

War World

THE DAY IN EUROPE—Tuesday, May 18, was by official Anglo-American proclamation the end of the war in Europe. By the German signature to the articles of surrender at Reims, France, it was specified that the Germans on all fronts in Europe should lay down their arms at midnight Tuesday. But spontaneous celebrations of victory occurred in the cities of England and the continent as soon as the authenticity of the news reports was established. In England two days, Tuesday and Wednesday, were officially set aside for celebration.

On the battlefronts watchfulness rather than celebration was the rule. The Russians did not join Chiusi and Tolmas in their formal declarations since they did not feel any assurance that the fighting on the fronts would cease under the agreement. It was not until Wednesday that Stalin published his order of the day, and even then he was cautious in English and the whole Czechoslovak pocket were still offering stiff resistance.

The important thing was that the German surrender signed on May 7 was only a final incident in the collapse of German armed resistance, since millions of German soldiers had already been forced to surrender to the field armies of Eisenhower and Stalin. That agreement did provide for the surrender of all German naval units, including submarines then at sea, and for the German garrisons in the Channel ports, the Channel Islands, the Netherlands, Denmark, and Norway. The reductions of those pockets and the millions of men captured proved to be a hard and expensive operation for the Allies. Now the War in Europe is over.

THE PROBLEMS OF POST-WAR EUROPE—The industrial cities of Germany are little more than piles of rubble, just as much ruins as those of ancient cities. The life and health of the people of the countries which the Germans occupied and exploited so ruthlessly for four years are generally disrupted. All of Europe is undernourished and short of food and is feeling the potential source of disease, of sickness, of epidemics, such as typhus fever, which has been reported as present in German prisoner camps. Only the most careful supervision and every kind of preventive effort can forestall the spread of epidemic in the Europe but to the western hemisphere as well. That is our interest in feeding the peoples of Europe, in improving their health and increasing their physical resistance to disease.

For American soldiers there are years of foreign service as occupational troops in Germany. There is a hostile people which must be feared and watched, since there is as yet no satisfactory evidence that as a people they are repentant for their sins and desirous of turning over a new leaf. While some of the troops will be returned home within the next few months and some will be discharged from the service, the majority must look forward to service for many, many months in Europe or in a long voyage to the Pacific theater of war against Japan. That war is not over.

THE PACIFIC WAR—The struggle for the hills in the south of Okinawa and the port of Naha continues as a desperate fight for yards of rough ground. Japanese planes have caused some damage to the transports and lighter craft landing officers. Radio reports from the Japanese home islands have indicated increased power. But in naval operations north of Okinawa a major unit, a battleship or large U. S. carrier, has been reported officially as damaged.

UK's Million Dollar Dream Has Become An Actuality

The University's million-dollar field house is no longer a dream. It has materialized in the architects' plans and plans, which have been approved by the University board of trustees. The only "bottleneck" in construction is the delay in the delivery of materials.

Contemporary Design The memorial field house architect, John Gilling of Lexington and his associates, Ernst Johnson and Hugh Meriwether, have drawn up an original plan of contemporary design, based on classical lines. The main entrance, facing the center of the structure, which is through an exterior memorial court with paved terrace, colonnade, and landscaped background. From the memorial court entrance leads into a memorial lobby, 100 by 30 feet with a 25-foot ceiling. This lobby will be the architectural feature of the building and will house trophy cases and other memorial features. The general ticket offices open off this lobby.

Ramps at both ends of the memorial lobby will lead to public foyers which will be 185 feet long and 44 feet wide and which may also be entered from the Adams Street end. From the Adams Street foyers lead to the main cross aisles entering the coliseum. Two tiers of seats in the coliseum, and they will be entered from the cross aisles, at the top of the lower tier and at the top of the upper tier. Seats are arranged at both sides and at one end of the playing floor, to accommodate a total of 12,000 people, only 3,000 seats in the end group. The top-most row of seats is 44 feet above the playing floor level.

Students Will Vote Monday SGA Amendment To Be Considered

An election will be held Monday, from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Union building to enable the student body to vote on an amendment to the constitution of the Student Government Association to be considered.

The swimming pool has been planned at the east end of the field house. It will be 82 feet, six inches in length and seven lanes, or 28 feet wide. There will be a spectator gallery for the swimming pool, seating 500 people, to be entered from the east foyer of the building at second floor level. The swimming pool is on the first floor level, and the locker and shower rooms for men and women are also in this level, extending under the east foyer. There are street entrances, one for men and one for women, from Euclid avenue, for those students using the pool. After Examinations - What Do We Do?

By Marianne Cross How many of you plan to spend your summer; camping in the mountains, sunning at the seashore? Restrictions on travel, the demand for industry workers, accelerated courses, and perhaps most of all, the absence of the usual neighborhood gang to loaf with in the summertime, have taken part of the fun from the long-awaited three months' vacation. Both quarters of summer school and war jobs are the two prospects which are anticipated by the greatest number of students interviewed at random this week. Among the jobs listed were: draftsmen in a boiler factory making equipment for the Navy, illustrator of army books at Port Knox, research chemist, soil conservation, library assistant, food researcher, expressman, radio announcer, Red Cross and nurses aid workers. For many of the seniors these jobs will be the beginning of their life-time work. Jobs as counselors in summer camps and as recreation directors of summer school, and many of the coeds who "can't feature staying inside."

What Is An Honor?

"Those persons who dedicate themselves to the pursuit of honors with no idea other than that of obtaining a reward have lost sight of what an honor really means."

With this thought as her theme Phyllis Freed, senior woman who was chosen by a faculty member to deliver one of the messages at the University's first annual Honors Day convocation on Tuesday, carried out the precedent set by Betty Anne Ginnocchio at the Founders Day convocation of being the first student speaker at an assemblage of this kind.

Memorial Hall was almost completely filled that day because of two reasons—recognition of achievement was given to 200 deserving students themselves, and their representative, speaking as one who has won distinctive honors in her College of Arts and Sciences, voiced sincerely the opinion of all who have attempted to set a goal to attain.

The text of her address went out to every student. If the names of some were omitted in the public recognition service, if some were not called upon to stand and make known by "outward manifestation" their scholastic progress, and if they were not granted the ribbon and pin which signified outstanding merit, they were perhaps in the class that just fell short of the requirements and yet are "well deserved of it."

The word "honor" has been defined over and over again until the true meaning has taken on a false interpretation. The experience of deserving such achievement along with the thrill of recognition by the students and faculty of one's own university is indeed something to cherish, yet the student who can personally acknowledge self-satisfaction and at the same time realize that he has done his very best can feel a certain pleasure that needs no other mention.

We have often wondered to what end these so-called honors lead. Sometimes we think it all leads to lots of worry, lots of work, and not enough of the old "college life."

But the purposes behind Miss Freed's address discourage any of these opinions:

"The student who accepts an honor as an incentive—as a spur to higher things in life—is the one who embodies the principles of an honorary society. For us, the students of today—the students of the world—those principles take form in the word 'scholarship,' in the expression 'learning for the sake of learning.'"

Harpy's Bazaar

Everyone likes to put his best foot forward, and now is the best time to do it. Never before have shoes been so full of style and comfort. Summer shoes are going to be cool and easy to wear.

For sport and casual wear, play shoes outrank all others in popularity. Since they are unrationed and inexpensive, it is easy to have several pairs to match summer dresses and play suits. The shortage of material hasn't hurt the new play shoes. Sew on a strap here, and there with a sole for support, and you have the latest in footwear.

Raffia Wedges
The newest version is a braided raffia wedge with a flexible wooden sole. With a pair of these you don't need to worry about being seen and not heard.

For dress as well as sport wear, fabrics are being used in place of precious leather. Dress shoes are featuring jeweled platform soles, frills and bows, glazes, stung heels, open toes, and ankle straps—but not simultaneously.

Unrationed
Many of the summer shoes are unrationed and, with shoe coupons so scarce, it is wise to choose from this group.

If a shoe stamp must be spent, the wise choice, whether it be for sport or dress wear, is a practical style that can be worn several years. The end of the war will not mean the end of shoe rationing, and this summer's new shoes may have to see us through several summers to come.

ED FERREY—head of the newsmen at Radio Station WHAS, is a Hoosier, born in Columbia City, Indiana, twenty-five years ago. Educated in the public schools there, and at Indiana University, Ed still has a strong tie with his home State. He teaches an extension course in Journalism at the Indiana University Center in Jeffersonville, . . . and his wife teaches in the high school in New Albany.

As News Chief, Ed keeps an eagle eye on the re-writing of each one of the 15 daily newscasts originating at WHAS. He checks, studies and edits all releases, taking particular care to see that they get only the most important, most interesting and most complete news, coming out of the five Associated Press and United Press teletype machines that are spilling out more than 200,000 words every 24 hours.

This serious young man, with blond curly hair and penetrating blue eyes came to WHAS in September, 1943, as news writer, from the Fort Wayne News Sentinel. He went to the News Sentinel fresh from University, and worked at every desk except the city editor's, from reporter to telegraph editor in the 2½ years he was there.

Ed was made chief of the expanding WHAS newsmen last October.

When he isn't supervising five news writers at WHAS, or teaching at I.U., Ed is writing feature articles for newspaper press services and magazines. One of his articles recently appeared in Readers' Digest.

By Betty Lee Fleishman We were looking for a vital member of the University staff. We asked everyone where she could be found but no one seemed to know. Outraged they knew her—she talked to her dozens of times. But what did she look like? We couldn't find anyone who had ever seen her. Her name? We didn't know. You see, she is the operator of the University telephone branch exchange.

After a little detective work, we finally found Miss Elizabeth Holsclaw in front of dozens of criss-crossed wires of the switchboard. The office was neatly hidden in the Administration building between the offices of Dean Leo Chamberlain and his secretary.

Miss Holsclaw, relief operator, and Miss Betty Swope, who has been at the University switchboard for 22 years, together handle an average of 2,200 calls a day during the ten hours that the switchboard is open. We tried to keep a record of how many wires were plugged in during our visit but we soon got mentally tangled up in the interweave wires.

The busiest hours are from 10 to 12 a.m. and from 2 to 4 p.m. Some times more than 400 calls are handled during a single hour, while 200 calls is average, Miss Holsclaw stated.

The University telephone operator is also an information center. "We get many from fans curious about the results," she said. "We have continual calls about locations of buildings and about every convention, conference, and meeting that is held. It's our job to know the answers."

The business office gets the most calls, stated Miss Holsclaw, with the Experimental station running a good second. She added that the busyness of calls in single departments vary with what is going on in the department. For example, during the high school Music convention, she said, the Music department is just flooded.

There are 160 University telephone stations and about 70 of these have additional extension lines. There are eight wires on the switchboard to handle the inter-University calls and ten trunk lines for outside calls.

Lines Keep Busy The University operators handle 20 to 25 long-distance calls a day.

'The Lowe-Down'

By Dick Lowe The boys who compete in athletics for the glory of UK can't expect to win every game in the competition with every other school in the field of sports.

We defeated the University of Cincinnati twice on the basketball floor, so it was only natural that we treat them right and allow them to even the score. No, we are not alibing; just getting around those words that would explain in such a dreadful tone the outcome of the tennis matches that were played on Downing courts Saturday.

The boys from Cincinnati took back with them to the Queen City everything but the nets and if they hadn't been wrapped around the poles they probably would have taken them too. The small crowd that braved the threatening rain to witness the matches had only a little to cheer about. They were enthusiastic about the two sets between Frank Inouye, the star from UCLA, and Al Reynolds, the spark plug for the Kentucky attack. These two played tennis that would have brought cheers in any top ranking match.

The other games were of no comparison, with the Bears taking the other sets in easy style and without too much competition. The other sets received as much attention from the fans as would a fast and furious game of Chinese Checkers. There was no comparison to the style or ability of the No. 1 game.

Frank Inouye and Aaron Weinstein are players of equal talents but the number 1 position was given to Inouye as he has Since V-E Day the racing people have wasted little time in the advantage of age and more experience. UK has no one capable of holding down the No. 2 position in fast competition. It seems as though Reynolds will be the only one able to hold up the laurels after evaluating last week's results.

We play a return match with UC on McMiken courts, May 23, and maybe the team will be able to redeem themselves then, so we will not pass judgment on their prospects until then. hurrying up the plans for the opening of the tracks again. In fact, they lost so little time that the day of the running of the famous Kentucky Derby has been announced. The 1st running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs on June 9 will be presented for the edification of the home town patrons only. No reservation will be sold to out-of-towners was the word from Col. Matt Winn, president of the Louisville oval.

The students at UK who live in Louisville are in luck as they have a chance of obtaining seats very easily and then there is no school at that time—so what more could you ask for.

In the roundup of sports over the nation it was noted that Male High of Louisville captured the All-Kentucky Conference track meet with 74 points. Louisville Manual got 71½, Murray and Danville 20½ each and St. Xavier, Louisville, four, Murray, Henderson, Danville and Male were returned winners in regional track meets.

Postponed games, due to cold and rainy weather, plagued major league clubs. In the first 21 playing days the 16 big league teams had 45 postponements, 24 in the National and 21 in the American.

The government's wartime crackdown on professional athletes ended when the War Department decreed that no more athletes unable to meet the requirements of general service will be inducted.

The greatest athletic program in sports history was mapped out for American soldiers in Europe.

Miss Holsclaw stated that often five trunk lines will be tied up with long-distance calls which force the exchange to operate with only the remaining five outside lines. This explains the "Sorry, lines are busy" statement which is not infrequently heard over the receiver.

University people are nice over the telephone," emphasized Miss operation of the University.
