the Iranians disassociate themselves from the policies of their government because they did not put the suppressive Shah in power. Unlike Iran, however, the United States is a free country. I, as an American, voted for Jimmy Carter. I helped put him into power, to run the country and to make decisions in a representative form of government. So when the Iranians, or anyone, attacks our government they are attacking me personally, and this is why I cannot support them.

Furthermore, the Iranians are complaining about our government's rough treatment of them. I do not think the Iranians have been singled out. If the Ku Klux Klan or the American Nazi Party were to have violent demonstrations, or if the blacks were to riot as they did in the 60s; if protestors of the Viet Nam War were to protest in an uncontrollable manner, or if the whites, as they did in Louisville and Boston, were to protest

Iranians, per se, I am against their actions and methods of protest. I do not feel my government is singling them out. I feel that my government is doing what is necessary to keep peace and order in this country.

While the Lexington Eleven protestors on this campus, should not be deported, and while I agree that their sentences were probably a little harsher than necessary since their actions were merely disruptive, not violent, those few involved in the destruction which occurred in San Francisco and Beverly Hills should be deported, not because of "what" they were protesting, but rather, "how" they were protesting.

My final comments are these. George Potratz says that Jimmy Carter and the American people are singing a chorus of "Iranians go home." But just what are the Iranians in Iran singing about the Americans in their country? At least we are not killing, beating or violently threatening the Iranians here to go home or else. They should feel lucky that they received sentences and fines, instead of being beaten by the masses, like they are doing to us over there.

George Potratz asks me to support the Lexington Eleven, to protest their treatment by the American government. Considering all that I have stated, there is no way on earth I could support them, as I believe that these are the feelings of the majority of Americans, students and nonstudents alike.

Mail-order minorities arrive

By Gregg Fields

The nameplate on the door said the office belonged to "Dr. Ray Cyst, Vice-President of Federal Funds." I opened the door and walked in, followed by my roommate, Franklin, and his cousin, Joey. Joey is a senior in high school and had received a letter instructing him to come to this office to enroll for the fall semester at UK.

'franklin and me'

A young, attractive secretary sat behind a desk. "May I help you?" she asked.

Pointing to Joey, Franklin said, "He needs to enroll for the fall semester."

"O.K.," she said. "Do you have an appointment?"

"Yes, it's for noon," Joey said. "All right. Dr. Cyst should be able to see you soon. I'm going to lunch. He'll come out of his office when he can see you."

The secretary left. The three of us sat down just as the phone rang. It rang again. It rang several more times.

Finally, I went over, pushed the lighted button and picked up the receiver. But just as I got it to my ear, a voice came over the other end. "Dr. Ray Cyst, Vice-President of Federal Funds."

"Dr. Cyst, this is your lucky day," answered a happy, feminine voice.

blacks dropped by 50 percent last year."

"No, only by four," Dr. Cyst said. "But it wasn't my fault. The football team had a bad recruiting year."

The woman cleared her throat. "Well, sir, four was 50 percent of your black enrollment. Now, this year we have a large black inventory. And if you order 100, we throw in an American Indian for free."

I waved at Franklin and Joey, but couldn't get them to understand what the call was about. I pushed a button that said "loudspeaker" and hung up the phone.

"All right, give me a hundred blacks," Dr. Cyst said over a loudspeaker. "But how much federal money will that mean?"

"Let's see," said the woman. "That gives you 40 government coupons redeemable at any participating bank. They're worth a total of $4 million."

Dr. Cyst sighed. "I don't know. I kind of wanted to pay for the new Pharmacy Building with it."

"You want to order more?"

"Are you kidding? The alumni would perform a sex change operation on me. Isn't there any way..."

"Wait a minute — of course," said the woman. "You could get more money if you got blacks with catchup."

"With what?"

"Catchup. That is, underprivileged blacks who need to catch up academically before carrying a full college load."

"How much extra?"

"On a hundred you'd get a million..."

"I'll take them, I'll take them," Dr. Cyst said quickly. Franklin and Joey laughed. "One hundred blacks with catchup. And you can hold the Indian."

"Excellent, sir," said the woman. "Now, do you want some Iranians with that? To tell you the truth, they're in oversupply this year. We could give you some great bargains."

Dr. Cyst cleared his throat. "Well, I really should talk to Dean Birch about that."

"Who?"

"John Birch. He's in charge of making our international students feel at home."

"Well, you have to place your order today."

Dr. Cyst thought a minute. "Come to think of it, he did say something about wanting some Iranians to go."

"Good. And by the way, Dr. Cyst, naked Vietnamese boat people are in season."

"Are they worth having?"

"Oh, sure. Most of them come from educated backgrounds and..."

"No, no, no," said Dr. Cyst. "I mean how much money do I get from HEW..."

"For a complete set of 10 you get $200,000," she said.

"Well, sounds like a crummy deal to me," said Dr. Cyst. "But if it helps get the government off my back, then all right. But could you please put clothes on them for me?"

"Fine," said the woman. "It looks like that about does it."

"Could you read my order back to me?" Dr. Cyst asked.

"Certainly. That's 100 blacks with catchup, hold the Indian, with some Iranians to go and a Vietnamese set with dressing. Do you want all this delivered?"

"Yeah, but make it at night."

"Certainly, sir. I'm sure HEW will have your redeemable coupons in the mail soon. Bye now."

The voices on the loudspeaker went dead. Franklin and Joey were silent. Dr. Cyst's office door opened and out walked a short man with gray hair.

"Can I help you?"

"I need to enroll for the fall semester," Joey said.

"I'm sorry. You have to go to the Office Tower to do that."

"But the letter I got said to come here."

"Well, er, uh, they just do that so that I can — well, you know, get a look at — I mean meet — everyone."

Dr. Cyst turned back toward his office. "Well, c'mon, Cousin Goldberg," Franklin said.

Dr. Cyst spun on his heels. "What'd you say your last name was?"

"Goldberg."

Dr. Cyst grabbed Joey's hand and shook it furiously. "I'm Ray Cyst, Vice-President of Federal Funds. Wait right here. I have to go make a phone call. And let me just say that this University sincerely hopes you'll be of great worth to it. More than you'll ever know."

Joey grinned. "Well, I have an idea."

Visiting professor is former ambassador

For the next year Singh served India as ambassador to Cambodia. Applying the knowledge he gained through that service, Singh connected the past with present situations and called the Cambodian condition "tragic."

"Cambodia became involved in conflicts much against its wishes," Singh said. "I remember Prince Sihanouk, during the Vietnam war, appealing to major powers to guarantee his independence and non-alignment. He got a poor response."

"I don't think I have known people who are more gentle, who are more peace loving, and who are more polite and kindly than the Cambodian people," he said. "Now it seems their spiritual and cultural traditions have received a fatal blow."

"I can't believe it's the same country. But I can not invade the early restoration of democratic institutions and respect for human rights," he said.

After his term in Cambodia,

Singh went back to Pakistan, the country of his birth.

He expressed disappointment in his experience there, saying, "It is not easy to be an ambassador to a country in which you are born."

"It was naturally very painful for one who was born there, educated there and had all their friends there to witness the tension and conflict between India and Pakistan," he said.

"However, even in situations of tension and conflict the personal good-will and friendships among people remained."

In 1972 Singh became an ambassador to Germany, a country he had visited previously as a student and during World War II with the Indian Military Commission.

He witnessed the destruction of historical German towns and the hard work and discipline that went into rebuilding those towns.

"Germany is a remarkable country in many ways. We all know how much it has given the world in the domain of philosophy, literature, music and science," Singh said.

"After seeing that place as a student, it was very depressing to return ten years later and see nothing but desolation," he said.

"Whole towns were smashed. The town of Cologne, a beautiful historical town, was in rubble; the same was true for other cities. One could drive for miles around without seeing one building."

Commenting on the variations between countries, Singh said Americans and Indians share many common values.

"Both are very open, warm hearted, and ready to express views freely," he said.

"Germans on the other hand, because of their national traits, are slightly more formal. They firmly believe in hard work and discipline; this discipline sometimes presents problems for other nations."

He said America's awareness of other cultures is inadequate because of an abundance of homeland problems that leave little time for discovering the vast world around us.

By broadening the world's awareness of differing cultures, many disturbances among countries can be avoided,

Singh said. "The responsibility for widening those views lies with academic institutions and public figure heads."

Anderson's dunk ices UK win

"I was trying to penetrate," he said after the game. "Coach (Joe B.) Hall told me if I gotta take it, take it. Otherwise I should bring it back out to LaVon (Williams) and the others coming down the floor."

Penetrate is what Anderson did for the entire evening. His play under the basket not only gave him 15 shots at the foul line, but also earned him a place in the hearts (and mouths) of the 23,472 fans.

His highlight play was a finale act that broke the back on a Florida rally to tie the Kentucky victory.

With 44 seconds left in the game, Florida ready to pounce on a three-point Wildcat lead and guarding heavily on Kyle Macy's in-bounds pass, Anderson jumped away from the pack, reeled in Macy's long fly pass and went up for the flying dunk as the Florida defenders watched helplessly.

"Coach Hall called the play in the huddle," said Anderson. "I mishandled the pass and had trouble putting it down. I just wanted to put it in the hole, but I almost ran past the basket."

While the rest of Anderson and his teammates is impressive, their lack of height is a problem—a bruising problem, according to Anderson. "I crash the boards when the play's there. But it was rough in there. My little body gets beaten up under the basket."

The 6-3 Anderson did concede he's "kinda scared" about going after the rebound and it was hard to blame him for trying to avoid matchups with Florida tall forwards Malcolm Cesare (6-9) and Reggie Hannah (6-8) on the boards.

Not that the action was any softer on the floor. Anderson lost his balance several times while dribbling around the outside of the pack, only barely retaining possession of the ball.

"They were doing a lot of pushing off and I lost my balance," he explained. "They play rough... just clear your right out."

"And the 25 points? The Dayton, Ohio native didn't realize he had scored that much until told by a reporter after the game. "I tried to keep my average up in high school," he said with a big grin. "But tonight I didn't watch. I was just trying to help the team."

All teams should be so lucky.

Lady Kats coach still feels Tennessee is the best

"UK couldn't have beaten us even if they had played with the same intensity in the second half that they had in the first," she said.

Why? "Because we have superior talent," Lieberman replied frankly. "I never doubted that we'd come back and win."

Lieberman lived up to her reputation as a complete player, perhaps the best in the nation.

The 5-10 junior tallied 21 points, 11 assists, six rebounds, and four steals.

UK center Liz Lukschu led the Lady Kats with 13 points. Linda Edelman followed with 12, while Debra Oden and Janet Timperman had 11 apiece. The Lady Monarchs shot 59 per cent from the field on 33 of 56, while UK hit 23 of 54 for 43 per cent. Old Dominion outbounded the Kats 33-28.

But are the Monarchs the best team this nation has to offer?

"We were impressed with Old Dominion, but I personally feel Tennessee is the number one team in the nation," said Young.

"I don't know if we are the best or not, but I think we can play with anyone," Lieberman added.

"I haven't seen anyone better than us," Stanley concluded.

WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER?

It's different things to different people.

Of course, all employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: they are civilian employees of the Department of Defense; they are engaged in technical projects vital to our nation's communications security or a foreign intelligence production mission; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example:

TO THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS MS): An NSA career means delving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and manage contracts on communications, recording, and information storage devices and systems whose capacities and speeds are still considered futuristic in most quarters.

TO THE COMPUTER SCIENTIST (BS MS): It means applying his or her knowledge in a wide range of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications analysis, and retrieval systems.

TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means defining, formulating, and solving complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra and combinatorial analysis are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician.

Interested in learning more about the difference in an NSA career? Schedule an interview with us through your Student Placement Office today. If we do not recruit on your campus, send a resume to the address given below.

U.S. citizenship is required.

Exceeds expectations

UK Opera is confident success

By CHRIS BLAIR
Staff Writer

Opening night of the UK Opera's English performance of Bedrich Smetana's comic opera, The Bartered Bride, surpassed all expectations of a student production.

The singers displayed a pervading measure of confidence, especially Howard Ray, as Kecal, who maintained the comical flow with his sharp cleverness and sound tenor voice. Ray's exceptional performance revealed his continual operatic growth.

Underlying the opera's success is the mere fact that Smetana's opera is a difficult undertaking for an amateur group. The greatest difficulties are rooted in several long dialogues, variety in mood, the Bohemian dance (performed by the chorus and lyrical orchestra music accompanying the voices).

The plot centers around two lovers, Maria and Jenik, whose vow to share their lives together becomes endangered when Kecal, a sly marriage broker, attempts to contract Maria as the bride of Vasek, a wealthy landholder's son.

Although Jenik professed true love to Maria, he didn't seem in the least bit apprehensive about the whole matter.

Later Kecal, seemingly bribes Jenik into renouncing Maria, allowing her to marry Micha's son. Even though Maria's heart is broken, she refuses to marry anyone, all the while, amid bitterness and confusion, holding fast to love for Jenik.

Maria's sadness is intermingled with the villager's festive joy providing an interesting contrast which sets Maria apart from the rest of the town people.

The festive season is further enhanced by a circus which comes to the village. The shy Vasek, who stutters and doesn't wish to marry Maria anyway, falls for a gypsy dancer who convinces him to join the circus.

The complicated plots finally come together when Micha recognizes Jenik as his long lost son which was believed dead. In the end all are happy as Maria is bound to Jenik by contract and love.

Sharon Kinnison sang the leading part of Maria. Her arias were beautiful and dramatic as she sang of love and her desire to hold onto Jenik. The recitatives were delicate and Kinnison's voice rode nicely on the orchestra's music.

Hunter Hensley, was a great asset to the opera as, with apparent ease, he portrayed Jenik's calm optimistic attitude toward the situation and its inevitable outcome.

Top mention also to Stephen Bobst who delightfully captured Vasek's likable character giving a unique twist to the idea of momma's boy.

Phillip Miller's orchestra performed at its best and saved the rather awkward Bohemian dance.

The UK Opera chorus filled the Lexington Opera House with festive gaiety last weekend in a successful performance of a comic opera, The Bartered Bride.

Kentucky tops Florida for 3rd straight win

By MIKE KENNY
Staff Writer

The UK Band's opening song for the Kentucky-Florida game Saturday night was "Won't You Come Home Bill Bailey?" And if Kentucky's 87-81 win over the Gators was any indication, the Wildcats had indeed come home.

Kentucky showed no resemblance to the team that dropped a 76-65 decision down in Gainesville on Jan. 3. In fact, UK Coach Joe B. Hall said, "Our players were the most ready they have been this year."

Just how ready were the players? Freshman forward Dwight Anderson had a game-leading 25 points, passing Chuck Aleksins' high of 20 points in the Syracuse game last month. After the game he said, "I didn't even know I was starting until we dressed out."

Kentucky took the lead for good, 20-18, midway through the first half and then stretched that to nine points, on a 12-foot jumper by Jay Shidler. LaVon Williams made his first points of the game when he pumped in two free throws with 1:01 left in the half to give Kentucky a 45-38 lead at intermission.

For the first half both Kentucky and Florida had connected on 16 of 32 shots for an even 50 percent.

But then things took a change for the worse for the 70 Gators when, with just 65 seconds into the second half, guard Ric Clarson picked up his fourth personal foul and was taken out of the game. Without Clarson, Florida appeared to lose some of its aggressiveness on defense.

Kentucky, on the other hand, was getting stronger by the minute. After a Florida basket made it 52-48 in favor of Kentucky, the Wildcats went on a rampage.

During that span, Chuck Verderber, who had 22 points, was hitting short jumpers and Kyle Macy was feeding the ball generously to other teammates (he had a game-leading seven assists). Shidler was performing feats typical of an acrobat. One such feat had Shidler, in an attempted stall, hurdling the press table and rolling into the stands. Clarson re-entered the game at the end of that stretch which saw UK outscore the Gators 14-2, and take its biggest lead of the night at 66-50.

Florida launched a fierce comeback and cut the margin to three points (62-79) on a 15-foot jumper by Clarson, giving the senior guard 21 points in the night.

With 44 seconds remaining, Florida called a timeout, giving Kentucky a chance to set up an inbounds play.

A play that had Kyle Macy throwing a full court bomb to Anderson.

A play that had Anderson slamming home a dunk with all the furor of a James Lee with

A play that had assured Florida of its third loss in as many tries at Rupp Arena.

After the game the Wildcats were, for the most part, pleased with their performance. Macy said, "I think all the players are finally learning their roles." (This leaves Macy, who contributed 17 points, free to do his part).

However, one player did not feel he had done his role Saturday night. Although he was the unanimous choice for the Sixth Man award, Shidler, who was one of five from the floor, was not pleased with his performance.

"I feel I could be contributing to the team more. The last two or three games, I

Katharine Hepburn (pictured), under the direction of George Cukor, will star in THE CORN IS GREEN a special CBS-TV presentation Monday, Jan. 29.

In the production, Miss Hepburn is joined by a cast of gifted British and Welsh actors, including (in alphabetical order) Bill Fraser, Patricia Hayes, Anna Massey, Arno Morris, Ian Saynor and Toyah Wilcox.

The Corn Is Green, set in Wales at the turn of the century, chronicles an English woman's gallant struggle to educate youthful Welsh coal miners. At the outset, the arrival of Miss Morfar (Miss Hepburn) in an impoverished mining village is met with wariness by the illiterate townspeople, as well as by those who have had the benefit of education. Among the latter are the spinster Miss Ronberry (Anna Massey) and Mr. Jones (Arno Morris) a law clerk.

But the 6-1 junior guard added, "I don't feel it's going to Kentucky, 9-7, will attempt to win its fourth straight game tonight when the Wildcats play host to Auburn, a team they beat 86-83 in overtime Thursday night at the Alabama school.

Auburn, which lost 66-59 to Vanderbilt Saturday night, is 2-7 in the SEC and 8-9 overall.
