Dave Schlessler, Vice President of the University of Kentucky Association of Nontraditional Students, said there should be more activities on campus for non-traditional students.

UKANS a refuge for older students

By CAROLINE SHIVELY
Staff Writer

When Dave Schlessler retired from the U.S. Army, he found himself in the same position as his young son James.

"I retired the same time my son graduated from high school," he said. "We were both saying, 'What am I going to do with my life?'"

Schlessler saw going back to school as an option.

"The fact that he was 25 years older than most freshmen and had a family did not slow him down.

"I don't worry about the fact that I don't fit the traditional student mold," he said. "I'm doing more at 48 at college than I did at 18 and I'm having a better time than I did at 28."

Schlessler's only complaint of being back on a college campus is there's not enough to do for people his age.

So, he and fellow nontraditional student Ginni Childers to form the group UK Association of Nontraditional Students.

The group was formed in spring 1990 and became an official student organization last August.

UKANS president Childers said the first year was not an easy one.

"We struggled along throughout the year, never having been a part of starting up an organization," she said.

UKANS sponsored several activities last year including a Homecoming tailgating party, a "night at the movies" and other activities which they hope to continue this year.

Childers said that older students who want to get involved at UK often can't because of the lack of activities for non-traditional students.

"As adult students and as a viable, recognizable part of the University we're overlooked," she said.

Adults make up about 34 percent of UK students and the percentage rising, she said.

The University is partly to blame for the lack of activities, Childers said. "Maybe they're looking for solutions," she said. "UKANS can be the catalyst for change. We definitely have the potential to do that."

"If anyone is likely to fall through the cracks of this campus, it's the non-traditional student, especially those that go on weekends and evenings who never become part of the University."

Childers cites these facts as part of the reason UKANS was formed.

"The key word to describe most older students is disenfranchised," she said. "UKANS is hoping to affect some changes in that."

Nontraditional students have nontraditional problems, said John Banton, a civil engineering sophomore and nontraditional student.

"When you're balancing a job and school something is going to have to give," said Banton, 36. "You either have to cut back at work, meaning less money, or take longer to graduate."

Banton said commuting and child care is hard to balance as a full-time student.

"One of our biggest problems is we have a hard time finding meeting times. People are at home feeding the kids, at work and doing other things," said Schlessler, vice president of the group.

The purpose of UKANS is three-fold, said Childers, 39. "We

Phoenix gunman kills 2, injures 5 in shooting spree

By CHARLENE SMITH

PHOENIX — A man sprayed a residential street with high-powered weapons fire yesterday, killing two people, including a police officer, and wounding five others.

The gunman then held police at bay from a house for more than five hours before officers stormed the home and found him dead.

"It appears he took his own life," police spokesman Kevin Robinson said.

Reporters — who were kept several blocks from the home — heard two loud bangs as police entered the house.

Robinson wouldn't say if police fired any shots when they took the home, nor how long the man may have been dead.

Robinson reported earlier that the gunman may have had a hostage. But he said nobody else was found in the home.

A witness said a girl or young woman was gunned down as she rode past the home on her bicycle. Robinson said two police officers were shot as they reached the scene, one before he was able to get out of the patrol car.

Neighbor Kip Hoskins, 27, said he heard a volley of shots and ran out into the street.

"I saw a truck pulling down the road. I guess someone got shot in the truck," Hoskins said. "A policeman pulling up getting out of his car, he got shot."

"Then a girl on a bicycle riding down 20th Street got shot and I guess she was killed."

Police had held telephone negotiations with the gunman, but Robinson wouldn't divulge details. He also wouldn't say what precipitated the rampage.

He said the man was armed with two high-powered weapons, and said it was possible there was more than one gunman.

At one point, Robinson asked television stations to stop broadcasting reports of the story, saying it upset the gunman.

Police sealed off the middle-class neighborhood in east-central Phoenix after the first shots were fired just before noon. They called in a Wells Fargo armored car, which was parked between the home and an injured officer so the officer could be rescued.

Workers on a landscaping job across the tree-lined street of one-story homes said a man walked out of the house and began firing. The workers took refuge in the house where they were working and de-

UK chosen as one of country's 'best buys'

Staff reports

UK is among a select group of colleges and universities featured in a new guide to the country's top values in higher education.

UK's inclusion in "The 1992 Guide to 101 of the Best Values in American Colleges and Universities" makes the fifth publication that has recently ranked UK as an excellent college choice.

"We're pleased to be included in there. It shows people around the country that UK is on the move," Joe Fink, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Calling UK "among the finest state universities in the South," the book goes on to say that UK's drive for excellence and higher standards ... is beginning to pay off.

The book also praises UK's University Studies program and the campus' "unusually congenial" atmosphere.

The new book selected the 101 colleges and universities on the basis of surveys of high school guidance counselors, rankings in other publications, and analysis of key indicators such as graduation rates and cost vs. quality.

The guide "reflects the quality in education and the value of the cost," said Joseph Fink, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs. "Students rely on guides like this."

Fink said that college guidebooks have a valuable role to play, particularly when high school students must begin narrowing their choices from the more than 3,000 institutions available nationwide.

"For a number of students this will be their initial introduction to

UK professor Voss dies of heart attack

Staff reports

Funeral services will be held today for UK sociology professor Harwin L. Voss, who died of a heart attack Monday at Humana Hospital Lexington.

Voss, 59, has been a professor at UK since 1965 and was chairman of a National Institute on Drug Abuse committee at the time of his death.

An Indianapolis native, Voss specialized in teaching about juvenile delinquency and criminology, focusing on drug abuse and AIDS.

The committee he chaired works to fund research concerning AIDS as it pertains to intravenous drug abuse.

Voss had taught at the University of Hawaii, Portland State University and at Hacettepe University in Ankara, Turkey.

He earned a bachelor's degree from North Central College in Naperville, Ill., and a master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Survivors include his wife, Carol; three sons, Dirk Voss of Louisville, Ky., Jon Voss of Lexington and Greg Voss of Florence, Ky.; a daughter, Lynn D. Voss of Chicago; a brother, Donald Voss of Slippery Rock, Pa.; and five grandchildren.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. at Second Presbyterian Church, 460 E. Main St.

Gorbachev reform faces strong opposition

By ANN IMSE
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail Gorbachev's plan to revamp the Soviet government and transfer most power to the republics ran into stiff opposition yesterday from lawmakers who stand to lose their jobs.

Gorbachev prodded a reluctant Congress of People's Deputies into giving preliminary approval of the resolution. But the margin was far short of the two-thirds majority he would need for final passage of constitutional amendments. A showdown vote could come Thursday.

At times, the mood during yesterday's daylong session was angry and tense.

"You're insulting us!" angry legislators shouted at one point.

"If you behave like that, it won't make our work any easier," a testy Gorbachev shot back.

The plan — aimed at ensuring an orderly transfer of power from a central government greatly weakened in the wake of last month's unsuccessful hard-line coup — was put forward by Gorbachev, Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin and nine other republic leaders.

Gorbachev told delegations from each republic to submit proposals for amending the measure to a legislative commission that was to work through the night in advance of Thursday's session.

The Soviet president, mindful of lawmakers' opposition, also decided not to put the issue of Baltic independence to a vote, and told officials he would grant it by presidential decree instead.

The decree releasing the Kremlin's grip on Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia will come after the conclusion of the congressional session, said Lithuanian official Algimantas Cekuolis and Gorbachev confidant Alexander Yakovlev.

Despite passing an important procedural test, the fate of the restructuring plan was uncertain. "All right, all right," said Gorbachev. "The law is still up in the air."

In other developments yesterday: Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in Washington, urged the Soviet government to reform itself along lines "consistent with democratic values and principles." Baker, who is to visit the Soviet Union next week, also said he thought it would be "advisable" if the Soviet nuclear arsenal ended up under central authority.

The Congress of People's Deputies voted to dismiss ousted Supreme Soviet Chairman Anatoly Lukyanov and Vice President Genady Yanayev from their posts for their role in the failed Aug. 18-21 coup. The vote was a formality affirming decisions made earlier at the Supreme Soviet, the smaller standing legislature that is elected by the Congress. Yanayev has been charged with high treason. Lukyanov has not yet been charged.

The Communist Youth League will meet later this month to consider disbanding itself, the Tass news agency reported. For decades the League, known as Komsomol, had been the Communist Party's mainstay for recruiting and training young people.

At the Congress of People's Deputies, Gorbachev several times appeared on the verge of losing patience with the 1,900 lawmakers who have been meeting in extraordinary session at the Kremlin since Monday.

He twice recessed the session yesterday as the critical work went on behind closed doors. Lawmakers expressed frustration about the process.

"It's very hard for us to vote on this law. We've gotten used to this big country, and now we're supposed to vote so that there'll be a lot of separate countries," Alexander

Nerves no problem for Doug Pelfrey with game on line

By GRAHAM SHELBY
Senior Staff Writer

What do people seem to want to know most about UK's placekicker, Doug Pelfrey?
How did it feel to win the game against Georgia last year?
Do you get nervous beforehand?
How do you kick the ball that far?
Are all those big guys scary?
Doesn't it hurt your foot?
No. On all counts.

"Probably my most asked question," said the Wildcats' number one footman, "is if I'm related to John Pelfrey."

While a quick spelling check reveals that the kicker is no relation to UK's clutch basketball forward, Pelfrey's attitude toward his game probably isn't too far removed from his namesake's.

"I'm more of a pressure player," when the Cats found themselves trailing Georgia by a point, 24-23, with seven seconds left.

Pelfrey squared up and won the game by nailing a three-pointer of his own.

The former defensive back said that, like his basketball counterpart, he also deals with "trash talk" from opposing players who tell him he's going to shank the kick or have it blocked, but he deals with it. "I just block it out," he said. "It doesn't bother me."

Pelfrey said his main worry is just "kicking the ball straight."

The position's relative simplicity may give kickers a few less variables to worry about. But it doesn't lower their expectations or their teammates' expectations.

To do that, Pelfrey said he has to try to adjust to the wind and keep his form as consistent as possible.

In preparation for his second season as the Cats' No. 1 kicker, Pelfrey said he's "trying to get familiar with the field from each spot, ... playing a different wind because we have a lot of wind in Lexington. You look up at the flags (on top of the stadium) and they'll be blowing in the opposite direction of the ones one the goalpost."

Nevertheless, he said that the non-kickers generally "expect you to hit it because all you do is kick."

"That's the hardest part. Watching these guys - how hard they work - and knowing that the game hinges on my kick," Pelfrey said.

During practice, while many of his teammates grunt and careen into one another on one field, Pelfrey and the Cats' 14 other punters and placekickers send pignons flying on he said. "If the game's on the line, I bring my concentration to a new level."

Pelfrey explored that new level on a cool October night last season

UK place kicker Doug Pelfrey hopes to improve on last season's performance despite the smaller uprights.

an adjoining field. He said that separation sometimes makes kickers seem different or apart from the rest of the team.

Pelfrey, who also played quarterback and defensive back in high school, said the days he spent on the field earned him a little more respect. When he misses a kick, "They just pat me on the head or pat me on the butt and tell me to get them next time."

Pelfrey's collegiate kicking debut last season was a 50-yarder against Central Michigan that proved to be the margin of victory. He nailed 63 percent of his field goals last season and split the uprights on 24 out of 25 extra-point attempts.

"I had a steady season," he said. "I didn't really hurt the team but I could've had a better season. I ended up 10 of 16 and feel I should've been 13 of 16."

This year, Pelfrey wants to kick his numbers into the record books.

The former baseball and basketball letterman from Edgewood, Ky., wants to set the single-season field goal record — 19 field goals — collect at least 20 touchbacks on kick-offs, boot four field goals in two or three games and chalk up an 80-plus percent accuracy rate.

But, he added, "It's going to be a lot more difficult kicking this year because of the new rule."

In the off-season, the NCAA narrowed the distance between the goalposts from 23 feet, 4 inches to 18-6.

Coach Bill Curry said that may keep Pelfrey on the sidelines more often than last year.

"There may be times where we won't try a long (field goal) where we may have a year ago" because of the narrower goalposts, Curry said.

If UK is down by a point or two in the final minutes this season, will Curry have any reservations about sending the football Cats' basketball name-a-like on to the field?

"Heck no," he said.

Cats announce 1991-92 schedule

Associated Press

Eight Kentucky basketball games will be on national television during the 1991-92 season, including matchups against West Virginia and Louisville, athletics director C.M. Newton announced yesterday.

At least 28 UK games will be televised either on live or delayed basis, beginning with the preseason National Invitation Tournament against West Virginia on Nov. 20 on ESPN.

Other games slated for national TV are Indiana on Dec. 7 on CBS, Louisiana State on Feb. 2 and Vanderbilt on March 2 on ABC and Georgia Tech on Dec. 21, Louisville on Dec. 28, Georgia on Jan. 7 and Tennessee on Jan. 21 on ESPN.

Kentucky could make several more national TV appearances if it advances in the NIT.

"It should be an exciting year of Kentucky basketball," said Newton. "It will be a demanding schedule, but one that should be great fun for our players and fans."

The Wildcats, who will be eligible to participate in the NCAA Tournament after being banned for the past two years, open with an exhibition game on Nov. 10 against Athletes in Action in Memorial Coliseum.

Kentucky meets the Soviet National Team in another exhibition on Nov. 14 in Rupp Arena in a final tuneup before the NIT.

'Remnants' looks at Hollywood facades

By JULIA L. LAWSON
Staff Writer

Karl Gernot Kuehn brings together an eerie sense of abandonment and old-world beauty in his photograph exhibit entitled "Remnants of Noble Facades: Photographs from Metropolis and Divas" at the University of Kentucky Art Museum.

Kuehn, a native of Frankfurt, Germany, is a west coast photographer and film editor. Through the eye of his camera, Kuehn presents old Los Angeles buildings as they appeared in the early age of Hollywood.

The unpopulated streets along these buildings suggest that time has ceased and that these buildings of once high esteem are nothing more than scrapbook pictures.

But if you look hard enough you can still see the beauty of "Boulevard Theatre" (1985). Although it is surrounded by rubble, its majestic stature hints to greater days.

The image of "Walk of Fame #1" (1985), with its ghost-like, haunting air is of legendary appeal. Although the word "legend" is partially cropped out of the photo image, the point of Hollywood's timelessness is made nonetheless.

The peculiarity of these images is magnified by the fact that there are no pedestrians along these mean streets. This photo essay contains a sort of deadening effect because of the vacant scenes it portrays.

The lone exception is "Venice Beach" (1986), which I had to look at closely before I realized that the sole person in the picture was not, as I had first thought, a parking meter.

Not only does this exhibit include these L.A. buildings but portraits of some of the past's best leading ladies.

In the Divas section of the exhibit, the viewer can find everyone from Lillian Gish to Margaret White of the West herself, Margaret Hamilton.

All of the portraits were taken in the early- to mid-1980s and show that Hollywood is built of human as well as architectural facades.

These women were captured striking a pose—something which was popular long before Madonna was conceived. That same 1940s glamor is still ever-present in these women, only distorted with age by a few wrinkles.

The composition of these photos forces us to remember the "good ol' days" of black and white film. True glamor is seized by—but not given to—these women. And they know how to use it.

Kuehn has an exceptionally unique way of abstracting these images to suit his purposes but they are not irrational.

The sharpness of the photos is enhanced by the grandness of their appearance, making them that much more enchanting.

"Remnants of Noble Facades," an exhibition of silverprint photographs by Karl Gernot Kuehn, opened at the University of Kentucky Art Museum Aug. 25 and will continue through Oct. 6.

It is free and open to the public. For further information call 257-5716.

Off-campus shop mad about hats

By SHANNON WHITLEY
Contributing Writer

Like most entrepreneurs, Terry Grossman is a man who wears many hats. But he also buys them, sells them, and displays them.

Grossman, a native Lexingtonian and UK graduate, started a specialty shop called "The Mad Hatter" about 10 years ago dealing primarily with hat-related merchandise.

Better known to his friends and customers as "Tag," "Hat Man," and "Hatter," Grossman said he got the inspiration for the store — located near campus on South Limestone — while in college.

"I chose hats because I have liked caps and hats since I was about five, and because there was no place in Lexington to buy hats," Grossman said. "Most people would go to Louisville or Cincinnati to buy hats."

Grossman said he realized while in college that he'd capitalize on his business major after he graduated by becoming an entrepreneur and starting the business.

So in 1979, Grossman took over a store in downtown Lexington that had been run by his father and grandfather. At the time, the store mainly sold farm clothes such as bibbed overalls, chinos, and a few hats and caps.

Local department stores began to dominate this area of the clothing market, but Grossman's venture into the hat business became very successful.

Grossman continued to expand the size of the shop and eventually moved from downtown to the campus location at 250 S. Limestone. The shop has been there for the past seven years.

Grossman, who's motto is "Come to the Mad Hatter when your hat matters," estimates that there are somewhere between 14,000 and 15,000 hats in stock.

Walking through the store, the selection seems ever greater.

Any day a customer walks into the store, he or she can expect to find a Stetson hat sitting on a shelf, or a straw hat hanging on a rack.

"A hat is the crowning touch of an outfit, and can have more of an impact than any belt or pair of earrings," said Grossman, who tries to give customers a personal touch by helping them select the right color and style.

Grossman stocks berets, three-cornered Paul Revere hats, cloth fishing hats, jester hats, pill box hats, and even a few baseball caps. He carries hats from a dozen countries such as Russia, India, the United States, and Greece.

"I want it to be you wearing the hat, and not the hat wearing you," he said.

There are leather, silk, straw, fabric, and felt hats, as well as hats trimmed with feathers, beading, flowers, lace, and ribbon.

"The style of hat someone wears says who they are, and reflects part of their personality and individuality. People who wear hats care to be slightly different from everyone else."

Grossman said he has sold hats to celebrities and musicians — Cheryl Ladd, Mickey Rooney, William Shatner, members of the rock group Bad Company — but there is one group he's more interesting in attracting students. And hats are definitely coming back into the fashion scene, Grossman said.

"Velvet is a strong fabric in women's hats this season," he said, "and the ethnic and leather hats are in style."

In fashion-conscious New York, he said, a hat-buyer can find hats that are "Texas Tacky" and "California Crazy."

But, he added, "what I want to carry are hats that are 'Kentucky Classic.'"

Mother sentenced in cheerleading plot

By SUSAN FAHLGREN
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A jury yesterday sentenced a suburban homemaker to 15 years in prison and fined her $10,000 for trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's rival for a spot on their school's cheerleading squad.

Prosecutors had asked for the maximum life prison term for Wanda Holloway, 37, of Channelview, who was convicted Tuesday of solicitation of murder.

Hours before being sentenced, a sobbing Mrs. Holloway begged for mercy.

"I think that this trial has been enough punishment for me," Wanda Holloway said, sobbing on the stand. "I'm totally humiliated. ... I would love a second chance."

The jury deliberated about three hours before issuing the sentence. State District Judge George Godwin then ordered Mrs. Holloway to be taken into custody by Harris County Sheriff's deputies.

Mrs. Holloway hugged family members, including her daughter, Shanna, before she was escorted from the courtroom by deputies.

Godwin said she would serve her sentence in a state prison.

Her attorney said the case will be appealed. Mrs. Holloway was convicted Tuesday of solicitation of capital murder in attempting to hire a hitman to kill Verna Heath. The crime carried a possible sentence of five years to life in prison and fines up to $10,000.

Holloway had no previous felony conviction. That made her eligible for five to 10 years' probation instead of prison.

But Assistant District Attorney Mike Anderson told the jurors the only thing worse than Mrs. Holloway's crime would have been if Mrs. Heath and her daughter, Amber, were killed — the alleged initial plan.

"If they were dead, it would be a capital murder," Anderson said.

The penalty for capital murder is life in prison or death by injection.

Defense lawyer Troy McKinney advised jurors they could recommend counseling and community service as part of probation.

"By giving Wanda Holloway probation, you're not saying that what happened to Verna Heath is right," McKinney said. "She can't make it right from a prison cell. There's no way."

The key witness against Mrs. Holloway was Terry Harper, brother of her ex-husband. Harper has testified his former sister-in-law wanted him to find a killer.

He said Mrs. Holloway believed killing Amber Heath's mother would compel the girl to drop out of running for the high school cheerleading squad.

That in turn would have given Mrs. Holloway's daughter a better shot at the squad. Shanna did not try out after her mother's arrest in January.

Both girls, now 14 and high school freshmen, were in court yesterday.

Mrs. Heath also took the stand and cried as she recounted her suffering and that of her five children over the case.

"I've had nightmares at night and when I get in my car, I'm afraid to start the engine because I've often felt like my car was going to blow up," Mrs. Heath said.

PHI BETA KAPPA

The Membership Committee of Phi Beta Kappa is now receiving nominations for membership. The preliminary requirements which must be met in order for a student to be eligible for consideration for election are:

- (1) GPA of 3.5 for students who graduated in May 1991, for students in their final semester, a 3.52 is necessary; for first semester seniors, a 3.60; and for election at the end of the junior year, a 3.70 is required;
- (2) At least two 300 (or higher) level courses outside the major of principal area of concentration;
- (3) At least 90 hours of courses classified as "liberal";
- (4) At least 45 hours of classwork completed on the Lexington campus;
- (5) Satisfactory completion of the lower division ("non-major") requirements for either the BA or BS degree in the College of Arts and Sciences (Dec. graduates may be currently enrolled in one required course.)

Should you know of an individual who may meet these requirements, we would appreciate your urging that person to come to Room 271 Patterson Office Tower in the College of Arts and Sciences to pick up and application.

In order to be considered, nominations (for an application to be mailed) must be received no later than FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13 1991, with the application due back to the above named office by SEPTEMBER 30TH.

PLEASE NOTE: It is entirely appropriate to nominate yourself and, in fact, if you believe that you meet the criteria necessary for election, it is expected that you will come to the above office for an application.

Eating disorders a complicated topic

Dear Counselor:

I have had problems with eating for the past two years. I need to lose ten pounds, but I just can't seem to do it. I stay on my diet for three or four days and then I lose my willpower and eat everything in sight. Sometimes I feel so guilty and disgusted that I make myself throw up everything I've eaten. Lately, I've resorted to throwing up more and more, and it's beginning to feel like I'm out of control. Please help!

Carol, biology senior

Dear Carol:

The pattern of dieting, bingeing, and purging you describe is part of an eating disorder called bulimia. Between ten and twenty percent of traditional college-aged women suffer from an eating disorder, so you are not alone in struggling with this problem.

Bulimia is usually characterized by frequent binges of high-calorie food, followed by purging through vomiting, laxative abuse, or excessive exercise.

Bulimic women are aware that their eating is abnormal, but they feel helpless to change the pattern.

The eating problem is usually accompanied by feelings of depression, low self-worth, and general dissatisfaction with one's body.

Bulimia differs from anorexia nervosa in that anorexic women suffer a weight loss of at least 25 percent of the original body weight, and as a result they stop menstruating.

Most bulimic women maintain their weight in the normal or above-normal range.

While both anorexic and bulimic women are dissatisfied with their bodies, anorexic women tend to have a more intense preoccupation with weight loss and a more distorted view of their bodies.

Some anorexic women also engage in binge eating and purging. Both anorexia nervosa and bulimia affect primarily women. Unfortunately, eating disorders are more than a matter of not enough or too much "willpower." People often wonder why anorexic women don't "start eating" and why bulimic women don't simply "stop bingeing and purging."

The problem is very complex and its cause goes beyond a simple decision of what and when to eat.

Eating disorders are caused by a number of factors including repeated dieting, low self-esteem, perfectionism, destructive family patterns and sociocultural pressures about women's bodies and roles in society.

A combination of at least two of these or other factors are present in persons who develop an eating disorder.

Sociocultural pressures play a major role in the development of eating disorders.

Women are sent messages every day through magazines and television about how they need to look in order to be considered attractive and desirable.

Severe, restrictive dieting can lead to anorexia nervosa or bulimia. Dieting triggers binge eating in that the hunger, low energy, and irritability which result from a strict diet are signals that the body is undernourished, and the dieter feels compelled to eat a large amount of food. A person whose self-esteem is highly dependent on successful dieting may purge following the binge as a means of punishing herself or correcting the "mistake."

Severe, long-term dieting leads to not only excessive weight loss, but also distorted, unrealistic thinking and perceptions in anorexic women.

Finally, low self-esteem and disturbed family relationships may contribute to an eating disorder. Some children are taught that in order to be loved and accepted in the family, they must "be good" and never show sadness or anger in any way. They are essentially told that they cannot be themselves and must put their parents' emotional needs before their own.

Sometimes children grow up believing they must be "perfect" and high-achieving in order to get their parents approval. Anything less than perfection feels like a failure.

Anorexia and bulimia can serve many different purposes in these types of situations.

Carol, it is important for you to seek professional help for your eating problem.

Eating disorders are serious, medically dangerous and sometimes life-threatening problems.

Internal bleeding, heart and kidney failure, and dehydration are only a few of the possible consequences of bingeing and purging.

In addition, an eating disorder is a sign of severe emotional pain. You have several choices in taking the first step toward recovery.

You may decide to speak with a general physician or a psychiatrist about the problem through the Student Health Service at 233-5823.

You may prefer to consult your family physician or a clinic in your hometown.

You may also choose to make an appointment with a psychologist at the University Counseling & Testing Center, 301 Frazee Hall, 257-8701.

In addition, this fall the Counseling and Testing Center will be offering a therapy group for women suffering from bulimia. For more information about the group please call 257-8701.

Americans brainstorm about new U.S.S.R.

Associated Press

ASPEN, Colo. — With their homeland changing by the hour, some Soviet leaders have retreated to this ski resort to confer with American experts on how best to shape their country's future.

In meeting rooms at the Aspen Institute, a few miles from the town's glitzy boutiques, American and Soviet economists and politicians have been holding intense 15-hour discussions this week on bringing democracy to a nation of empty food shelves.

But while the Americans speak in theory, the 18-member Soviet delegation is pressing for concrete answers.

"There is an exceptionally great threat of another coup by elements of the KGB and military who have anger and frustration," Vitay Urazhitev, chairman of SHIELD, a Soviet military reform group, said through an interpreter during an interview earlier this week.

"In the next one, the leaders will be destroyed, all new mechanisms and all media will be taken out, the labor camps will be filled. We're talking about physical extermination of the government leaders, using old barbaric methods," Urazhitev warned.

The Americans and Soviets are meeting through Saturday at the institute, a think tank that addresses global issues. Last year, President Bush and then-Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain addressed the institute days after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Despite the institute's location within sight of Aspen's famous ski slopes, the Soviets are paying little attention to the town's attractions.

One dinner in a private residence was scheduled for late in the week, along with a hike in the nearby Maroon Bells Wilderness Area.

But the bulk of the conference is being held in the six-sided Aspen Institute seminar center. Discussions have ranged from economic theory, to centralized banking systems and monetary regulation.

Urazhitev, ousted from the Red Army's special forces as a lieutenant colonel in 1989 for his democratic reform views, was among those arrested at the outset of the unsuccessful Aug. 19 coup by hard-liners in the Soviet Union.

He said SHIELD, his organization of military officers, is growing by about 3,000 members a day. He hopes it will be enough to stem the entrenched Soviet version of the military-industrial complex.

With winter approaching, Urazhitev and others asked for specific suggestions.

"We need practical economic ideas, and the political problems we have are in the relationships between the levels of government," said Alexander Titkin, a member of the Supreme Soviet and a manufacturer.

"We need to draft something for our own government."

Former Sen. Gary Hart, who returned to Colorado last weekend from a trip to the Soviet Union, said the Soviets "may have come with a belief this is a decision-making conference" while conference organizers wanted "ideas to be debated without concrete resolutions."

Several Soviets pushed for American aid, ranging from humanitarian food shipments to capital investment credits. But Robert Reischauer, executive director of the Congressional Budget Office, said prospects are unlikely.

Hart and Reischauer were part of the conference's 33-member American delegation.

Titkin asked the conference delegates to draft a document about the discussions he could take back to Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

His request was denied by Marshall Kaplan, director of the graduate school of public affairs at the University of Colorado, one of the conference's sponsors.

Kaplan said he intended originally to have the participants draft something, but he decided instead to produce "a more thoughtful and fairly quick" publication.

During the panel discussions, Hart urged the Soviets to invent mechanisms for governing themselves within the context of their own history and traditions.

For the Americans to dictate how that should be done would not be helpful, Hart said.

Dottie West dies at 58

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dottie West, a poor girl who reaped riches as she helped pave the way for women country music singers, died yesterday from injuries sustained last weekend in a car accident. She was 58.

West spent her last days singing and battling bankruptcy. She filed for protection from creditors a year ago, listing more than $1 million in debts.

Best known for her 1974 hit song "Country Sunshine," West severely damaged her liver in Friday night's accident, which occurred as she was in route to perform at the Grand Ole Opry.

Belogolov, a lawmaker and state farm director from Siberia, told The Associated Press after the raucous session.

Gorbachev's proposal would effectively eliminate the Congress, the country's top legislative body. He and his allies tried to sweeten the proposal by guaranteeing that lawmakers would continue to receive their monthly salaries of 300 rubles, or $500, plus free plane and train tickets, according to Cekuolis, a Lithuanian observer at the Congress.

But the anger was palpable. One lawmaker walked up to the podium while Gorbachev was speaking, and the Soviet president halted in mid-sentence to angrily wave him away.

It was a sharp turnaround from Monday's opening session, when Gorbachev seized the initiative by jointly announcing his proposal with Yeltsin and Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev.

Their plan calls for the creation of an interim government until a new loose confederation can be formed.

The interim government would include a new State Council as the country's top executive body, comprised of the president and the leaders of the 10 participating republics. An Inter-Republic Economic Committee, including representatives from each republic, would coordinate economic reforms.

Under the plan, the Congress would never be called into session again. Its smaller Supreme Soviet legislature would take over all its duties, but the entire membership would be changed.

Gorbachev and the republic leaders stunned the Congress when they presented the plan on Monday, saying it was a last-ditch effort to stem the disintegration of the country.

But hard-liners objected to the loss of their power, and Gorbachev and the republic presidents spent Tuesday and Wednesday in closed-door negotiations trying to hammer out a version that could win approval.

Some Russians were concerned that the interim government would not give them and their republic enough power, and some minority groups complained that they would not have guaranteed seats in the re-organized Supreme Soviet.

Yuri Burikh, a Ukrainian delegate, condemned the "chain reaction of breakup of the union, which may swallow up the lives of millions of Although being a nontraditional student at UK has its disadvantages, there are many benefits, Childers said.

"It's easier in a lot of ways. Professors appreciate that we really pay attention," she said. "You get a lot more respect from the faculty."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.

The Game?

Football rivalries can go too far, coach says

By BOBBY KING
Senior Staff Writer

History is loaded with episodes of bad blood between neighboring rivals. Wars have been fought, homes have been pillaged, lives have been lost — all for the sake of pride.

Football is no different. Border clashes and intrastate rivalries are the stuff that keep alumni frothing at the mouth in anticipation, media people running in circles and coaches worrying about their jobs if they lose the Big One.

When the possibility of a UK-University of Louisville football series was mentioned to UK coach Bill Curry, he couldn't help but think of that little game his Alabama teams played annually against the Auburn Tigers.

"It's unbelievable," Curry said. "It was like Armageddon. In those people's minds it was every bit as serious as Armageddon. I swear. It's mind boggling. Three hundred sixty-five days a year it is an utter obsession."

A religious man in his own right, Curry may be overstating how serious the folks in Alabama take their football. But only slightly.

From the cradle to the grave, the Auburn-Alabama football game is as important as even the most cataclysmic of happenings.

From just after the moment of conception, babies are ingrained in the tradition of The Game.

"In the crib when the eye begins to focus ... I swear the first thing that every child in Alabama sees is something crimson or something blue and orange hanging over the crib," Curry said.

As the child grows up, the rivalry is fueled in the grade schools.

"If I would go speak to a third-grade class I would have on my crimson tie, being the coach from Alabama," Curry said. "I would stand up in front of the class or maybe sit down on the floor with them."

"One time there was one little boy over in the corner and he was crying. I said, 'What's wrong Jason?' And they said, 'Oh, he's an

"If I would have to recruit in Alabama whether it's a white or black family, rich or poor, there would be three pictures on the wall. If it's a black family, there would be Martin Luther King, Jesus, and the Bear.
"In a white family, there would be FDR or George Wallace, Jesus, and the Bear. And the Bear's picture is always the biggest one."

— Bill Curry, UK football coach, on recruiting at the University of Alabama, where Paul "Bear" Bryant is considered a demigod

Auburn fan.' And all the kids had been on his case. The first thing I had to do was hug Jason and tell him that it's okay for him to pull for his daddy's alma mater.

"If you move in there from another school and you are a third grader, halfway through the first day you will be forced to declare if you are crimson, or if you are orange and blue," he said.

Homesteads in Alabama are dominated by family pictures — and that doesn't mean grandma and grandpa.

During his three years at Alabama, Curry went into many Alabama households looking to lure eager new prospects into the Crimson Tide family.

There he saw how the legend of his predecessor, Paul "Bear" Bryant was made from the glory of winning the big ones.

"If I would have to recruit in Alabama whether it's a white or black family, rich or poor, there would be three pictures on the wall. If it's a black family, there would be Martin Luther King, Jesus, and the Bear.

"In a white family, there would be FDR or George Wallace, Jesus, and the 'Bear.'

"And the Bear's picture is always the biggest one," he said.

By the time Alabama fans reach their golden years, as Curry can attest, they look forward not to their final reward, but for one more victory over the loathsome Tigers.

"I'm walking across a parking lot in July in a Tuscaloosa shopping mall and an 82-year-old, white-haired, lovely elderly lady ran up to me and threw her arms around my neck and said, 'Please, dear God, please can we beat Auburn this year.' "I didn't even know this person," he said. "It was just everything to her, and to the guy at the filling station. Everywhere you go that is all people talked about."

There isn't much history from which to judge how a UK-U of L football series would be taken by Kentuckians.

The last time UK and U of L met on the football field was 1924, when the Cats extended their winning streak to six in a row over the Cardinals.

Every fall since, the only way to decide which school has had the better team in the state was to take part in one of the many back-porch debates.

UK's current rivalries in football are both border clashes: the Battle for the Bear Barrel against Tennessee and the Battle for the Bourbon Barrel against Indiana.

On the basketball court, UK and U of L have met annually since the 1983-84 season and the game has grown into a passionate battle for the commonwealth's bragging rights.

For example: Big Brother versus Little Brother; Bumper stickers that say "You're ugly and your mother sends you to Louisville" and "My two favorite teams are U of L and UK's opponent."

Although the proposed UK-U of L football series might turn out to be an intense rivalry, chances are it won't cause the same hysteria as does the Battle for Alabama.

Unfortunately for Curry, his Alabama teams were 0-3 against Auburn.

That was a big reason some of the Alabama fanatics were disgruntled with him.

Not surprisingly, Curry thinks that when a mere football game commands that much importance something is not quite right.

"I think it's a sickness that doesn't come from the players," he said. "On the field it's an honorable thing, even though we didn't ever win it. We played our hearts out."

"The players are getting ready to play. There's a bunch of great young people who lay it on the line to win for their buddies and their alma mater."

"The crap goes on off the field with the gamblers and the sick people."

Unlike his situation at Alabama, Curry will have more of a say about the course that the UK-U of L series runs.

Like the way he likes to run his football team, the game, if it happens, will be void of the nonsense that plagued him at Alabama.

"I will do everything in my power to keep that from developing anywhere that I am. I don't think that will happen with Kentucky-Louisville when we do start playing. If anybody tries to start something like that, they will have to fight me."

Wildcats vs. Cardinals faceoff not likely soon

For a time this summer it looked like the UK-University of Louisville football series — dormant for some 67 years — was sure to be resurrected. But as fate and the ghosts from an empty past would have it, the negotiations stalled.

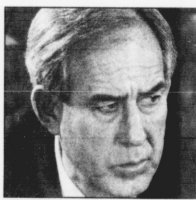

What had been peaceful, harmonious negotiations between UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton, UK coach Bill Curry, and their U of L counterparts, Bill Olsen and Howard Schnellenberger, quickly turned into a war of words played out in the media.

A July 26 article in The Courier-Journal quoted Olsen and Schnellenberger saying that UK was holding up the negotiations.

Newton denied the allegation and promptly closed off any further discussions with the media concerning the negotiations.

So the questions lingering with us now are: Have the negotiations resumed; and when will this game ever take place?

Last week, Newton said UK would "simply back off" from the proposal for a game with U of L while coaches prepare for the '91

"Louisville won a national championship and then suddenly you have two programs in the state who were bona fide Division I basketball programs. So (the basketball series) became an appealing game. We're not there yet in football."

— UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton on the possibility of a UK-U of L football series. At the earliest, the series could start in the mid 1990s, he said.

season.

"We'll ... get back together at the appropriate time at the end of the season or sometime during the season or whatever time the four of us can get back together," Newton said.

Whenever they do settle down to the bargaining table, a few of the issues that caused the initial disharmony will still be there waiting for them.

UK initially was in favor of playing the first four games of the series at Commonwealth Stadium and then discussing the possibility of a home-and-home series if Louisville were to build a new stadium.

U of L currently plays in Cardinal Stadium, which seats approximately 40,000. Both schools agreed that because of greater ticket revenues from playing at 57,800-seat Commonwealth Stadium, Lexington would be the best place to hold the initial games.

The "snag," as Newton put it this summer, arose when U of L officials speculated that a new stadium might be only a few years away. If that happened Olsen and Schnellenberger wanted the home-and-home series immediately.

In the statement Newton issued after The Courier-Journal article, he cited UK's commitment to a broad-based athletics program that forces the University to play at least six of its eleven games at home each season and seven whenever possible.

Football and basketball are the only two revenue-producing sports at UK. The rest are either at the break-even point or dependent on basketball and football for much of their funding.

Playing U of L immediately on the road, according to Newton, would not be feasible with UK's long-term scheduling contracts. UK has a 10-year pact with Indiana, a game that has grown in popularity and is unlikely to be dropped any time soon.

Beginning in 1992, UK must also play eight Southeastern Conference games each season, four of which will be on the road. With the IU series being home-and-home, that would give UK at least four road games each season and a fifth road game every other year.

So with the discussions at an impasse, one can only guess at when the kickoff of the first game in a lifetime between UK and U of L will take place.

Newton, however, does know it will not be soon.

"I don't know when it will happen," Newton said. "We're looking at least at 1994 or 1995."

Schnellenberger and Olsen could not be reached for comment.

Newton said the biggest benefit that could come from the game would be the increased year-round media attention.

"If you play it as an opener, which we've been talking about doing, you are going to have a lot of football media interest from spring training on through summer — which you don't have now," he said.

Newton said although there is more talk about the game now than in the past, both programs have a long way to go before the game will be of national interest.

"I don't think this game, right now, is appealing. Everybody talks about the Alabama-Auburn series. There was a time when that game was not appealing. There was a time when the Louisville-Kentucky basketball series was not appealing," Newton said.

"Louisville won a national championship and then suddenly you have two programs in the state who were bona fide Division I basketball programs. So that became an appealing game. We're not there yet in football."

U of L, fresh from their New Year's Day trouncing of Alabama in the Fiesta Bowl, was eager to get a shot at UK.

In the past, UK has been accused of ducking the Cardinals because it had everything to lose and nothing to gain.

With the bowl win under its belt, U of L is hoping the shoe is on the other foot.
