Air of Mystery Clothes Nature Of Guignol Play

From all the rumors and whisperings that have been going around, there is evidently something brewing in "them hills" surrounding this University and it all seems vaguely traceable to The Guignol theater.

Phi Beta Kappa primarily stands for scholarship. It seeks to promote the feeling of fellowship and friendship among those who possess scholastic achievements. It strives for the realization of ideals, appreciation of the good, the true, and the beautiful.

During the last two years a fund of three hundred thousand dollars has been raised for the United chapters of Phi Beta Kappa for the purpose of encouraging scholarship.

"The sun never sets on Chesterfield's popularity!"

"Globe trotters", we can imagine Dr. Freud as saying, "are people whose nurses dropped them onto an escalator in early childhood. They buy a sun helmet, a guide book, and a first-class passage to the Pyramids, and are never heard from again."

Nevertheless, the most confirmed voyageur owns to a thrill at finding a carton of Chesterfields in a tiny cafe on the Left Bank, or a package of the same on a card table at the Army Club at Simla, or on meeting an Arab camel-boy whose only English is "Sooch popular mos' be desart!"

For Chesterfield's popularity never saw a sunset; travel as far as you will, this cigarette will always be somewhere ahead, ready to bring good taste and good tobacco home to you.

Such popularity must be deserved—and it IS!

A JOURNALIST WRITES OF HIS PROFESSION

A most interesting, if somewhat disconcerting article in the American Mercury of this month, is "The Trade of the Journalist," by Richard Owen Boyer. The writer is himself a newspaper man and has served as a reporter on such esteemed papers as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. At present he is on the staff of the Dallas Times-Herald.

We say the article is disconcerting because it might conceivably destroy many of those fine illusions the students of journalism in our colleges must undoubtedly have, else why should they enter the trade of journalism? For one thing Mr. Boyer believes that the young sentimentalist plunges into the profession with the idea that he will remain only as long as it takes to blossom into a critic, an essayist or a novelist. Mr. Boyer is cynical enough to observe that for most this will be an eternity. He writes:

"The budding novelist finds out that he cannot write, or if he can, that he won't, for newspapermen are primarily lazy and grow more lazy as the days and years slip by: their laziness, indeed, is one reason why they are newspaper men."

Mr. Boyer also charges that the trade of journalism tends, and does, in most cases, make its devotees callous, that is outwardly, or as David Alexander writes in his story, "The Face of Christ." "Journalists for the most part are pretty posers." Yet, despite the gently ironic tone that Mr. Boyer employs in this article, obviously intended to disillusion those contemplating entering the trade, we find that the only serious charges are those of laziness, the inability to make money, a touch of childishness, all of which simply classes a journalist along with a college professor. For like most men in the profession Mr. Boyer's pathetic bitterness is broken down by that very quality he attempts to belittle, that delicate touch of romanticism found even in the hardest of hard boiled of police reporters.

So in the final analysis Mr. Boyer fails to disillusion a single one of the young sentimentalist contemplating entrance into the trade of journalism. For as long as such pitiable fellows continue to make the pages of the American Mercury, of which there are no less than five in its present issue, we will continue to hope.

COLLEGE COMMENT

"SOLE OWNER OF HIS NAME"

A man's name may be his best asset or his greatest liability. It is what he makes his name stand for that counts. If it stands for courage, integrity, honesty, fairness, his name is priceless advertising, such as couldn't be bought.

Clarence Saunders, a few years ago, was stripped of his fortune, his chain stores, his palatial pink palace—everything but his name. And in a court fight, he won the right to use his name. With a little financial backing, he started a store, and with a stroke of genius painted on its front, "Clarence Saunders—Sole Owner of My Name." It became known as the "sole owner" store. Other stores quickly followed, and the Clarence Saunders chain has grown so rapidly that the "sole owner of his name" can now write his check in seven figures.

It is announced that a new corporation, backed by 20 eastern capitalists with combined resources of over $200,000,000 has been formed by Mr. Saunders. "Sole owner" stores will dot the country from coast to coast. Saunders had the courage to carry on. When he lost the palace he was building for his home, he had nothing left, but he told his friends that some day "the pink palace" would be nothing compared to the home he would build.

He stood by and saw his possessions go down in his financial collapse, but he fought bitterly and successfully for his most priceless asset, his good name.—Chattanooga News.

LITERARY SECTION

(MELVINA H. PUMPHREY, Editor)

TO ANY POET

At Jersey Street and Winslow, roofs are speech; At Cedar and Lawrence . . . at Cedar and Plunkett, roofs speak

In virgin symbols—daring, doubtful, meek— Such thoughts as hardy pioneers may reach. There is no word of yours succinct as they.

With ridgepole sagging at the center, fraught With hoarded wisdom and with laden thought— No song so grand to sing, no prayer to pray.

In four-point type, your poetry appears Suspended, like a bridge, across a page— Too frail to bear the musings of a sage, Too narrow for the trafficking of seers.

But roofs are pie print against the sky, Declaring to men and heaven's denizens Each nation's destiny with stark amens: Read what the legend there may prophesy!

Its rotting ridgepole is the age-long hope Of finding rest within a stationed place— Vain aspiration of our ancient race . . . Forsaking hearthstone on a frosty slope, Our fathers built a crude, primordial roof.

By winds or flames or floods, its joists are felled, And peace, by some horizon's lure, expelled— By hunger, greed, new gods, or martial hoof.

Your words are last year's withered corn stalk's pith, And palsied muscles on a stallion's chest; They're faded roses on a maiden's breast,

And charms a grey haired sire may conjure with; They're lewdly women's ineffectual smiles; They're temples where no solitary devout Remains, and only winds pass in or out— They're moth drilled carpets on their deserted aisles.

Make not of furious words your transient speech; The symbols of my country's warp and woof I read distinct in every gabled roof, And know the destiny that prophets preach.

—BERTRAND P. RAMSEY.

Music, Stage and Screen

By Thomas L. Riley

It is indeed fortunate that we are able to open this column for the new year with a review of one of the finest pictures that has ever come before our admiring gaze. That picture opened at the Strand theater Wednesday and will run through tomorrow, "The Man Who Laughs" is, in our estimation, the best picture released in 1928 and we might add that many others engaged in this pleasant recreation of writing about the theater have said very much the same thing.

A milestone was reached in the theatrical road of Lexington when one other theater broke under the strain of the tidal wave of sound and installed Movietone and Phonofilm for the ears of its patrons. There is no comment to make. Sound is here to stay for some time and we cannot do anything to prevent it in spite of the fact that while the industry is settling down in the maelstrom of noise very few excellent pictures will result. But we must sit and wait patiently until the new day is at its zenith and then they will probably think of something else to destroy all the effect of the last decade. So we will all have to listen to discordant noises whether we like it or not.

"The Man Who Laughs," at Strand. We are glad that this picture is being shown for the last half of the week rather than the first, because we can review instead of preview it. But now that we have seen it we feel even more incompetent to write about it.

"The Man Who Laughs" is great. There can be no denial of that. It is almost too good for the public and it is probably one reason that it was booked for the last half. The picture opened at the Strand Wednesday and we have not ceased our praise of it yet. A tremendous theme coupled with superb acting, masterful direction and marvelous photography go to make this Universal picture one that every man, woman and child should see. As was the case with many productions, "The Man Who Laughs" was originally made as a silent picture, but after its initial run on Broadway a synchronized score was added. Happily, this score augments rather than detracts from the power of the picture because the sound was added with a conservative hand. Enro Rappe is responsible for that. "The Man Who Laughs" is the third Victor Hugo work to be made into a pretentious motion picture and it is even greater than its predecessors "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Les Miserables." Conrad Veidt, in the title role, displays a facial makeup that dims anything else in that line even Lon Chaney's Quasimodo. Mary Philbin, as Dea, the blind duchess, portrays the role to perfection while Brandon Hurst and many others of the supporting cast are equally effective. The picture was directed by Paul Leni, a German, and photographed by Gilbert Warrenton. Both men have exhibited rare genius. "The Man Who Laughs" is, in every sense of the word, a super feature. For your own sake, see it before it is too late.

"Marriage by Contract" at Strand Sunday

One of the most vital questions today is the advisability of the thing called companionate marriage. Here we have a picture, "Marriage by Contract," which attacks the system defined by Tiffany-Stahl, its producers, as "a menace to civilization." Whether it is or not you will have to determine. Patsy Ruth Miller and Lawrence Gray head the cast. It is one of those problem pictures that tries to make up the minds of the moviegoers and was directed by James Flood.

See South Seas at Ben Ali Sunday. "White Shadows in the South Seas" a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture starring Monte Blue and Raquel Torres, opens at Ben Ali Sunday. The picture was made on actual location in the South Seas and is largely made up of a cast from that locality. Monte Blue and Robert Anderson are practically the only white people in the cast. A native, Raquel Torres, gives, according to advanced reports, a most startling performance. The photog-

Wildcats Plunge Into Schedule of Hard Games With Conference Teams

NEXT HOME GAME TO BE PLAYED JANUARY 19

One more non-conference battle lies ahead of the Wildcat net squad before they invade the South in an attempt to regain lost prestige. The Irish of Notre Dame will furnish opposition in this struggle with odds favoring the South Bend crew. However, Kentucky is due to snap out of the slump which held them helpless before North Carolina in which case the cash customers should be well repaid by the evening's entertainment.

Georgia Tech will play host to the 'Cats the following week end at Atlanta, followed by an encounter with Tennessee at Knoxville. Coach Mauer is extremely anxious to take these two games as it would restore Ken-lucky to a place among the leaders and make amends for the drubbing handed out by the Yellow Jackets last year. Tennessee and Alabama will travel to Lexington for two consecutive home games and both contests should draw capacity crowds.

Alabama is undefeated to date and Tennessee met its first defeat last week at the hands of the rejuvenated North Carolina Tarheels. These two games on the home floor should give the squad sufficient rest before they travel south once more, this time to meet Tulane at New Orleans and to take on Mississippi A. and M. for two games at Jacksonville. Returning home again the 'Cats have games with Centre College, Washington and Lee, and two contests with Ole Miss, 1928 champions of the Southern Conference, which will bring the regular schedule to a close.

Southern Conference rules require that half of these games be won in order to secure an invitation to the tournament. If the score book shows

Frosh Team Opens Season With Wesleyan

With three weeks of scattered practice as a foundation, Kentucky's Big Green frosh team will open its 1929 S. I. A. A. season with the Kentucky Wesleyan freshmen on the University floor tomorrow night.

A southwesterly wind hints that the Wesleyan freshmen, with three victories tucked safely away as a beginner, may bid strong for the S. I. A. A. title.

The following men probably will take part in the opening game: Forwards—Bell, Kendall, Walker, Roberts, German, and Meyer. Centers—Yates and Phillips. Guards—Little, Kleiser, Townsend, Kistner, and Crowe.

Such a record the 'Cats will head for Atlanta in an effort to bring a second conference basketball crown back to Lexington.

Intramural Tournament Begins Soon

(By Laurence Shropshire)

The dull thud of padded mittens and the labored breathing of two hokies seemingly locked in a death struggle, will soon be a treat offered to the worshippers of the great god, Sport. Those two brutal forms of competitive exercise boxing and wrestling, are the next form of entertainment to be staged by the intra-mural department of the University and are scheduled to start within the next 10 days.

This is the second annual tournament to be held at Kentucky and will be consummated on Saturday, February 9, when the final matches and bouts are held in the Men's gymnasium. According to letters sent out by L. W. Roush, student manager of intra-mural athletics, the entry lists will be closed on January 19, one week from tomorrow, and the preliminary contests will get under way immediately.

Anyone who has not procured an entry blank may do so by calling at the office of that department in the basement of the gymnasium.

The preliminary matches in both sports will be held in the room formerly occupied by the book store and postoffice while the finals will be decided on the playing floor of the basement building. Every student in the University is eligible to test his strength and ability in this line. The contestants in each sport will be divided into eight classes according to weight. Bantams, flyweights, and featherweights will be forced to mix it in one group, 135 pounds and under. The next class will include from 135 to 145 pounders, and each succeeding class will represent an additional 10 pounds of avoirdupois. The top weight will include heavyweights ranging from 195 pounds up to as big as they come, which is saying a lot in this man's school. However, there is one more stipulation. The winners in last year's tourney will move up into the next class regardless of their present weight.

As an added incentive to the contestants, the intra-mural department will award individual silver cups to the winner and runner-up in each class, larger cups emblematic of championship wrestling and boxing teams to fraternities, and also points toward the large intra-mural participation trophy.

Boxing and Wrestling Furnish Diversion for Football Candidates

Their royal highnesses, Coaches Harry Gamage and Bernie Shively, kings of Kentucky's gridiron and rulers of its football cohorts, have published an edict. They have discovered a remedy for a weak football team and now broadcast it for all to hear.

Believing that the best cure for a tired football player is more work, they instituted classes in wrestling and boxing for his relief. Last winter the same means were used to keep the candidates for the team in condition and the results were so satisfactory that the same medicine is being administered this winter. The patients will receive their treatments in the room formerly occupied by the bookstore and postoffice where all who so desire may visit them.

Coach Shively is in charge of the case and has made it very plain in the bulletin that every individual affected in the least degree with a gridiron complex must report for this treatment if he expects to make the varsity squad next fall. Shively received his training at Illinois where besides making a berth at tackle on the All-American team he was Big Ten wrestling champion in the heavyweight division. And we might also mention that he is no mean boxer. Illinois is the home of several other recent All-Americans who were developed by these two sports.

In last winter's workouts, the emphasis was laid on wrestling and as a result Kentucky's big, blue line was a terror among southern elevenes last season. This year, boxing will have an equal share of the coach's attention, which means that Coach Gam-age's chief worry for next year is about his backfield candidates.

For those who doubt the value of such training we would like to call to their attention the case of that young gentleman known as Pete Drury. Now Drury had been a good football player for a long time, nevertheless, there was room for improvement. So Shively took him in hand and under his tutelage Drury won both the wrestling and boxing championships in the heavyweight division last winter. When fall came Drury was ready and at the end of the season was easily selected as All-Kentucky tackle and received honorable mention in many All-Southern choices.

The primary value of these classes lies in the fact that they help to develop and strengthen the shoulders, neck, arms and legs of the players as well as improving the coordination between mind and muscle. However, they also serve to keep the candidates limbered up for the spring football practice which will immediately follow them.

DeMolays Scalped By Indians, 42-19

Five University students emulated some of the unsuccessful Kentucky pioneers Monday night when the World Famous Indian team, of LaRue, Ohio, toyed with the Lexington Chapter, Order of DeMolay, team and emerged victorious by a 42 to 19 score.

Baseman, Indian center, six feet and seven inches tall, nearly always got the jump on Goller, a six-footer. War Eagle, guard, had four personal fouls called on him and High Sky was penalized five times, but neither left the game because the personal foul rule was suspended.

Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

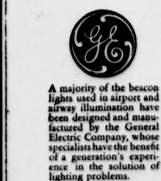

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

Memorial Is Held For M. A. Cassidy

A memorial service was held Friday January 4 at the Henry Clay High school as a tribute to M. A. Cassidy, superintendent of the Lexington public schools, who died December 21. Mr. Cassidy had served for more than 40 years as county and city superintendent, and hundreds of students and friends gathered to pay tribute to his memory.

Dr. A. W. Fortune, pastor of the Central Christian church, delivered a short address, stressing the value Mr. Cassidy placed upon friendship and character. "He had a host of friends because he had proved himself to be a friend. He believed the supreme function of education was the development of character," Dr. Fortune said.

Resolutions upon the death of Mr. Cassidy were passed by the city board of education, the teachers and the principals.

Alma Mater Club Feted With Dinner

Mrs. Giles, matron of Boyd hall, entertained Wednesday night with a dinner in the hall in honor of the Alma Mater Club. This club is composed of students whose parents attended the University in past years. Among the guests were Mrs. Frank L. Webb, Professor "Corporate" Roberts, Professor Johnson, and Mr. Crutcher, all of whom gave interesting incidents of their life on the campus and traditions of the University.

LAST BOA CONSTRICTOR DIES ON CHRISTMAS DAY

The remaining boa constrictor of the two which were presented to the zoology department in the fall died on Christmas day. Its body was given to James Marr, a student of the department, who is one of the very few interested in taxidermy. He is now preparing the skin and skeleton for preservation, and will mount the specimen at a later date. The reptile measured about seven feet four inches in length. It was sent to the University by a friend, and originally came from its native habitat in Colombia, South America.

PROF. W. W. JENNINGS ADDRESSES BIBLE CLASS

Prof. W. W. Jennings, who spoke before the Young Men's Bible class of the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, took as his topic, "Faith as an Aid to Living," and brought out in his address three fundamentals, faith in God, in our fellow men, and in one's self. Professor Jennings said that normal living is largely faith in the unseen, and that worry is sin because it is lack of faith. In concluding his address, he emphasized the necessity of faith in one's self and the handicaps that come from suspicion.
