HB 44 attacked

Mayor says legislation threatens local government and services

DALE MORTON
Staff Writer

Lexington Mayor James Amato yesterday blasted a bill aimed at limiting increased property taxes, as well as an existing "revenue shortfall," although he said Urban County Government was "financially responsible" during 1978.

In his second annual State of the Merged Government address, Amato said House Bill 44, which would place a 4 percent lid on increases in real estate tax revenues, is a threat to city services and an infringement on the power of local government.

The bill is under consideration in the Kentucky General Assembly's special session.

"The rate of growth allowed by House Bill 44 will not even permit us to keep up with current rates of inflation," he said.

But because the bill proposes only that total revenues generated by property taxes cannot exceed the amount collected during the previous year by more than 4 percent, Amato said everyone would not feel tax relief.

"In fact," he said, "with the reassessment program that is required by law and which is currently in progress, many taxpayers will see increases in their tax bills considerably in excess of 4 percent. Other taxpayers will find that their taxes have been, in fact, reduced."

Amato said House Bill 44 would inhibit the quality of services that citizens of Lexington have a right to expect, and chided those who consider House Bill 44 a cure-all. What is needed, he said, is "more economy and efficient management at the state and the federal levels."

Amato said he realized local government could benefit as well from better management, but said he favored "home rule," or leaving the personal property tax rates to local government.

The city, however, has a money problem to reconcile. Last fall, in the Jacobs vs Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government court case, it was ruled that the city had to charge uniform personal property taxes. Previously, they'd been determined by how many urban services were provided in the service district in which a taxpayer lived.

The Urban County Council rejected a proposal last year to recoup the $2.1 million in lost revenue.

The proposal called for a personal property tax adjustment that would have increased taxes for some, while decreasing them for others.

Mayor Amato

The council has not found another way to recover the loss, he said, but the matter is still under "intense negotiation."

One possible solution, Amato said, may be franchise fees, totalling about $1.5 million, placed upon utilities. The 2 percent franchise fees have been imposed, but have never been collected.

Aside from the ramifications of the Jacobs case and the threat of House Bill 44, however, Amato said the outlook for the city's future is good and that 1978 was a year of learning.

One thing city government learned, he said, was how to remove snow. "Our snow emergency plan, which is the product of many, many volunteer manhours, has succeeded as well as we had a right to expect," he said. "The explanation is simple: In one word, preparation."

The next few months should see the realization of several of the mayor's campaign goals.

Reversible traffic lanes on Nicholasville Road are in the testing phase, with implementation scheduled for the next few weeks. (See Kernel article January 24, 1979.)

Also planned is a "computerized traffic signal system to facilitate the movement of traffic throughout the urban county area. And $40 million in road and bridge projects are underway or will be commenced during the next 12 months," he said.

Also within the next year-and-a-half Lexingtonians can anticipate the hooking up of cable television. "This exciting new dimension will improve the quality of the television signals already received and will provide additional educational and entertainment enjoyment for those who elect to take advantage of this service," Amato said.

With tourism, especially with the civic center and horse park, "we can be competitive in bringing convention and tourism business to this community," he said.

"A major goal of my administration is to make Lexington what should be: one of the major cultural, entertainment, sports and convention centers in the southeastern United States," Amato said.

Council's response is favorable

By DALE MORTON
Staff Writer

Members of the Urban County Council generally responded favorably to Lexington Mayor Jim Amato's State of the Merged Government speech yesterday.

O.M. Travis, of the First District, said the "speech merely stated our situation at this time. There is not much to be opposed to."

Joe Jasper, Third District, said, "I felt it was a good address. Mayor Amato really laid it on the line."

Jasper said he wished Amato had elaborated on low-income housing. "My area is going to be affected," he said. "I don't want to see anymore South Hill." South Hill was the area which was torn down to clear way for a parking structure at the Lexington Center. The area is in Jasper's district.

Don Blevins, Councilman-at-Large, took a slightly different approach to the mayor's speech.

"I view it as a fulfillment of a requirement. I didn't anticipate any surprises," he said. "The general nature of the speech has a general format that develops itself." Blevins said "I think this speech is patterned after the president's State-of-the-Union address."

Bill Lyons, Eighth District, who is a UK political science professor, said the mayor's stand on House Bill 44 was "very forceful."

Board okays sale of bonds for housing

By JEANNE WEHNES
Associate Editor

The executive committee of UK's Board of Trustees yesterday approved the sale of more than $6 million in bonds to finance the construction of apartments on the south part of campus and purchase some apartments on Rose Lane.

The greatest portion of the bonds, about $4.5 million, was purchased by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development at the lowest bid interest rate of 3 percent. The remaining $1.9 million 30-year bond issue was awarded to J.B. Hilliard & Lyons, a national brokerage firm with offices in Lexington. The company submitted a bid of about 6.384 percent interest, the lowest of four companies bidding for the issue.

"We're very pleased with the rate," said Jack Blanton, the University's vice president of business affairs. He said the current national rate is about 6.5 percent.

The bonds will finance undergraduate apartments near Shawnee town, which are already under construction, and the purchase of apartments on Rose Lane, which Blanton said the University already has made arrangements to buy.

The executive committee also approved a multidisciplinary gerontology center, designed to extend the study of aging and its problems. This academic unit, while not granting advanced degrees, will coordinate the various programs currently offered by the University under one administrative office. Students enrolled for WASHINGTON—Vice Premier Feng Hsiao-ping was reported yesterday to have declared that China wants a peaceful resolution of the Taiwan issue, but "cannot commit herself not to resort" to the use of force.

The account of Teng's remarks at a Senate luncheon came from a senator who took notes. Another senator, Thad Cochran, R-Miss., quoted the

Dr. Peter Bosomworth, vice president of the Medical Center, said UK's program will be one of four or five throughout the country. It will balance the biological and social science aspects of aging studies better than most of those currently in operation.

CIVIL COMPLAINTS HAVE BEEN FILED against two Kentucky coal firms for alleged violations of the Clean Water Act, the Environmental Protection Agency said yesterday.

A spokesman said the complaints were filed against Scotia Co. of Cumberland and Canada Co. of Pikeville by the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky.

The complaints were described as the first taken against coal mines in the southeast for alleged water pollution violations.

KENTUCKY OFFICIAL BUDGET ESTIMATES released yesterday by State Revenue Commissioner Maurice Carpenter indicate the state will have a total of 37.5 million in unspent money by the end of the biennium of 1980.

The General Assembly is bound by the official estimate if it decides to offset proposed tax cuts with surplus budget funds.

The Senate appears to be leaning in that direction, but the House is taking the approach that state programs should be trimmed to finance tax reductions.

THE FORMER GRAND DRAGON and the state secretary for the Ku Klux Klan were arraigned yesterday on charges of conspiracy to commit murder and criminal solicitation.

Neither Sherman Adams, who resigned as the Klan leader last month, nor John E. Palmore entered pleas when they appeared before Warren District Judge Benny Dickinson.

Dickinson fixed Adams' bond at $75,000 and that for Palmore at $60,000 and then scheduled a bond reduction hearing for today.

THE STATE TASK FORCE on Asbestos in the Public Schools assured Floyd County officials yesterday that financial obstacles delaying the removal of asbestos from Prestonsburg High School would be eliminated.

Eugene Mooney, secretary of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection and chairman of the task force, said the panel is willing "to move heaven and earth" to get asbestos removed from the school as soon as possible.

AN EXPLOSION RIPPED THROUGH a farm machinery building at a federal prison honor farm yesterday at Leavenworth, Kan., killing at least four persons and trapping at least two others, authorities said.

Charles Faulkner, acting director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in Kansas City, said four bodies had been identified and two or three men were still trapped in the debris. He said workers at the scene were not able to establish voice contact with the trapped men.

Faulkner said one of the victims had been identified as a guard and three other as prison inmates.

Four other men were reported injured.

Cause of the explosion was not known.

THE UNITED STATES ENDED 1978 with a record foreign trade deficit of $28.45 billion, a mass of red ink that undermined the dollar during most of the year.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the deficit in December was $2.04 billion, up slightly from $1.95 billion in November. The deficit for all of 1978 topped the previous high of $26.5 billion in 1977. And the buy-and-sell ledger finished on the minus side despite a reduction in U.S. imports of foreign oil.

POPE JOHN PAUL II APPEALED for a war on illiteracy yesterday and asked the wealthy to forsake "some of what is theirs" to promote social justice and help the poor live a little better.

"With all my might, I invite all those who feel Christian to renew themselves in their minds and hearts and — even forsaking some of what is theirs — promote greater justice so that none can lack adequate nourishment, clothing, housing, culture and employment," the pope said.

He spoke to workers in one of the poorer districts of Guadalajara, Mexico's second largest city, 290 miles northwest of Mexico City.

THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT SAID yesterday that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the architect of the Iranian uprising, could return to Iran, and gave Air France permission to fly him from his Parisian exile to an expected triumphant re-entry in his homeland.

The American Embassy, meanwhile, ordered U.S. government dependents out of Iran "at the earliest feasible date," after attacks on three Americans.

Millions are expected to greet 78-year-old Khomeini when he returns, possibly today, to press his campaign to oust the constitutional monarchy headed by Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar and set up an Islamic republic. Khomeini led the uprising that forced Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to leave the country for what many feel is permanent exile.

There was scattered violence in Tehran yesterday but no reports of casualties.

Proposed ordinance may be helpful, but reveals motivation behind LCC

Tired of being harassed by pushy street vendors when you go to concerts at Rupp Arena? A new ordinance now being considered by the Urban County Council could change all that.

Recommended by the council's Planning Committee, which acted on the advice of Lexington Center Corp. Executive Director Tom Minter, the measure would control unauthorized sales of items promoting rock groups, rodeos and other shows.

The ordinance would prohibit vendors from selling such items in an area around the Civic Center (housing Rupp Arena) bounded by Short, Mill Maxwell, Merno and Jefferson streets, unless they were authorized.

The measure was inspired by the clusters of itinerant merchants who show up downtown every time a major act plays at the arena. Specializing in the loud hard-sell, the peddlers usually follow touring rock groups around the country, selling goods that often violate copyright laws, and shout out sales pitches from street corners.

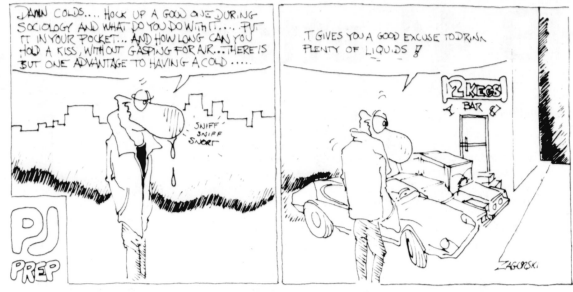

The motivation behind the proposal, however, is not to make audiences more comfortable while they approach the arena. What the LCC is interested in is the estimated $25,000 that street vendors take in each year. By eliminating the competition, much of that money would be spent at officially sanctioned concessions, from which the LCC gets a cut. Also, rock groups can be greedy about keeping the souvenir take for themselves.

There's been a strong conflict between the peddlers and the authorities, for both legal and cultural reasons: the peddlers rarely have the required business licenses, usually are young, and have what used to be called "alternative" lifestyles (albeit the profit motive). Lexington police, though, have usually been restrained in dealing with them, and few have been arrested.

It's doubtful that anyone will speak out in the street peddlers' behalf — few concert-goers will miss the insistent sales pitches than have to be repeatedly fended off.

But the LCC is wrong in asserting that it's importance extends to the disruption and zoning of free enterprise, and its behavior seems rather greedy in light of the small profits involved. Though they can be annoying, street peddlers at concerts deserve the chance to sell their wares. The Urban County Council should direct that the existing license ordinance and copyright infringement laws be enforced, and reject this new proposal.

Enough already

It is about time that someone discovered that we have all heard enough about the controversy over the Wildcat Lodge. There are so many sides to the issue that any action would be unfair to someone in someone's opinion.

A Kernel editorial of Friday, Jan. 19 expressed the need for the Student Government to take a stand on the issue. On Wednesday, Jan. 24, the Kernel reported SG had voted "to support the athletic staff." Finally, on Friday, Jan. 26, there was another editorial, this time condemning SG's stand. Who is this masked man who requests a decision and then complains because it was not the decision he had hoped for?

For one thing, it is unfair to look back and say that two players recently left the team because they were living "in a goldfish bowl" — especially since neither of them indicated this is their statements. And this is beside the fact that any player coming to Kentucky surely must realize the situation before he signs his name. One minute the editorial claims we are treating them unfairly and the next that they are getting treatment which is too special. What is it?

If Joe Hall cared enough about his players to work and raise the money for the lodge himself, how can we criticize him and take it away? It does not belong to us, after all. The NCAA has done a good job of slamming Coach Hall without the University's own students slapping his hand.

One thing people seem to forget is that the players are also here to "play student." For many athletes, whatever their sport, a scholarship is their only hope for going to college. Should we say they don't deserve what their coach provides for them as aid and a reward for coping with the pressures of school and the demands of fans? The athlete student does have more time restrictions than the average student, and I feel that overall they do a good job in keeping up with both tasks. And after all, the students make up a large percentage of the fans who put them into that goldfish bowl. Now let us finally get off Joe's back and let him take care of his players!

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Wildcat Lodge was built with private funds but was then given to the University, making it University — and therefore state — property which is maintained by taxpayers' money. Also, the scholarship monies received by the players come from the University, not from Coach Hall.)

A suggestion

Upon reading today's (Monday's) copy of the Kernel I was mildly upset to discover not one letter to the editor present. Instead there was an opinion and another outstanding episode of Gregg Fields' "Franklin and Me." Why, I asked myself, at a University this size aren't there any letters? Because there is a lack of controversy. You may laugh, but really we need controversy to keep this school going. We'd certainly get more national exposure, which never hurts recruiting or looks bad on your permanent record (take note Joe B.).

What do we do about our seeming drought of controversial topics? Simple, make up a few.

Why not, most big city papers do it. The University community demands colorful headlines. Such potentially volatile issues as the Iranian students' problems and the quick departure of Chuck Aleksinas haven't really stirred up any trouble lately, therefore I humbly offer a few suggestions.

Run the following headline: "Basketball player likes eight-year old girls" with a picture of one of the Wildcats surrounded by a bunch of young female basketball fans. Even though it would be totally untrue, it might cause a bit of a stir on campus.

If you don't want to attack the basketball team (even though some of them deserve it, they're nice to be left alone), pick on the UK Rugby Club. How about "Cannibalism on the Rugby Squad"? It wouldn't be hard, just look at their bumper stickers, "Rugby players eat their dead."

Why not try it, the National Enquirer does. With such controversy as this, surely the national media would pick up on it as they did with the Sonny Collins stories of the late 1975. Really, we need some stories to get the Kernel's letter department and the University's name back in the national headlines.

Think it over

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter is in regards to the opinion piece written by Steve Goldstein that appeared in Monday's Kernel.)

First of all, I think you have been a little bit presumptuous when you think that you can talk for the "majority" of the Americans. Luckily there are a lot of Americans who are not as confused and simplistic in judging the situation in Iran and the problems with the Iranian students here. Let me explain to you what I mean.

Your first confusion is to think that you can identify yourself with the Americans in Iran. You are not, let me tell you, the oil companies in that country. You do not pay Iranian labor starving wages. You do not even train Iranian secret police so that they can torture Iranian political dissenters. Or do you? You see, there is a difference between spreading democracy and defending it at the expense of other countries' democracy.

If it is still difficult for you to dissociate yourself from what the government does in your name, just make a "big" leap in imagination and imagine that Iranian troops are now in the United States because they tell you that they want to defend "their" interests. Would you like it?

Legality and morality do not always coincide, in fact they are sometimes at odd. Your free elected government has not always been the champion of democracy. Consider the history of the American labor movement as a case in point. It was because workers dared to defy "law and order" represented by the National Guard and the police (and supporting the American interest, i.e., big business) that American workers could get health insurance, retirement benefits, the elimination of child labor.

You also say that the Iranian students were involved in the arson and vandalism in Beverly Hills. It might be true, but here again go and see Harlan County, U.S.A. and learn that it was not always the miners who shot and provoked but people paid by the mining companies. The killing did not promote the miner's cause, believe me.

What I am saying is do not think only in terms of black and white in your judgments, put yourself in other people's shoes, because, who knows, someday you might be in the same situation.

I would also like to suggest that you do not become entrenched in your ideas and go and see the series of movies on campus about U.S. intervention in the Third World and think over.

Alba Orsi
Counseling/Psychology graduate student

U.S. responsible

Steve Goldstein, in his Jan. 29 opinion piece "Iranians go home," claims to be offended by the alleged anti-American nature of the Iranian students' recent protests. These students, he implies, should confine themselves to only denouncing the shah, for any criticism of the U.S. government is definitely unwarranted.

What Goldstein fails to realize is that the American government is directly responsible for the atrocities of the Iranian regime. It is the U.S. government which brought the shah to power, trained his brutal secret police (the notorious SAVAK), and kept him supplied with the tools of repression.

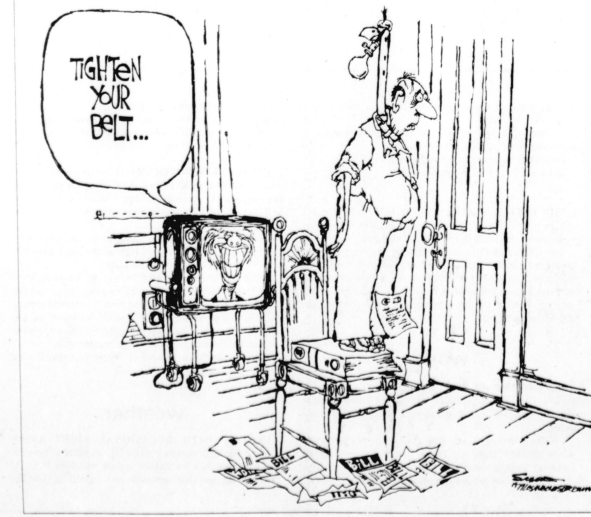

Iran, however, should not be viewed in isolation. Support for right-wing dictatorships and intervention against nations which attempt to break away from U.S. domination have been, and remain, the major tenants of American foreign policy. Sometimes this intervention is overt — as in Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Iran — and sometimes it is hidden — as in Chile, where the CIA conspired to overthrow a democratically elected president. Whatever its form, the effect has been the same: repression and exploitation.

In an effort to expose the true nature of American foreign policy (a foreign policy which, contrary to Goldstein's belief, is not made by the American people), the Committee to Defend the Eleven is sponsoring a film series on U.S. intervention in the Third World. The premiere film is Hearts and Minds, an award-winning documentary dealing with American involvement in Vietnam. It will be shown today at noon in the Student Center Theatre and at 7:30 p.m. in 106 Classroom Building. Admission is $1.50 and will only cover the cost of the film rental fee. Everyone is welcome.

Kats have three players like Gettelfinger

Three UK Lady Kats' basketball players — Bonnie Sizemore, Arlene Baluyut and Denise Fetter — have one thing in common.

They are the walk-ons just like their counterpart Chris Gettelfinger of the men's team. Unlike their teammates, they are not on athletic scholarships.

jamie vaught

These three players made the squad when the Lady Kats conducted a tryout camp at Memorial Coliseum back in the first week of September.

"We had a tryout because there were nine girls on the team with scholarships and that left room for three more (players)," said Kentucky Coach Debbie Yow.

Only Sizemore, a Louisville Courier-Journal first team All-Stater for state champion Laurel County High School last year, has seen considerable playing time among the walk-ons.

Going into last night's road game with Northern Kentucky, Sizemore has played 132 minutes in 15 games and is averaging 3.3 points per game, while Fetter and Baluyut logged 22 and 17 minutes, respectively, in four games apiece.

What makes these walk-ons stay and practice everyday, even though they don't get to play very often?

"They understood the situation before they were selected," Yow explained. "But they're very competitive. They help us in practice. They just want to be a part of the team."

Sizemore, an excellent ball-handler with great passing ability, came to UK because of what she described as "a challenge." She received several scholarship offers from the state schools, including Eastern Kentucky.

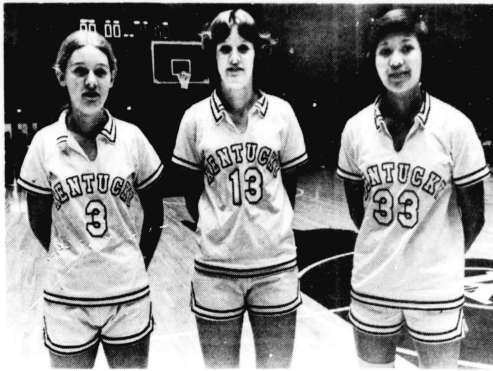

Sizemore, who had a team-high 11 points in UK's 51-49 loss to Louisville earlier this month, said she isn't unhappy as a reserve player. But she doesn't plan to stay there forever.

"I'm satisfied with my role," said the 5-6 freshman guard. "But starting is my goal. I'd like something that I can work for."

A four-year letter winner at Laurel Co., Sizemore said her transition from prep to college basketball was made easier because she had a good high school coach.

"I had good coaching in high school," she said. "Laurel Co.'s Roy Bowling is a good coach. I think good high school coaching really helps you to adjust (the college game)."

Like Wildcat star Kyle Macy, Baluyut is from Peru

By TOM MORAN, Kernel Staff

The Lady Kats have three non-scholarship players on their basketball roster. They are, from left, Bonnie Sizemore of London, Ky.,

(Ind.) High School, the 5-7 freshman guard was prep captain of volleyball, tennis and basketball teams, gaining MVP honors in the last two sports.

Baluyut said Macy recently gave her some tips on basketball, adding that people in her hometown of Peru admire Macy.

"He helped me on shooting and a lot of other little things," she said. "They (Peru) are proud of him. They talk about him. I don't think they are mad at him for leaving (Purdue in 1976)."

Ironically, Baluyut didn't come to UK to play basketball. "I came here to play tennis," she said. "I worked at Four Star Tennis Academy at the University of Virginia as an instructor and played seven hours every day for 10 weeks last summer. But I was tired of playing tennis, so I tried out and made the basketball team.

"I enjoy playing with the team and I'm learning every day."

Born in Quezon City, Philippines, Baluyut didn't arrive in this country until when she was about eight years old.

She said, "My father is an urologist. He lived in Philippines and then moved to Chicago, where he met my mother. They moved back to Philippines and we lived there for eight years before coming to Peru. The life is good here."

Fetter, the only sophomore walk-on, didn't shoot basketball last year. Instead, she concentrated on her studies, majoring in psychology.

"I wanted my grades to be good before I started to play," she explained. "I have played basketball a lot since I was in the seventh grade. I played with the guys."

Fetter, a 5-8 forward, was an All-Region performer at Louisville Central High, averaging 18 points and eight rebounds her senior year. She was the team's MVP both junior and senior seasons.

Fetter, whose thrilling moment was in St. Louis when the men's team won the NCAA basketball title last March, went to Eastern High, also in Louisville, during her freshman and sophomore years.

Despite the lack of her playing time, Fetter said she takes pride of being a part of the team. "I just want to see them (the Lady Kats) win. It's a matter of pride to see that we win. I get to travel a lot and I like to watch them play even though I don't get to play."

"With this policy, we believe we can achieve peaceful reunification. Like you, we want to resolve the issue by peaceful means. We Chinese have patience. However, China cannot commit herself not to resort to other means because if we did it would not be beneficial to peaceful reunification."

Other accounts came from Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Jackson said: "He (Teng) didn't say he would rule it (use of force) out because then he would lose all his bargaining power. I don't think you could expect a different answer and I don't think there's any danger of the use of force. Over and over again he referred to Chinese patience."

Helms said he thought Teng ducked the question of whether Peking would renounce the use of force against Taiwan. "What he was saying is, of course, somewhere along the line we are going to use force," Helms said.

During the luncheon in the cavernous, ornately furnished Senate Caucus Room, attended by nearly all 100 members of the Senate, Teng was quoted by another participant as saying that Taiwan "will be returned by peaceful means. We have patience."

Teng clearly sought to allay the fears of many members of Congress about the future security of Taiwan, the island stronghold of the Nationalist Chinese.

Teng attended the luncheon after he and President Carter ended two days of formal talks with a hearty "handshake between the two peoples" and Teng's promise of many new ways for the United States and China to develop their budding friendship.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the two leaders yesterday discussed not only the big issues of Taiwan and nuclear testing but such "nuts and bolts" subjects as claims and assets, trade, aviation, maritime relations and exchanges of students and journalists.

The progress that was made almost across the board yesterday was definitely beyond what we had expected, Powell said.

Apparently agreed on a wide range of scientific and cultural exchanges but still believed divided over a common approach to the Soviet Union, Carter and Teng shook hands vigorously on the chilly White House South Lawn.

Reporters were excluded from the Teng luncheon, but were able to hear the opening toasts from a loudspeaker mounted in the hall outside when the sound system was inadvertently left on. Teng, in reply to one question, said:

"...I'm sure you have already noted that we no longer use the word 'liberation' of Taiwan. "We now say that so long as Taiwan is returned to the motherland and that there is only one China, then we will fully respect the present realities on Taiwan."

At this point the sound system was cut off.

The vice premier will meet Carter briefly this afternoon to sign a comprehensive exchange agreement. Unnamed sources said at least three agreements will be signed, dealing with science and technology, cultural exchanges and establishment of consulates in the two countries.

Judge may drop charges against actress Linda Blair

NORWALK, Conn. (AP)—A judge said Tuesday he will dismiss a drug charge against actress Linda Blair if her lawyers document the claim that a marijuana charge in Canada has been dismissed.

Lawyer Martin Garbis of New York City told Superior Court Judge Scott Melville that the marijuana charge was dismissed Thursday in Calgary

City Court in the Canadian province of Alberta.

Blair, best known for her portrayal of a possessed girl in The Exorcist, was arrested on the charge at Calgary International Airport on Aug. 15.

In Connecticut, the movie actress had been placed in an accelerated rehabilitation program which provided that charges of possession of amphetamines would be dropped if she stayed out of trouble with the law for a specific period of time.

Connecticut police said they found amphetamines in Blair's purse when she was arrested at her Wilton home on a Florida fugitive warrant Dec. 20, 1977.

Eastern Kentucky artist to exhibit paintings here

An exhibition of paintings entitled Dictionary Series by Darryl Halbrooks will open Feb. 4, 7-9 p.m. in the Student Center's Raddall Gallery. The exhibit will continue through Feb. 23.

Halbrooks has been an associate professor of art at Eastern Kentucky University since earning his Masters of Fine Arts from Southern Illinois University in 1972. He has had numerous one-man shows in this area, and he currently has a show in Chicago.

Works by Halbrooks have been selected to tour Indiana in 1973, '74 and '75 and throughout the United States in 1974. He is also listed in Who's Who in American Art. Halbrooks' paintings reflect his longtime love for the surface of paint itself. Thick daubs and brushstrokes of paint are transferred to the canvas in what he refers to as "pictures of abstract paintings."
