platform on the tariff and the proposition to return to the old State banking system is political madness. They seem to want to foster upon us the provision of the Confederate Constitution touching the tariff, thus reversing & revolutionizing the established Constitution of our own Constitution, and then <sup>carry us back</sup> to the rotten & miserable ante-bellum system of a currency authorized & controlled by each state. One of the crowning glories of the war was the substitution of a sound National Currency for the wild cat money issued by local banks, which was often not good at home and rarely current outside the state. Perhaps we shall
