

What Nixon Will Do For/To Students

WASHINGTON (CPS)—Richard Nixon says he has learned a lot from campaigning for the Presidency, especially in understanding what's on the minds of young people.

He's been on the receiving end of some pretty pointed messages on signs carried by students. One poster held high at a rally in Burbank, Calif. especially caught his eye. "Talk With Us, Not At Us," the sign said.

News Analysis

The sentiment behind that statement is indicative of what Nixon sees as a gap between generations, a gap he thinks his new political leadership will help to close.

When Nixon insists he has heeded the sign's message, it's clear to many on campus that he is two-faced, a double-talker, and a real threat to academic freedom.

The Republican nominee feels he has made a sincere effort to talk with students, not at them. He offers a platform that includes ending the draft through an all-volunteer army after the Vietnam war is ended. He has established a Student Coalition to "utilize the talents and energies of the academic community to resolve society's problems."

Nixon also would "devise new ways by which, through long term loans, the federal government can further assist students to gain a higher education." He also says he would encourage private enterprise to expand its participation in student financial aid. Nixon might support the proposal for an "Educational Opportunity Bank" that would loan students the cost of college, with repayment dependent on future income. The GOP Platform, though, contains the old idea of tax credits for parents and a new version: tax deductions to encourage savings for college.

Tax advantages would also be given to those who support private schools, the GOP candidate says.

Nixon also supports lowering the voting age. Eighteen-year-olds are old enough to vote not because they are old enough to fight, he says, but because they are smart enough to vote.

Nixon promises students "a piece of the action." Involved in "forging the new direction in America," young people will have a better alternative than taking to the streets in protest, he argues.

All this sounds good to Nixon supporters. Other members of the academic community, however, are scared to death of what might happen to dissent and freedom under a Nixon-Agnew Administration.

Their fear—and Nixon's fear of or distaste for student demonstrators—can be explained as simply a difference in ideological beliefs. To someone on the left, someone on the right seems far right; while conservatives might be able to stomach moderates, liberals seem too radical.

But liberal distaste within the academic community for Nixon can be explained and justified by examining the candidate's remarks and record.

Nixon's one, Humphrey-supporters point out, who voted in 1947 against a $30 million increase in the school lunch program. In 1960 as Vice President, he declined to cast the tie-breaking vote that would have authorized more than

More Kernel Complaints Aired At Board Meeting

By LARRY DALE KEELING
Assistant Managing Editor

Two members of the Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) appeared at a meeting of the Board of Student Publications Wednesday and after discussion with the Board, one of them said he no longer saw the purpose of YAF's petition against the Kernel.

No one from OZIQ, which is circulating another petition, appeared at the meeting. Dr. Gifford Blyton, chairman of the Board, had repeatedly invited students with complaints about the Kernel to attend the meeting.

Steve Bright, a student member of the board, told the board that some of the members of OZIQ had told him they felt it was a waste of time to talk to the board. He said they planned to take their petition to the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Blyton had a copy of YAF's petition and said it surprised him that someone would draw up a petition containing "such obvious errors." He listed three such errors:

▶ Student activity fees pay for the Kernel. Dr. Blyton told the two students that student fees do not pay for the Kernel.

▶ The Kernel is an adjunct of the journalism department. Dr. Blyton stated this was not true, either.

▶ The Kernel has no supervisory control. Dr. Blyton said he was "pretty sure" that the Board hired Charles Reynolds as director of student publications to provide this control.

"I have heard by way of the grapevine that certain students have actually signed this petition," Dr. Blyton said. "It amazes me that anyone would sign a petition filled with such obvious errors."

He said he welcomed with open arms criticism and evaluation of the paper, "but I am also interested in truth."

"The petition was written under faculty advising," said William Zell of the YAF, "and I would like to apologize for the errors."

"Since we're not paying for it, (the Kernel) I don't see what the purpose of the petition is. If it didn't represent our views, we didn't want to pay for it. The purpose of the petition was to put the Kernel on a subscription basis."

Zell had other complaints about the Kernel, however.

"We found editorializing in the news columns," he said.

He added that YAF does not like the editorials but that the editorials do not bother them as much as the news coverage.

"In the last week or two the Kernel has improved," he said.

Douglas Murphy, a student who said he represented no one but himself, criticized the Kernel for the coverage it gives to minority groups. He cited the front-page story on Mike Fallahay sending back his draft notice; the full-page interview with Leonard Jordan, a self-proclaimed Marxist and the amount of space given to Students for a Democratic Society.

"It seems like that up to the Students continued their voting for the homecoming queen Wednesday. Here students make up their mind as to the five candidates they will vote for. The five finalists will be introduced for the first time at the pep rally Thursday night. They will be presented again at the concert Friday night and one of them will be crowned homecoming queen at halftime Saturday.

Olguin: Federal Legislation Is Boycott Target

By GERRY HINE

United Farm Worker organizer Venustiano Olguin presented the plight of the Mexican migrant worker to a group of about 150 UK students and faculty members here Wednesday night.

He said migrant grape pickers of California are striking for recognition.

Olguin explained that due to the availability of more migrants brought to the fields by the growers, attempts to strike for a bargaining position are difficult to realize.

Migrant workers brought into replace striking pickers are unfurnished of the labor situation and unknowingly break the strike, he said.

Therefore, the National Farm Workers of America are touring the country in an attempt to persuade the people to cooperate in their efforts by refusing to buy or sell California grapes. The movement has attracted widespread student support.

"The real target is federal legislation," Olguin continued. "So far only token legislation has been passed."

He compared the situation of the Mexican-American farm worker to that of Blacks a few years ago.

The growers maintain that if the pickers were not happy they would not be there. They bitterly oppose any attempts of the laborers to organize, Olguin said.

Dr. Gene Mason, a political science professor, related plans for local support of the boycott. Dr. Mason is attempting to garner support from different civic organizations to bring pressure on grocery store managers in the area not to sell table grapes.

Olguin summarized the success of the boycott movement by saying that no major victories have been recorded but that "minor victories are being won every day."

Homecoming Starts Tonight

Guthrie Mirrors Composition Through Simplicity

BOUND FOR GLORY by Woody Guthrie, E. P. Dutton and Sons, 413 pp.

By FRANK BAILEY

To the casual music listener, Woody Guthrie may be no more than just a name. To the dilettante in the field, he is at least a bit of pleasant nostalgia, if not a revered genius.

Woody Guthrie was a song writer, or rather a song creator. But as his autobiography BOUND FOR GLORY illustrates,

SUMMER

By Beverly Benton

I could not wonder
That you were only Summer's heat.

Shimmering,
You appeared before my eyes
somewhat hazy
through heat waves.
Laughing,
You beckoned me come to join your joyful game
and feel its burn.
I will not try anymore
To reach you—
You and Summer's heat will disappear
when Autumn comes.

ously demonstrates, he was somewhat of an historian, a would-be social reformer, and certainly an acute observer of his times.

What perhaps is most striking about the book is that it is less the chronicle of one man's life and more the story thin slices

AUTUMN

By Beverly Benton

I saw Autumn today.
She was my father.

Is it that I saw his many colors—
red temper,
orange alertness,
yellow gaiety,
green newness?
Is it that I saw them?

Is it that I love them both—
father and Autumn—
That I project one to the other?

It is this, but Because the brown
falls heaviest now
And covers green
with its brittleness,
I see Autumn
and my father,
And I know Love's fear.

of American history. Woody Guthrie has surreptitiously mirrored the times in which he lived through the clever device of colloquially simple, but saucy, dialogue.

Guthrie will by no means enter any hall of fame in the field of American literature. But like Detroit's Mickey Lolich with his fast ball, this diminutive song writer is deceptively good. His work is written with such unassuming simplicity that the reader follows the story line easily.

But it takes only a couple of chapters to realize that all of this easy-to-read Western-oriented dialectic dialogue has been reflecting a turbulent era in this nation's history. Of course, Guthrie makes no pretense of relating an unbiased account of the times. He is quite consciously speaking for those "culturally disadvantaged" of the Western states in the pre-Depression and Depression days.

In fact, the reader is given the impression that even when an given a reasonable chance, he snubs his nose at any attempt to see how the other half of this country lived. But the reader must remember that this book was penned before Guthrie, the singer and song creator, achieved his greatest fame.

When the author deals with his own life, he tries to convince the reader that he is but a free spirit rolling along like the trains that he rode and wrote about, "Bound for Glory." He is perhaps the Thoreau of the Western freight riders, advocating the simple, unencumbered life where man can be essentially free from doubts and responsibilities. Guthrie is unconvincing as a free spirit because the depth of thought in the book vividly demonstrates his concern for the type of people about which he writes.

BOUND FOR GLORY is basically a coherent conglomeration of the Guthrie philosophies written so the educated and uneducated can understand. For example, he has one of his numerous railyard cronies discuss the "isms" thusly, "If we all get together, social like, and build something like a big ship, any kind of factory, railroad, a big dam—that's social work, ain't it?"

Then on the same subject, Guthrie opines as if in some sort of continuation, they will "tell you we all just mortally got to work together, build things together, fix up old things together, clean out the filth together, put up new buildings, schools and churches, banks and factories together, and own everything together. Sure they'll call it a bad ism. Jesus don't care if you call it socialism or communism, or just you and me."

This is how Woody Guthrie hammers his ideas, a sort of literary soft sell. The style of the work is lively, but often shows the strain of a novice at literature. He leans much too heavily on the use of the metaphor and simile to convey his thought. At times these are outlandish and bunched much too close together so that the reader is more aware of the literary device than he is of the story.

Many may now consider Woody Guthrie and the songs he wrote naive and passe, but BOUND FOR GLORY waxes eloquently for the people about whom it was written. The book is far from passe.

Experience Should Help Director With Closed TV

By SALLY MITCHELL
Dr. Paul Owen, Director of Media Services, came to UK with a wealth of experience behind him, which should help him to make the new closed circuit television station here a success. A music scholarship to Pomona College in California started him on his way as a singer and choral director with Fred Waring before World War II. After the war, he returned to professional television and small parts in motion pictures. "In 1953 television was new and almost anyone could get in it," said Dr. Owen.

A friend persuaded him to go to the University of Houston to set up the first educational television station. While he was there, he took courses and got his Bachelor's degree.

In 1960 he was made Station Relations Director of National Educational Television in New York and in 1962 went back to Houston and took a part-time job in order to finish his graduate work.

He received his Ph.D. in social industrial psychology early in 1967, and came to UK shortly afterward. "Kentucky offers a real challenge; here's an ideal place where TV can be used to bring out instructional material," he says.

The first phase of the station will be completed by spring. It will carry broadcasts to Somerset, Jefferson, Eastern, and Hopkinsville Community Colleges.

Dr. Owen described the three functions of the closed circuit station as:

► Messages to students other than instructional; advisements, registration.

► Members of the faculty in Lexington can speak to faculties of the community colleges.

► Use for adult continuing education.

"With TV we can bring all the latest things to them."

Television sets eventually will be set up in the Chemistry-Physics, Law, Engineering and new Arts and Sciences buildings and Dickey Hall. The distribution center in Taylor Education will send programs on various channels to these buildings.

Tapes also will be produced for broadcast over state and commercial television.

The equipment now is just on the threshold of being tuned. Dr. Owen wants to do new things with the station: "We don't want to do the same kind of things that have been done in the last 15 years in television."

The Republican Future

The direction this country will be taking in the years upcoming was largely determined Tuesday when voters showed their preference for the old Republican workhorse, Richard Nixon. As the returns came in through the election day and into the small hours of Wednesday it became increasingly obvious that the present administration of Johnson and Humphrey was repudiated, however lightly, and the programs of the Republican party chosen. But exactly what we can look forward to under the new administration is difficult to determine.

One of the reasons for the uncertainty is that Mr. Nixon will be facing Democratic majorities in both houses of Congress, and it is not now known what type of working relationship he will be able to establish. The possibility of a factional Democratic-Republican coalition does exist.

But the main reason we are now unable to determine what lies ahead in the next four and maybe eight years is that the Republican candidates, personified in Mr. Nixon and Spiro T. Agnew, his running mate, have not clearly spoken out on the issues. We have only been able to gain a slight feeling of what the men represented and what they will do now that they have been given the reigns of government.

The issue of the Vietnam war is probably the most important matter facing the nation today and Mr. Nixon has avoided almost all comment on the matter. Hopefully he will now undertake to end the war as soon as possible in a humane manner, saving lives rather than face.

Throughout the campaign we have been taken aback by the statements of Nixon and Agnew on what they call "law and order." Their general demeanor has given little cause for comfort to concerned minority groups and student activists who are pressing for progressive social change. We now hope Mr. Nixon and his vice president-elect see fit to reverse the direction they have been taking and to move positively to solve the racial and social problems facing the nation today.

While such a move seems essential to the future of the country, there is reason to doubt that it is forthcoming.

Perhaps this all points to the major fears we have about Tuesday's election. Much has been written about the conservative backlash coming over this nation as represented by the support given both Nixon and Wallace. The issue seems especially relevant in this state since the election of our present governor, a conservative by most any standards.

This country cannot afford to move backwards. These are important and troubled times in the nation, and new solutions are needed. The old solutions, offered us throughout much of the campaign, will not do. We can now only hope Mr. Nixon and Mr. Agnew will re-examine the issues and act more intelligently in their governing capacities than they did during the campaign. The nation's future depends on it.

Bribery of Ideas

DISTAFF VIEW

By DARRELL RICE
And HOWARD MASON
Kernel Editors

OZIQ met publicly for the first time Monday night and revealed at last its breathlessly-awaited, highly vaunted plans for upgrading the Kernel. By implementing the recommended reforms, the wide consensus of opinion has it that the Kernel soon will be able to achieve all the potency and driving force of the Morehead Trail Blazer.

Briefly, the suggested reforms consist of:

Revamping the Board of Student Publications to include six student members (all appointed by the president of Student Government), three faculty members (all appointed by the President), the Vice President for University Relations (i.e., Glenwood Creech), a professional journalist, a representative from the Alumni Committee and the permanent chairmanship's being held by the Vice President for Student Affairs.

The board is to be recognized as the publisher of the Kernel and the editorial policies are to evolve from it.

The editor-in-chief is to be selected by campus-wide election, all applicants to have been screened beforehand by the board.

Subsequently, the board is to appoint the editorial page editor, the managing editor and the business manager. The remainder of the staff is to be selected by the editor and submitted to the board for ratification.

Editorials are to be written by five students selected by the board to represent diverse political viewpoints.

As many of these ideas represent the conditions under which the Trail Blazer operates, there can be little doubt but that the Kernel also will soon be reaching unprecedented heights of journalistic excellence. In fact, even the Trail Blazer does not have all these remarkably enlightened standards under which to operate; therefore, the Kernel might be expected to even surpass the Trail Blazer's record. Given time, of course.

The editorials evolving under such a system might well be expected to deal with such lofty topics as admonitions not to write on desks, not to run or yell in halls, and not to ride motorcycles on campus. On a more positive note, students could expect encouragement to display school spirit, to study harder, to attend church regularly and to dress properly for all occasions.

Perhaps the point of greatest appeal in this plan is the one calling for a campus-wide election to fill the editor's position.

Realizing the import of the election (and, pragmatically, the high costs), a wise and economical move would be to merge the editor's election with the campus homecoming queen balloting. Then, as most magnificently conceived, the half-time of the homecoming football games would provide the ideal setting for the crowning of both winners.

Another advantage to this plan would be that both campaigns could be conducted simultaneously with wall posters and all. However, no one would want to intermingle the trivia of the editor's election with one of such magnitude as the selection of the homecoming queen.

Therefore, this factor would necessitate the building of a second "wall" for the editor candidates' literature. And perhaps this is the only drawback to OZIQ's plan.

Kernel Forum: the readers write

To the Editor of the Kernel:

All Nigerians, respective of their views on the current crisis at home, have heartily welcomed efforts being made by members of the world community in helping innocent victims of the civil war. These victims are found on both sides of the fighting lines hence the UNICEF's caption: "Nigeria-Biafra Relief." But unfortunately, most of these "humanitarian" efforts have always had a political overtone, as re-echoed by the Kernel in its issue of 29th October, 1968.

The Federal Government of Nigeria will certainly not allow itself to be dragged into the irresponsible game of feeding the world on lies. And so it is that the unchallenged rebel propaganda, with bases in New York City, Los Angeles, Miami, etc. has been taken hook-line-and-sinker by the U.S. public. While it may be futile at this time to go into the details of events that led to the current war, I commend to the Kernel the report on the situation by Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Palmer II, first U.S. Ambassador in Nigeria, presented to the Senate Sub-Committee on Africa, August 27th, 1968.

The Nigerian Government has gone great lengths in permitting the unprecedented in a domestic affair: it has allowed representatives of the Organization of African Unity, United Nations, Sweden, Poland, Canada and Great Britain to travel along with the Federal troops and watch and report the conduct of those highly disciplined soldiers. So far the observers have published two reports, both categorically denying rebel charges of "genocide," and stating instead that the situation is "in fact the opposite." The Canadian representative, Maj.-Gen. Milroy, is currently at Ottawa to report on the situation as he found it to the Canadian House of Commons.

Hailing from the former Eastern Nigeria (now carved into three States by the Federal Government), and belonging to a non-Ibo minority tribe, I have become sickened by an endless line of letters from relatives and friends relating vicious atrocities perpetrated by Ibos against my people for our opposition to secession. What people refer to as "Biafra" is merely a state of mind conceived by the Ibo tribe and nourished by international adventurers to oppress and dominate smaller tribes, and exploit the resources of these smaller tribes.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

My appearance before the law school was commented upon in your editorial in The Kentucky Kernel, October 16, 1968.

Your criticism of the undersigned is neither just, temperate, nor decent. I do not expect you to publish the comments of Larry Roberts, the senior law student of the university law school upon whose invitation I appeared at The Speakers Forum, but I enclose herewith a copy of his letter to me so that you will be better informed, at least.

I agree wholeheartedly with Dr. Krogdahl's criticism of The Kentucky Kernel and its operation. You, of course, are responsible for its conduct. It does not represent the views of the students of the University of Kentucky. In my opinion, it misrepresents them badly. Unless you can make arrangements to clean it up at the earliest possible moment, it is my thinking that the stinking sheet ought to be abolished. The taxpayers of Kentucky ought not to be called upon to finance such tripe.

You ought to be interested to know that there were between three and four hundred law students at the Forum meeting on Monday last, and not a single one of them expressed approval of the conduct of The Kentucky Kernel.

Frank Ramsey, Judge Sutherland, and others are presently reviewing your policy and it seems fairly certain that, unless you gain a semblance of decency in short order, you will soon disappear from the scene.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

Every year the same conflict arises between Greeks and Non-Greeks over the advantages and disadvantages of the Greek system. Once again we feel it necessary to state benefits and let each person decide if these are valuable and worthwhile to himself.

An aim of the Greek system is to develop as an individual, and yet, become a part of a unified group. The development of any individual to the fullest potential is made by clarification of ideals, strengthening of self-confidence, distinguishing between prejudices and principles, and widening circle of acquaintances. All of which are involved in the Greek life. Fraternities and sororities give an inspiration for growth of character.

The Greek program stresses the development and improvement of scholarship. Respect for scholarship has led to the Greeks having the highest average on campus. With the requirement of a certain grade point average for initiation, the Greeks achieve a determination to work until a degree is won.

The intra-Greek social life is probably the most renowned. But parties and dances show a proper division of time between study and the more enjoyable phases of college life.

Leadership is taught in the Greek system. The individual trains and develops himself for responsible citizenship through participation in college activities. Each fraternity and sorority emphasizes the need to belong to campus functions and the individual develops by choosing meaningful service.

Another aim of the Greek system is to not only be a good citizen of the college campus, but of the entire community. By giving up the time usually wasted to help certain philanthropies, one becomes aware of the problems of the community.

Financial responsibility is also learned. Each fraternity and sorority is its own business and can only fulfill its obligations when each member pays his commitment.

Finally, brotherhood is the basis of Greek life. Each Greek is taught to realize the value of other fraternity or sorority and independent students on campus. Friendship to all is emphasized. A special quality unifies each fraternity and sorority with itself by upholding its own reputation. But fullest cooperation and brotherhood is only realized when everyone respects the laws and traditions of the school.

Every person upon admission to the Greek system has conferred upon him a mark of distinction. In this distinction they take just pride. They strive to attain the systems ideals and by so doing, to bring to it and their school, honor and credit. They are loyal to their college and their chapter, and remain close to them in order that they retain the spirit of youth. They are good and loyal citizens.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

Senator Muskie's speech at the Coliseum Wednesday night left one with mixed emotions. The crowd, while not large, was polite and orderly and intermittent applause graced the Senator's remarks. But something was wrong. Many of us had been led to believe that of all the six candidates from three major parties Senator Muskie had best articulated and forcefully argued a rational political point of view. His remarks Wednesday night seemed to subvert this notion.

The speech itself was more conspicuous for what was omitted than for what was substantively argued. The burning gut issues of the war in Vietnam and the whole law and order syndrome were not even mentioned. Harking to the past, the revered name of President Kennedy was invoked several times. Harking to the present, the not-so-revered name of President Johnson was not uttered once. The threat of George Wallace's campaign, which has considerable support in this state, was likewise omitted by the good Senator.

For one who seemed so anxious to speak out on the issues in this painful election campaign, Senator Muskie had apparently decided to turn the other jaw. It was most discouraging to see a decent man throw innuendo and ad hominem arguments at Richard Nixon simply because the Republican candidate has done and is doing the same. There was no justification for it and the result is that we all lose a little more faith in American presidential politics.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

In a crisis it takes courage to be a leader . . . courage to speak out . . . to point the way . . . to say the hell with everybody. In a crisis, it takes action to survive . . . the kind of action that comes from a paper of instinct, as well as intelligence.

If the University is to survive this crisis . . . if the student body is to inherit a sane and even promising world, we must have courageous, constructive leadership. The kind of leadership that only the Kernel has to offer. That's why die Studenten who really think support the Kernel. They know what it takes to stand up and be counted as one of those against the University's professors, administrators, and responsible students. Und they've got that courage.

Tausands und taudands of tomorrow's leaders—the thinking young members of such organizations as SDS und CARSA—have the courage to read the Kernel and like what they read! They realize that such publications are vital to the overthrow of the establishment.

There are no dues. Join the Kernel Youth Corps und receive your membership card, the Kernel, and a copy of "The Principles of News Writing" or "Cynics and Slander," by D. Rice.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

Nothing printed in The Kentucky Kernel (alias, "The South's Outstanding College Daily") shocks me any more. Day after day I see smears, ugly insinuations, and outright attacks against the foremost men and institutions of our nation by your sick staff. However, in your editorial "Black Truth," you really outdid yourselves. Do you honestly believe that those two obnoxious United States Olympic team members were right in their outrageous "Black Power" performance? It seems that any radical cause that springs up, no matter how ridiculous, is supported by the Kernel staff. At least 80 percent of the students on this campus completely disagree with your policies. I suggest that you give fair coverage to all groups, instead of crackpots who seek the headlines—which you so eagerly print.

To the Editor of the Kernel:

On Saturday night, October 26, 1968, at the Kentucky vs. Georgia football game a spectator was stricken with a severe heart attack.

In order to carry the spectator on a stretcher through the milling crowd, several hundred students were asked to wait several minutes before returning to their seats.

The students were very cooperative and their help might have saved a life.

The Athletics Association would like to say thanks to all students in Section C.

Hoopsters 'Rounding Into Shape'

By GREG BOECK
The basketball Wildcats open their 1968-69 season 23 days from now against Xavier and Coach Adolph Rupp thinks "we're going to be all right."

"We're rounding into shape," he said, but the masterful pilot, beginning his 38th season at UK, has some problems.

"We have one, maybe two, positions yet to fill this year," Rupp said.

Three positions are already held by returning starters Mike Casey (F-C), Mike Pratt, a forward, and pivotman Dan Isel—all juniors. That leaves a guard and a forward spot open or maybe two guard slots, depending on where Casey plays.

Casey To Forward?

"I hate to move Casey to forward. We'd lose the height we could have in either 6-10 Art Laib, 6-7 Randy Pool, or 6-8 Clint Wheeler. Our problem's at forward, not guard," Rupp said.

Wheeler had a shot last week at the forward position, but managed to come up with just one rebound and three points.

Should Casey play forward, though, UK has returning letterman Phil Argento, redshirt Terry Mills and Bill Busey to battle for the backcourt jobs. Argento is the only senior on the team.

Good Guards

"We've got a bunch of fine guards," Rupp said. He especially had kind words for Mills. "He's always a threat," the Baron said.

Pre-season polls have UK

Lyons Close To Return Record

UK's All-America candidate Dicky Lyons hopes to rewrite an NCAA return record against Vanderbilt in Saturday's Homecoming game.

Lyons has a career total of 2148 yards in kickoff and punt returns. The record is 2177. Lyons returned one punt for two yards and one kickoff 22 yards against West Virginia last weekend.

ranked second and third behind, who else, UCLA. "I don't think we deserve that kind of rating, though," Coach Rupp confessed.

Rupp added, "This team is a little ahead of last year's at this time." The 'Cats weren't ranked in any pre-season polls, but managed to win the SEC championship while compiling a 22-5 record. UK advanced to the NCAA Midwest Regional finals before being upset by Ohio State.

SEC Rat Race

Looking ahead, Rupp sees the SEC as another rat race this season. Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Georgia and Florida will help UK head the pack, according to Rupp.

Rupp wasn't about to make any predictions about the season, however. "Why, they've already got us playing UCLA in Louisville for the NCAA championship!"

According To 'Schedule Power Ratings'

UK Schedule 12th Toughest

By JIM MILLER

Kernel Sports Editor
Remember Gordon L. Wise, the assistant professor of marketing at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio?

If the name doesn't ring a bell, Wise is the man who devised the "Schedule Power Ratings" that were first introduced toward the end of basketball season last year. Wise rated Adolph Rupp's Wildcats as playing the fourth toughest schedule in the nation.

Well, Wise's ratings—football this time—are back, but UK and the Southeastern Conference aren't faring as well as they did in the hardwood ratings.

UK Schedule Twelfth

After seven games, Charlie Bradshaw's Wildcats have played the 12th toughest schedule in the country while the SEC is ranked fifth of major conferences according to Wise's ratings.

Wise's ratings, in his words, are "an objective mathematical analysis of the difficulty of (athletic) schedules."

Wise arrives at the different ratings of each club by assigning a certain point value to each

All-SEC basketball player Mike Casey, shown grabbing a rebound against Ohio State, is one of Rupp's 1967-68 "Super Sophs" and may be counted on both at forward and guard this season.

Soccermen Play U of L Saturday

The UK Soccer Club comes from a two week layoff when it meets the University of Louisville soccer team at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

The UK Club has won four of its six games this season, one of the wins coming over Louisville, October 19, by a 4-1 score at U of L.

The UK Soccer Club, which is not a university-financed group, has beaten in addition to U of L, Transylvania 3-2 and 2-1 and Asbury 5-2.

UK's only losses have come to Murray State, 5-1, and Southern Illinois, 4-1. Both are university financed clubs.

Law Students Serve As Aides

By DANIEL E. GOSSETT
Kernel Staff Writer

UK law students are serving an invaluable service to the community and to local lawyers as volunteer workers with the Fayette County Bar Association's Legal Aid program.

Between 50 and 60 students a semester work under the guidance of Robert G. Lawson, UK assistant professor of law, helping people who are in need of legal advice but are unable to pay for it. The student aides interview the people who apply for the free advice and make the decisions as to whether or not they qualify for free assistance.

Student aides also do a great deal of investigative work, saving the regular lawyers time and speeding up the judicial process.

Scottie Baesler, head of the Fayette County Bar Association's Legal Aid program said of student aides, "They do a very good job.

These students do receive academic credit for their work but do not receive any payment or reimbursement for their time. Dr. Lawson estimates that a practicing lawyer would charge approximately $20 an hour for the same services.

Student participation in the program is directed by Donnie Murray, senior law student from Bow, Ky.

Nixon And Students--Doubletalk

$1.1 billion in federal aid for school construction. He sponsored no education legislation while a member of Congress and opposed most federal-aid-to-education measures.

While recently he has been more careful in his choice of words than his running mate Spiro T. Agnew, Nixon clearly opposes overt student rebellion.

Last spring he expressed his views on the Columbia disorder, saying students who close campuses "not only disgrace themselves but harm the cause of education." "More deplorable," he added, "is the conduct of those professors and teachers who condoned, encouraged or excused the lawlessness of their students."

Nixon saw the Columbia rebellion as "the first major skirmish in a revolutionary struggle to seize the universities and transform them into sanctuaries for radicals and vehicles for revolutionary political and social goals."

He warned that "we must not allow the Latin American university of today to become the prototype of the American university of tomorrow. . . . The way to prevent it is to rid the campus now of any student organization or clique which applauds and uses the type of force employed at Columbia. The place to begin is with the anarchic students."

Talk about talking at students. Oppressive statements like those make it clear that Nixon is dealing in political doubletalk when he lists only positive plans as "some indication of the importance my administration will be determined to attach to the legitimate demands of young people of America."

Richard Nixon refers to today's young people as the "Great Generation." He says there is "a new road ahead" for all Americans. And to young people he says, "that new and relevant road is your road. You will be part of the new leadership. The challenge of change is your challenge, because this land is your land."

While there are some passable parts, Richard Nixon's "new road" for young people seems paved in rhetorical bull.

Publications Board Hears More Complaints

past two weeks the whole theme of the Kernel has been down with all rules."

He said that he didn't see the relevance of riots at Berkeley and Columbia had to UK.

"We all know what is of college that (Berkeley) is."

"I do admire Editor Becker for publishing all the articles against the Kernel," Murphy added.

Editor-in-Chief Lee Becker replied that full-page interviews with Lexington Police Chief E. C. Hale and Wasley Kroghahl, a member of the John Birch Society, also were run in the Kernel.

"You don't complain about those," he said.

In reference to SDS, Becker said, "When someone else does something, we cover it. When SDS does something, we cover it."

"Our covering an event does not mean that we condone it."

Becker added that no one behind any of the petitions has ever come in to discuss the Kernel with him, and that he is always open to criticism.

Dr. Michael Adelstein of the English department told the Board that many faculty members are concerned about the pressure that is being aimed at the Kernel. He said many of the new faculty members had come from schools with papers that were considered good and were also considered controversial.

He said that being controversial might be the mark of a good newspaper.

He added that the Kernel must remain independent in order to check what he described as student groups that might try to run the campus.

"I come to praise it, not to bury it," he said.

Dr. Lyman Ginger, a member of the Board, said he felt the quality of the paper had been superior this year, although he might personally differ on the play given to the stories.

"The question is do we want on this campus a free campus newspaper," he said. "I think the administration has made it clear that we do want a free campus newspaper."

He added that he thought the Kernel could do more toward influencing the direction the administration takes in "basic, vital" affairs such as curricula.

Dr. Blyton told the group that some people think the Board doesn't do anything.

"I think we get a tremendous amount accomplished by sitting down and talking. The alternative is dictatorship."

"The Board has an impossible job to do," he concluded. "You can't please 15,000 students, 5,000 alumni and 2,000 staff."
