Lobbying primary concern of SGA officials

Senior Staff Writer

The Student Government Association will get the chance to take many of its plans off hold this semester when it focuses on lobbying mester when it focuses on lobbying the control bavid Bradford said.

Tim Freudenberg, SGA vice president, said the lobbying is "low key," its results unable to be measured concretely. He has already spent about five days in Frankfort with legislators, and plans to meet with the attorney general and the licutenant governor this week.

"We're working with (James O. King, vice president for administration's) office in formulating a strategy that goes side by side with the University's strategy,'' Freudenberg said.

The amount of funds designated for higher education is something that Bradford and Freudenberg are concerned with although they will not know what the state's budget will provide until next week Bradford said he is hopeful that they will ce aute to piay a key role in any decision.

Freudenberg said he feels that many of the best students in the re-gion are not aware of the opportuni-ties available to them at UK. He said he is interested in "getting quality students to come to this Uni-versity and then keeping them here and making sure that they can af-ford to come here."

The reduction of nuclear weapons, and an ultimate freeze of those weapons were discussed last night at a meeting of the Bluegrass Nuclear Freeze Campaign.

Rhonda Blair, a professor in the UK theater department, said the group is new and hopes to set some goals for itself: "Our objective is to get some concrete goals defined."

The meeting held at the Kninonia.

goals for itself. 'Our objective is to goals for itself.' Our objective is to goals defined, she said.

The meeting, held at the Kotionia ("K") House, was 'only our second or third.' Betsy Neale, group spokesperson, said.

The group is planning to meet on a weekly basis, she said.

The main topic of last night's meeting was the general direction discussion. The general direction discussion. The general direction statement is the groups attitude on the nuclear arrais issue.

Group members were before the meeting began, with the idea that each member could make suggestions regarding the original statement.

Throughout the discussion, group members brought up three issues that they thought should have been incorporated into the statement. The original statement did not include any mention to the possible reduction of conventional weapons. Some group members brought up the fact that much more money is allocated in the U.S. defense budget did not be stated in the discussion freeze and the move of the national nuclear freeze campaign in the United States.

The group decided to wait on such additions to the general direction such additions to the general direction and the move of the national nuclear freeze campaign in the United States.

statement until more is known on the subjects.

The statement the group eventually settled on, however, called for a freeze and the eventual elimination of nuclear weapons, Blair said.

"It should be made clear, the freeze is the first step," Neale said. "Reduction can't result without the freeze first."

The last phase of the meeting had the group break off into committees, designed to make group members better educated and their views more visible to the public.

Group members placed a great deal of importance on public educa-tion, in which they will attempt to make the Bluegrass better informed on nuclear war.

"We must do all we can to prevent further growth in numbers of nucle-ar arms," Blair said.

The group is open to students and the public alike. Weekly meetings are announced in the Kernel classified ads.

University on road to higher, stricter academic standards

Academic excellence and UK. The two just do not mix, at least they haven't in the past. A series of committees and programs, along with faculty and student dedication, might just make UK and excellence synonymous.

This week 25 to 35 faculty members will participate in a phone-a-thon with the primary goal of attracting top-notch high school seniors to UK's ranks. This past December, 34 faculty members contacted six to eight students during two-hour phone sessions.

Soon Omicron Delta Kappa leadership honorary and Mortar Board senior honorary also will get their groups involved with drawing "the kinds of students that belong in this University," according to Donald Sands, chairman of the Academic Excellence Committee and associate vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Ment Day already has been tentatively planned for March 2. The program will bring academically superior students to the University, Last year, UK students gave tours to high schoolers participating in the Governor's Scholars program, which honors Kentucky's star pupils.

All of these programs have an ulterior motive. Sands estimates that one out of six freshmen will fall short of UK's selective admissions requirements to begin in Fall 1984.

UK not only wants the best students, it wants students

UK not only wants the best students, it wants students who will meet their new standards. The policy will demand that incoming freshmen either have an American College Test score of 25 or better if their grade point average is between 2.0 and 2.49, or an average between 3.5 and 4.0, if their ACT score is below 11.

Sands said in an earlier interview that he hopes the politheir ACT score is below 11.

Sands said in an earlier interview that he hopes the policy will enable UK to offer the majority of students a better education. John Stephenson, special assistant to the chancellor for academic development and director of the Appalachian Center, also applauded selective admissions. "If we are building toward excellence, it is a wise policy to added "bacific theory to be a selective admission of the selective admission of the selective admission of the selective admission."

we are building toward excellence, it is a wise policy to adopt," he said.

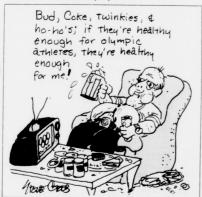

The University deserves a gold star. Sands and Stephenson, along with many other faculty and students, are working hard toward improving education at UK. Establishing selective admissions was not the end of the road for these administrators but just the beginning of associating quality with UK's name. In addition, groups such as the Committee to Review General Education are working to improve UK's curriculum standards the to Review General Education are working to improve UK's curriculum standards.

The difference between UK and Harvard is not necessarily the curriculum, textbooks or even faculty. The difference lies with students' attitudes toward learning, attitudes that make students care enough to volunteer for phonea-thon sessions or attend the upcoming curriculum hearings or participate actively on academic committees.

Our faculty are doing their share of the work toward promoting higher education. But as the saying goes, you can only lead a horse to water. Now, students at UK must work to meet the University's strict standards, and they must set higher standards for themselves.

Perhaps then the state and University will move forward in education and no longer find themselves 50th in the nation or classified as a party school.

Foot patrols have been debated before

Campus safety is an issue the officent Government Association brin p every year. This year a stude utside SGA is proposing stude oot patrols as a way for voluntee o cut down on campus crime ocut down on campus crime.

to cut down on campus crime.

As reported in a Kentucky Kernel story last Friday, Larry Bisig, president of Students for a Better UK, is organizing a group of students to patrol the parking lots and the sorority quadrangle.

quadrangle. This is the second time Bisig has advanced this idea. The first time he was an administrative assistant in SGA. In September 1982 he introduced legislation proposing that SGA organize volunteer student safety patrols.

The legislation never made it to the SGA Student Senate. The Sen-ate's Committee on Campus Rela-tions tabled the proposal indefi-nitely.

The committee members were concerned about the potential legal liability to SGA that operating such a patrol would bring. Although Bisg's proposal mandated that the student volunteers would "contact the proper authorities if a situation warrants such action" and that the would sign release forms "to free SGA and the University of all liability," the committee members still thought that SGA would assume too much liability.

Perhaps they were right; however, the committee minutes do not show any attempt to develop the basic concept of students contributing to the safety of the campus.

Conceptually, Bisig's idea is similar to the neighborhood watch programs in some cities, in which residents report suspicious activities to police.

dents report suspicious activities to police.

Both Bisigs idea and a neighborhood watch are based on the same premises: The police cannot be everywhere all the time, and alerting the police to suspicious circumstances increases their effectiveness. Given the way SGA treated his idea last year, it is no surprise that Bisig has chosen to form his own organization to address a problem on which SGA should be working. In pursuing this option, Bisig has added to the obstacles he must overcome to implement his idea. Rather than utilizing SGA's organizational structure, he must create his own. While SGA receives from the student activity fees $1 per semester for every full-time student, Bisig's group must seek funds. Ironically, Students for a Better UK is peti-tioning SGA for the money. While the proposal is essentially the same as the one that died in SGA last year, the fact that a sepa-rate group is operating the student patrols reduces SGA's liability even Bisig's nardes may end Bisig's patrols may not make a dramate impact on the campus Bisig's patrols may not make a dramate impact on the campus crime statistics: however, it embodies one of the principles of student government. Students should take initiative in searching for solutions to their concerns.

Perhaps student volunteers will spot potentially dangerous locations that the University can remedy at little or no cost. (Somehow things look different during the day than at night.)

Women's swim team wins meet

Last night the UK women's swim team upped its record to 4-1 with a victory at Centre College over Alabama A&M and Centre. UK outdistanced its opponents setting five new varsity records. Marci Sammartin swam the 500-yard freestyle in 5:36-9. Meredith Wingard swam the 200-yard butterfly in 2:19-5. Tish Hollingsworth swam the 200-yard betaestroke in 2:19-5. and the 400-yard medley relay and the 400-yard freestyle relay set records in times of 4:28.7 and 3:58.1 respectively.

UK scored 127 points to A&M's 73 and Centre's 42. Tracie Hoffman scored double victories in both the 1000-yard freestyle and 200-yard backstroke.

Bill Collins resigns party post

FRANKFORT — Gov. Martha Layne Collins asked for and received the resignation of her husband from his post as finance chair-man and treasurer of the state Democratic Party, an administration official said yester-day.

In a letter dated yesterday, Dr. Bill Collins tendered his resignation to party Chairman Joe Prather, effective Jan. 31 or when the party can find a replacement.

an find a replacement.

"After discussions with the governor and several others, I feel it is in the best interest of my family not to continue as treasurer and finance chairman of the Kentucky Democratic party," Collins said in the short letter.

Hank Lindsey, Collins' news secretary, said the governor sought the resignation. He declined to elaborate and said Collins was unavailable to comment because she was working on her 1984-86 budget proposal.

Last week's appointment was criticized in newspaper editorials, cartoons and by some members of the Democratic Party.

Andropov may talk with U.S.

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andro-pov, responding to President Reagan's call for a U.S.-Soviet dialogue, says such talks can be held if they are aimed at achieving "concrete accords," Tass said yesterday. — Andropov said the Moscow leadership ex-pendent progress from the University.

Andropov said the Moscow leadership so-pected moves from the United States aimed at fulfilling Reagan's call for better cooperation, the official news agency said in a report on an interview with Andropov in the Communist interview with Andropov in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

Reagan made the call in a speech Jan. 16.

Tass said the Andropov interview would be published in today's editions of Pravda.

It was the first public word from the ailing, 69-year-old leader since Dec. 26, when the text of his written address to the Communist Party Central Committee plenum was published. Andropov said at the time that "temporary reasons" prevented him from delivering the speech in person.

Open sorority rush continues throughout the semester

Ice cream parties and informal dinners are the for-mat for Spring open rush at the sororities. Open rush has much less pressure on both the members of the so-rority and the rushees, said Michele Bernard, panhelle-nic rush chairwoman.

According to Bernard, women who would like to join a sorority may sign up for open rush at 525 Patterson Tower. Names of those interested will be given to the sororities participating in open rush and the rush chairwomen of those sororities will contact the rushes. Open rushing is going on now and will continue for the entire Spring semester, she said. "We want women to become greek," said Bernard, a member of Alpha Xi Debrard said it is better to go ahead and open rush because it gives Spring pletiges time to work on their pledgeship and intitate without as many activities going on in the greek community as there is in the Fall. Spring is also an advantage for the pledges keeping a good grade point average. Sororities are free in Spring rush to have any kind informal parties and receptions. Unlike the structured formal rush in the Fall, they are not required to comply with rules and regulations that govern the parties. Also, there are not as many people rushing in the Spring so the perspective pledge can receive more individual attention from the members of the sororities.

Suzie Nobel, rush chairwoman for Alpha Xi Delta, calls all those interested in rushing her sorority. "It sorority to sorority

Paul Young's album. No Parlez, is the epitome of schizophrenic rock. From his shattered punk pose on the front cover to his thinly emotion-al vocals on this collection of cynical love songs, Young walks a thin line between sincerity and in-joke sur-realizer.

oddly satistying backdrop for these secursions into futility. Young's cover of "Wherever I Lay My Hat (That's My Home)," a Motown classic from the collective pen of Marvin Gaye, Norman Whitfield and Barrett Strong, is the album's most lushly orrehestrated track. Bassist Pino Palladino laces this song about the proverbial melancholy rambler with a lazy, looping bass ince that flirts with funk-rhythms without falling prey to their monotony.

ine that flirts with funk-rnytims without falling prey to their monotony.

For all its sketchy moroseness, however, No Parlez is a fairly upbeat album Toward the end of the first side. "Ku-Ku Kurama" tightens the flexible funks of "Wherever I Lay My Hat," while the title track employs a synthesized jungle rhythm in a self-styled outsider's critique of those who retries to acknowledge his perception.

In "No Irlex." Young drops his broken-love themes jung enough to can So call in the middleman for this your policy You just don't want to talk to me." and slyly blames the "waywardness" of youth on this authoritarian refusal to communicate: "You hate your children to rise. . still you put the hammers in the hands of the children." The question is, does Young see himself as one of these hammer-wielding youths, as their musical prophet, as an objective observer, or some strange combination of all three? Young is definitely not telling. Most of No Parler's second side is quite listenable but ultimately throwaway material, mere filler for throwaway material.

Maybe Young isn't to be taken seriously when he sings about lost to but more required strikes a rote of sincerity in an album full of musical playthings. After all, the emotional stakes are never quite so high when you're singing about someone else's problems.

That approach may make for a schizophrenic album, but it may be as close to rock-sincerity as one can reasonably expect.
