Arson possible cause of fire in UK building

Arson is suspected as the cause of a Thursday night fire that damaged a vacant UK building next to the Gaines Center for the Humanities on West Maxwell Street.

Lexington firefighters responded to the fire at 11:30 p.m. at 218 Max-well St. Thursday night and extin-guished it by midnight, according UK spokesman Ralph Derickson.

The fire, which started in a first-floor back room, burned through the floor and debris fell into the base-ment, Derickson said.

"There was no reason for a fire to start."

Although a monetary value has not been placed on the amount of damage, Derickson said one room of the structure was "severely damaged."

An arson team began investigating evidence in the house Friday, he said.

The house has been vacant for several years, and UK had planned to remodel it in the near future for use by the Gaines Center. The plans, which will not be affected by the fire, include classroom space and an apartment for guests of the center, Derickson said.

5K race raises $5,000 for library

By NICK COMER

Nearly 400 people took advantage of Saturday's sunny skies and 70-degree temperatures to take part in he "SK Library Classic."

Race officials said the event netted an estimated $5,000 to benefit the "Pack the Stacks" campaign, which is part the drive to raise $2.25 million for a $750,000 challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. "Pack the Stacks" currently is being directed at graduating UK students.

A student who identified himself as Joe Fulcon won the men's category of the five kilometer race with a time of 15:36. Dan Boyle was second with a time of 16:10 and Packshot placed third in 16:10.

Shelia Kalas took first place in the women's category running the becond with 20:10.

David Hartsek won the wheel-hair category with a time of 17:40.

Jere Clancy, president of Students in Free Enterprise, which sponsored the event, said participants were enhusiastic about the race being on UK's campus. The good weather also helped get many participants out for the event, said Sue Feamster, executive campaign manager of the NEH drive.

"We had about 150 people sign up the morning of the race," she said.
Feamster said the race helped to reason wareness of the fund-raiser on campus.

"We are building momentum," she said.
Feamster said plans already are being made for another race in the fall, perhaps expanded to a 10-kilometer race.
Another event going on this week to benefit the "Pack the Stacks" campaign is a phonathon to reach this year's graduates. The event had raised over $5000 as of last night.
The phonathon will last until Thursday.

UK group helps raise money for homeless

By DALE GREER

Nearly 100 people transformed UK's Commonwealth Stadium into a "Cardboard City" Saturday to raise money for homeless fami-lies.

Volunteers constructed 21 cardboard houses and raised $6,000 in pledges that will be used to construct a real home for a needy family this fall, said Kris Snyder, president of UK's Habitat for Humanity chapter.

The UK group sponsored Saturday's fund-raiser, which was part of an effort by the Lexington chapter to build 15 houses for the homeless during the week of Sep.
15, Snyder said.

The UK chapter, which is responsible for raising the funds for one of the 15 homes, needs to raise $30,000 to cover construction costs. The site of the UK home has not been selected yet, said Tammy Rodenberg, religious adviser to the UK chapter and a student at Lexington Theological Seminary.

The volunteers, which included groups from UK frattemities, sororities and the Catholic Newman Center, spent several minutes living in their one-story, temporary homes.
"We wanted to raise awareness and we thought it would be an educational experience for own Habitat members to see just how tough it is to construct a house and how necessary it is for people to have a home of their own," Rodenberg said.

"We found that out Saturday. When the wind started, most of the houses got blown over or destroyed within 20 minutes of being put up."
Rodenberg said it was important to raise awareness of the homeless problem in Lexington, saying it was "something that we can't

Director hopes to dispel myths in 'Hidden Faces'

By LYNNE CARMODY
Contributing Writer

"Hidden Faces of Kentucky" is an appropriate term to use when discussing eastern Kentucky and Appalachia he perceived as an area set apart from the rest of the country, said Ronald Eller, director of UK's Appalachian center.

"But, the people of the region are 'Hidden Faces' only because we have chosen to see them that way." Eller said.

There are many myths surrounding Appalachia and its people Eller said. Myths, Eller said, are mental images grounded in a small element of fact that gives one a narrow understanding of a much larger picture.

"The Kentucky Highlands — The Kontucky Highlands — The Kontucky Highlands — The Mountains and the Myth" will be presented by Eller tonight at 8 in the Peal Gallery of the Margaret I. King Library.

Four days of lectures, performance and education.

"I fell asleep in the hot sweaty silkiness of the comforter. I was dreaming I was at the wheel of an airplane carrying the bomb to Japan. Hit 'em, I was yelling. Hit 'em with a mountain. Hit 'em with a table. Hit 'em with a chair. Off we go into the wild blue yonder, climbing high into the sky. I dropped one on the brick house where the bad man lived, then took off for Japan. Down we dive, spouting a flame from under. Off with one hell of a roar. We live in flame. Buckle down in flame. For nothing can stop the Army Air Corps. Hit 'em with a table, I was yelling. Hit 'em with a broom. Hit 'em with a bomb. Hit 'em with a chair."

After a drunken nap at a friend's house, I refreshed myself with cold water in preparation for the bash. I ate some Lee's chicken that ironically was supplied by a generous woman named Lee, a friend who lived downstairs from where I was. Lee also made some white rice, which went nicely with the spicy buffalo wings and legs.

There was still mud on the front of whost from the day's nugby games, but it was all right — the shorts were black. And the place I was going didn't really require any clothes at all. Certainly not clean ones, anyway.

Colorado coach envious of Cats

When Colorado coach Bill McCartney talks about the UK football program, you get a feeling that he's a little envious of the powderkeg of success that Bill Curry is sitting on.

It seems a little strange to say that, considering that McCartney is the coach of the national champion Colorado Buffaloes. But envy is an apt description.

pion Colorado Buffaloes. But envy is an apt description.

First, he looks at the E.J. Nutter Center, then turns to $8,000-seat Commonwealth Stadium, then to the practice field where the Wildcasts are practicing, then to the left of Commonwealth to the future site of the indoor practice facility.

Then he forecasts success.

"The ingredients an exertainty here for that," said McCarmey, in Lexington to speak at the UK football coaches clinic last Saturday, "The fact that they fill that big stadium and they re going to enlarge it. The facilities are as good as I've seen, and they're getting better. Everything is in place or soon will be.

For McCartney to say something like that, it has carry a lot of weight. He has been through all of this before.

to carry a lot of weight. He has been through all of this before.

Just eight years ago, McCartney was in the same place — the second season of trying to return a state's football program back to national prominence— that his friend Bill Curry is.

It took until his eighth season to get Colorado, which has never been able to sustain a champion-ship-caliber program, back into the limelight. In 1989, the Buffales won the Big Eight title.

Then, last season, they won the conference title, beat Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl and were proclaimed National Champion by The Associated Press.

"Colorado had some success in the past but were never able to keep it going," he said. "And I think the same thing can be said for Kentucky, a long-time baskethall state.

"There have been some good football teams at Kentucky, but its never been able to keep it going, I think Bill will do that... "There's no reason why this can't be a championship-caliber team in a few years."

this can't be a championsing-cannot ream in a rew years."

After speaking at the coaches clinic, McCartney— a friend of Curry's for about eight years—de-cided to hang around for a couple of hours to watch the Wildcats practice.

He wanted to see what lured his friend to the Bluegrass State.

"There is such an enthusiasm surrounding this program," McCartney said. "It is tremendous. Everybody involved is really excited, especially Bil

Bill.
"... He's just delighted. I think he's thoroughly enamored with this place."
Which is a long way from the way Curry felt and was treated during his three-year tenure at Al-blessing.

"I might call him up to give him an encouraging word and he was so much in control and his heart was so much in the right place, I was the one to get the inspiration," McCartney said. "Here he is, they're winning the Southeast Conference championship, they're ranked in the Top 5 in the nation and people aren't stutisfied.

"It was a real mess down there. ... I'm so happy he's away from all that now."

So are the Wildcat fains.

WLAF is great, could overthrow soccer

The World League of American Football, WLAF or "the laugh league" has turned out to be a tremendous surprise. As long as the public does not expect the quality of football to be on the same level as the NFL, then the WLAF will last and possibly prosper.

It's a lot more like college football than the

It's a lot more was NFL.

The league is full of a bunch of guys who aren't out there for the money. These guys love the game of football, thus tend to enjoy themselves much more than the NFL.

more than the NFL.

They don't over-exaggerate their individual importance. Most of these guys can be replaced.

Many stars and coaches in the NFL tend to, in the mold of Pete Rose, put themselves ahead of the game, which is a shame. It often ruins a great game.

The guys in the WLAF actually look like they're having fun, and they play without their autorney standing on the sideline — just in case the coach tries to make them actually give 100 percent on the football field.

Aren't the "helmet cams" the greatest? You get to see the punishment a quarterback takes during a game, and you get to see basically what he sees—300-pound defensive linemen, blitzing linebackers and tiny receivers flashing into open territory. Wow

Wow.

And the most important thing about the WLAF is it's taking the great sport of real football — not that soccer junk — to other parts of the world.

Invitational ends with IU on top

The two-day Bluegrass Invitational Rugby tournament ended yesterday with one big problem. No one knew which team to call champion. MTSU's case: It dominated UK in a 24-0 win on Saturday. The Cats even had a legitimate right to the prize for beating IU 15-10.

UK's case: The Cats beat top-seeded Indiana in perhaps the most competitive and exciting match of the weekend. After getting beaten by MTSU, they routed undermatched Sewance 49-0.

Under a cloud of disunity, Keller rounded up the team captains to discuss the situation. After about an hour, IU was awarded the title, because it played UK tough and beat the talented, older MTSU team.

UK tough and beat the talented, older MTSU team. It was the Hoosiers' first tournament championship in three years.

The Cats riay have been the best team, but they, made one major mistake. After beating IU 15-10 in the tourney opener on Saturday, they decided to let up on MTSU Saturday, thinking that rest would give them the edge on Sunday. Players like Dave "Oits" Barnes, Jeff Mackey and Ricky French opted not to play, in order to let some other players have a chance to get dirty.

IU was looking to revenge a bad loss to MTSU, which came earlier in the sea-

And it got revenge in a 24-10 win.

I wondered if chaos would break loose at the Continental Inn, where 30 or so UK rugby players, hundreds of miscellaneous UK partiers and 37 kegs of beer were to mix together under the hazy, wild and rowdy spell of alcohol.

I rode with Lee, who seemed a little anxious, herself. She had never been to the famous rugby party either. And she had to work early Sunday — it was Saturday night, about 9 p.m.

We made it to the Continental. There we met some friends and found our way to the ballroom ("Up there," pointed a rather perturbed Continental worker), which was just a huge, square room, high ceilings, providing decent acoustics for the band, The Longfellows.

I walked in to see just an average preparty crowd. Groups of people. A little tension, a lot of glances and looking around, a few smiles and laughs. A little horsing around.

Mother Nature shines bright on UK, but Cats a little dull in scrimmage

Too bad the Cats weren't as bright as the sun. The simplest of tasks, such as the snap from center to quarterback, was a problem.

"We're a careless football team," UK coach Bill Curry hastily said. "We simply do not have center-quarterback exchange misses, but today there were two. And I don't care if they were freshmen, post-graduates or what they are, that should be perfect. Taskling should be better. That's carelessness."

'Tubby' Smith swept up by Tulsa enthusiasm

TULSA, Okla. — Kentucky assistant Orlando "Tubby" Smith was pleased when the University of Tulas made a strong move to name Nolan Richardson as the head basket-ball coach. He was clatted when Richardson and the side down when Richardson turned the job down. Smith, an associate head coach under rick Pitino at Kentucky the past two years, was introduced Thursday as SMITH about five hours after Richardson said he was staving at Arkansas.

about five hours after Richardson said be was tasying at Arkansas.

Smith, 39, replaces J.D. Barnett, fired two weeks ago after six years of languishing in the shadow of Richardson, who had five successful years at Tulsa before he left for Arkansas.

"I felt honored that Tulsa was interested in a Nolan Richardson," Smith said.
"That tells you how committed they are five years' of run-and-gun tunces and son.

Smith played under Barnett at High Point College in North Carolina, and later was an assistant to Barnett for six years at Virginia Commonwealth.

But he was quick to point out Thursday that his teams would be an image of Pitno's teachings, and not Barnett s.

"I have great respect for J.D. Barnett and what's he's accomplished," Smith said. "I've learned a lot of fundamentals, a lot of basketball from him. But I learned a style at Kentucky under Rick to the backetball program. Obviously, I'm flattered I'm in this position that Nolan Richardson was in just hours ago."

Athletic Director Rick Dickson said.
Smith was on the initial list of 'need-to-pursue' candidates. He admitted the list was put on hold when talks with Richardson increased over the past few days. "We were able to move quickly' when Richardson indicated he would stay at Arkansas, Dickson said.

Barnett had been criticized from the start of his tenure in Tulsa because his halfcourt style was a sharp contrast to five years' of run-and-gun under Richardson.

I wanted to learn the pro style of play from Rick Pitino, 'Smith said. "More and more teams are using it. But if you look at the teams in the Final Four, you've got to play a good halfcourt ardson.

In Smith's two years as an associate head coach at Kentucky, the Wildeats were 14-14 and 22-6, ending the regular season ranked No. 9.

"Tubbo: Smith has played an instruseason ranked No. 9.

"Tubby Smith has played an instrumental role in helping our baskethe'l team break the top 10," Pitino said Thursday, "He has all the tools to make him a great head coach. He's bright.
He's innovative.
"The is a super teacher, and he's a tiretess recruiter," Pitino said. "The University of Tulsa got a great man."

Barnett was 106-75 at Tulsa. The Hurricane was 18-12 last year with a senior-laden team and lost to Oklahoma in the first round of the NIT. He was fired because of dwindling fan and financial support, among other things.

and tinancial support, among outer things.
Dickson said the money issues was "blown out of proportion," and said that was only one indication of the "illness of the basketball program."
He said Smith would bring stability to Tulsa basketball.
"Tulby brings some of the personal characteristics and qualities we need," Dickson said. "He is an excellent recruit-er and coach."
Smith said he would meet with Bar-er and coach."

Smith said he would meet with Barnett's assistant coaches before organizing his own staff and focusing on recruiting.

In this new era, when you see this team play, you will say that's a winning cam, whether it shows up in the winning column or the losing column," Smith said.

"This will be a team that exemplifie positive image for Tulsa and the commity."

Reds in 'nasty' frame of mind going into '91

PLANT CITY, Fla. - The Cincinnati Reds were in a nasty frame of mind as they headed north to defend their World Series champion-

The team that complained it got on respect last year is grousing again about the way it's been overlooked in preseason predictions. "We're a Rodney Dangerfield team," said pitcher Norm Charlton, one of the "Nasy Boys."

The Reds think they still have some things to prove to their critics this year. And that could turn out to be the factor that makes sure their World Series rings don't weigh them down in 1991.

"The thing is, people don't recognize us as a great ballclub," shortstop Barry Larkin said. "They say we've got something to prove."

They did just about everything last year, when they led the National League West every day of the season — the first NL team to lead at League West every day of the Grasson—the first NL team to lead from wire to wire in a 162-game season. They beat Pittsburgh in a league championship series that showcased their versatility, then swept the mighty Oakland A's in the Series.

The Reds were underdogs every step of the way, and learned to relish the role. It became their motivation last year: prove the critics wrong. And it's still their motivation as they prepare to open the NL season today at 2 p.m. at Riverfront Stadium against Houston.

"The sorry thing is that people don't give us (credit) as far as what we did," said opening day starter Tom Browning."

Rugby

A short, round inflated hulk, who was making a lot of noise in front of me, suddenly lunged down and took a bite of a thin girl in a very mini lime green miniskirt.

The wetness from the bite left a little dark green mouth print on the lime color. She turned and glared, and he guffawed.

Then another guy began harassing her with more than his hands or his mouth. The girl glared downward, cussed something and got out of their way.

Maybe, and 1 pray for this every night, the rest of the world will join me in realizing that soccer is the most boring, simple sport in the world. The reason soccer is perhaps the most popular sport in the world—outside the U.S.—is that the rest of the world is uncivilized.

Once the folks in Barcelona, Spain, and Frankfurt, Germany, and London, and the rest of the world after that, get a good look at real football, then soccer will become as obsolete as an eight-track tape.

in the lineup makes the Yankees better by 10 or 15 games. Because of Mattingly's injury last season,
Kevin Maas (21 homers) got a Bying and seems teady to the objective of the Yankees let club all-time saves leader Dave Righetti get away. Even with a poor group of starters, led by Tim Leary's nine wins, Righetti was able to save 36 games. This year's tenantive rotation is full of holes.

OUTLOOK: The Yankees should improve, but that's like saying George McGovern might do better if he wins the Democratic presidential nomination again. The Yankees finished 67-95 last season, heir worst record since going 50-102 in 1912.

from "L.A. Law" in the shower?
Don't bother.
Ever try to whistle the opening ditty from "Perfect Strangers" as you're walking down a hallway?
There's no point.
Did you ever attempt to belt out a rousing chorus from the "Full House" them while alone in the car? Of course not.
You never did any of those things because the theme songs weren't worth singing. No catchy melodies, no snazzy lyrics, no foot-stomping, co-tapping ditties that got into your bead and stayed there for years.
The words flow trippingly off the tongue:

"Just sit right back and you'll hear a tale! the tale of a fateful trip ..."
"They're creepy and they're kooky!mysterious and spooky

Some may quibble that it's a prety moot thing to devote a newspaper column to. (And I'll admit it's not exactly global warming.) But it used to be something America did right, even if the shows themselves weren't always great.

The best one today? It's easily "The Simpsons," and not just because of the fabulously funny visual images (Bart's various blackboard messages, Homer dodging Marge's car, Lisa's sar solo, etc.).

Danny Elfman (of the band Oingo Boingo) composed "The Simpsons" theme, just as he composed the great musical scores for "Barman," "Beetlejuice," "Pee Wee's Big Adventure" and other offbeat flans, Elfman is a terrific composer, and his skill gives Homer, Bart & Co. the catchbest theme on the air. It's a song you can whistle — the true test of a TV theme song.

Elfman's skill has impressed

That's the way it was in the past.

Does the name Vic Mizzy ring a bell? He's not a household name, of

The hard work has just started for UK leaders

As school quickly — too quickly for some of us — winds down to a sputtering end, it's at least somewhat comforting to note that all the elections and selections of student leaders for next year — with the exception of student trustee — are behind us.

To those students, particularly in the Student Government Associated the student of the student of ation and Student Activities Board, we want to offer our sincere congratulations.

Only you know the sacrifice and countless hours you have put into your respective organizations.

Too often, we overlook that.

And too often you don't get the thanks most of you deserve

And too often you don't get the thanks most of you deserve.

That being said, as student representatives it is imperative that each of you remember that an election is a beginning, not an end. Simply put, your jobs have just begun.

You have been chosen to represent students, whether they care about what you do or not.

That's a tremendous responsibility. Please don't abuse it. Part of our responsibility as members of the student press is to make sure you don't abuse the responsibility.

As such, we'll be watching and commenting on your performance throughout the year.

Sometimes you won't like what we have to say. That's OK. Some times we're not going to like what you have to say either.

But that's part of the democratic process, the give and take of de-ate that helps us know what you stand for. That ensures better rep-esentation for students.

An election means a time for a fresh start. Now is the time to sta working on the promises made during your elections. Too many of you forgot, or neglected, to do that last year.

Kernel Checklist

A weekly service of the Viewpoint Page is to keep its readers

√A Real Student Leader. Chai Ling. For one brief shining moment in China's dark history under communist rule, it seemed that democracy was going to be victorious — until to-atlairaniams struck back with tanks and bulles. UK students probably never will be confronted with the life-threatening situations Chinese student leader Chai Ling was almost two years ago when she fought for freedom, but one can hope her speech on campus last week will show student leaders what it means to have convictions.

VStacking The Deck, Library Drive. Everyone agrees that the University's library system needs to be improved, but what is disquieting about the campaign to build a new library is the unanimity of agreement on the solution. As the University moves into the 21st century, the complexion of colleges will be different, which should make more people wonder if a big building with lots of books in it will meet higher education's changing needs.

√Sore Losers, SGA Elections. Despite all the talk about unity and forging a new campus unity, there has been more back-biting and rumor-mongering about this spring's student government elections than in recent history. It's good to know that while this year's candidates talked about creating a new student government, their attitudes are more of the same.

√Quasi-Student Leadership, Student Trustee Election.
Nothing can be done to change the Kentucky law that allows only Kentucky residents to be student trustees, but next year's student lobby effort ought to push the General Assembly to allow any full-time UK student to serve on his school's governing body.

Not Even The Facts. Campus Police Records. The UK Police Department recently decided to prohibit the release of any police records, which name sudents, to prevent a possible violation of the 1974 Family Educational records and Privacy Act. Since when did crime become part of a student's educational experience?

Calling All Writers

Got an opinion you want to express to the campus? The Viewpoint Page is now accepting applications for staff columnists for the 1991-92 school year. Staff columnists will write at least two columns, each 500-800 words long, a month and attend monthly staff meetings.

Those interested should submit at least three writing samples, each at least 500 words long. Samples may be on any topic, but at least one should discuss a contemporary event that is of broad interest to a general audience.

Send applications to: "Hey, I Want To Be A Columnist"; Viewpoint Page; Kennucky Kernel; 035 Enoch J. Grehan Journalism Building; UK: Lexington, Ky, 40506-0042.

Deadline for applications is 4 p.m. Monday, April 22. Columnists will be notified by the end of the academic year.

Those who wish their samples returned should include a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Nation plays ball again, celebrates rebirth

n one of his television commentaries last week, sports-caster Cawood Ledford said that with the college basketball season over, Kentuckians can concentrate on what is most important for them in April — horse racing. Horse racing:

For Ledford and the rest of Kentuckies and the convention of the control of ror Leutort and the test of Keir-tucky's elite, nouveau rich and so-cial climbers, watching horses run in circles may be the thing to do this month, but for the rest of us, we know the most important sporting event of the year will take place at 2:05 p.m. at Cincinnati's Riverfront

The Cincinnati Reds and Houston The Cincinnati Reds and Houston Astros will usher in the 1991 base-ball season, signifying to the nation that all is well in America. Want to know the real reason the United States defeated Iraq in such short time? U.S. troops wanted to be home in time for Opening Day. Bring baseball to the Middle East and watch peace break out all over the place as nations learn that the real test of a person's worth is how well he can hit a curve ball or turn a double play.

double play.

More than 140,000 people watched a football game between the London Monarchs and New York/New Jersey Knights at London's Wembley Stadium last York/New Jersey Knights at Lon-don's Wembley Stadium last month. Pure spectacle. More than 50,000 people will be at Riverfront Stadium today to watch a game that will have little bearing on the season's outcome. Today's game, however, is more than nine innings of baseball; it is the people of Cincinnati celebrating a rite of rebirth they have done for more than 116 wers.

C.A. Duane BONIFER

All winter long, we have had to be without the game, suffering through a countless number of football, basketball and hockey games. None of them could take the place of baseball — or video-taped games of the Boston Red Sox against the Detroit Tigers.

Baseball is more than the acting out of a sport; it is the way generations of Americans communicate with one another.

In the words of poet Donald Hall, "Baseball connects American males with each other, not only through bleacher friendships and neighbor loyalties, not only through barroom fights but, most importantly, through generations. When you are small, you may not discuss politics or union dues or profit margins with your father's eigar-smoking friends when you rather has gone out for a six-pack, but you may discuss baseball.

About the season's moment you know as much as he doese both of you may shake your heads over Letty's wildness or the rookie who was called out last Saturday when he tried to steal home with two down by one."

It was 1974, and I went to my first Major League Baseball game My dad, grandfather, uncle, cousin and I went to Cincinnati to see the Future Hall of Famer Bob Gibson was still pitching for St. Louis, and Pete Rose was still playing left field for the Reds.

Three generations of Bonifers rose in the car from Louisville to Cincinnati. It was my the elders' way of officially welcoming my cousin and me into the Bonifer families.

On the way to Cincinnati, Dad and my uncle told us about train trips they took with their dad to see the Reds play the Brooklyn Dodgers at old Crosley Field.

I clung to every word about Duke Snider, Ted Kluszewski, Jackie Robinson and Pee Wee Reese, and when we crossed the Ohio River I thought of myself as a baseball expert. I have lived under the delusion since.

pert. I have lived under the delusion since.

When I arrived at Riverfront Stadium, I was overwhelmed by its beauty, even though it is little more than an outdoor shopping mall with AstroTurf that pales in comparison to the grand old ballparks. I experienced the same feeling Lesley Hazleton had when she saw her first baseball game. Recalling it in The New York Times, she wrote, "That September Sunday in Yankee Stadium, the American language loaded the bases and gave me a grand slam home run. It came alive for me, and with it, American culture. Baseball was suddenly my code to understanding this culture, the key to the continent." St. Louis beat the Reds 6-3 that Sunday afternoon, and the game made me al lifetime Reds fan.

I've seen dozens of games since

I've seen dozens of games since that season, and I have been a loyal follower of the Reds. Through the years of the Big Red Machine, the Little Red Wagon of the 1980s and last year's historic season. Friends who have not been graced with the ability to believe in the game of baseball scoff at me for claiming that baseball is a metaphor of life. But cultures need living examples of excellence and portraits of perfection.

That is why more than 2 million people will watch the Reds play this season, and more than 39 million people nationwide will watch games this summer.

people nationwide will watch games this summer. In W.P. Kinsella's Shoeless Joe, the character J.D. Salinger reminds us why baseball is so vital to the na-tion. "I don't have to tell you that the one constant through all the years has been baseball. America has been erased like a blackboard, only been erased like a blackboard, only to be rebuilt and then erased again. But baseball has marked time with America has rolled by like a proces-sion of steamrollers. .. It is a living part of history, like calico dresses, stone crockery and threshing crews eating at outdoor tables. It continu-ally reminds us of what once was, like an Indian-head penny in a handful of new coins."

People once again are lamenting the death of Broadway, which they are wont to do every decade.

If Broadway is destined to die, let it whither away; the country can do without the theater — as long as it can play ball.

UK should have honored Chinese student

he University had a great and unique privilege last week to see and hear a young student with amazing cou-rage, ideals and historical impor-tance.

lance.

It was amazing that Chai Ling, who less than two years ago was leading hundreds of thousands in the ill-fated student movement for democracy in China, last Wednesday was standing on stage in UK's Oiis A. Singletary Center for the Arts speaking to 1,500 from the UK community.

Arts speaking to 1,500 from the UK community.

Organizers of University Day should be commended for honoring the students who stood up for their beliefs in freedom and democracy but were so brutally repressed. In Chai, UK brought to campus someon of great significance, someone who should make us take a hard look at our role as privileged students in America.

Bringing her here was more significant than the other three prominent speakers here recently (Bernard Shaw, George Plimpton, David Broder) put together.

There were several little things about the whole affair, however, that merit notice.

about the whole affair, however, that merit notice. First, University Day still left something to be desired. After talking with several people regarding University Day, it seems there is some consensus that empha sis on the new library actually unjustly overshadowed Chai.

Julie ESSELMAN

Certainly the library campaign is important, University Day marked the kick-off of the student campaign, and Chai was supposed to represent in part the importance of access to information.

But I think many people went to the event expecting to hear a true keynote address about the student movement, about the Tianamanen Square massacre, about the desire for democracy in China, about ideals of freedom of expression, about the Courage and convictions of the Chinese students.

Instead it seems we got more of a of the Chinese students.

Instead it seems we got more of a big sales pitch from the other speakers for the new library. Chai gave us some idea of what it was like leading the movement, and her mere presence was inspirational. But she deserved more than just being the kick-off speaker for the library campaign.

kick-off speaker for un strang-paign.
Even the Kentucky Kernel seemed to downplay her presence, saying in headlines that University Day merely brought "diversity" to UK and that she "helps campaign with speech." She should have left more of an impression than that.

And we should have honored her in a more appropriate fashion. As one professor suggested to me, the University had a wonderful opportunity to present Chai with some sort of honorary degree or certificate in recognition of her leadership and ideals, both of utmost importance to any institution of higher education.

education.

And, he suggested, the significance of the senior class campaign's dedication to the Chinese students could have been more meaningful by using the initial funds to purchase books on Chinese culture or history.

We can still do something like We can still do something like that to keep alive the memory and importance of the Chinese students' actions. Perhaps a continuing recog-nition such as that at least would of-fer a reminder to us of what we as members of a university can and should do to promote the value of ideas and to affect change in our so-ciety.

ciety.

Also, in conjunction with the library campaign's special recognition of the Chinese students, would it be naive and futile to organize some sort of letter-writing campaign to our U.S. representatives, imploring them to remember the Chinese students and pressure the Chinese government to listen to, not repress, its people? Members of the Chinese Student and Scholar Solidarity Union on campus do that, so why don't the rest of us?

A continuing recognition would offer a reminder of what we do to promote the value of ideas and to affect change.

One other thing: I was a little con-cerned about how Chai was por-trayed as such a frail, young woman who barely made a dent in Bettie Bao Lord's sofa and who, during the demonstrations in China, sud-denly found herself with a mega-phone in hand and "was thrust onto" the international scene. It made her sound so passive, when she obviously is a very forceful per-son who courageously took action and thrust herself into the world's spotlight.

should be any have been "at the right place at the right time," but she certainly rose to the occasion. Now, what can we do to help her and the ideals for which she stands? A new library is symbolic of the important first step of becoming educated and open-minded. But then we have to put high ideals into action.

AS Chai shows, sometimes it's not that easy. But, as she also shows, it's vially important that we try.

AIDS presents economic peril to dentists

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Some dentists may be hesitant to adopt all of the infection-control practices recommended by a federal agency because of their high costs, a Kentucky dentist warned after an AIDS-education meeting.

education meeting.

"Some are slower than others" to adopt the new procedures recommended by the U.S. Centers for Discase Control, said Hugh Skidmore, a Berea dentist. He said the practice could cost dentists between $15,000 and $25,000 a year.

strong and $25,000 a year.

But Skidmore said Friday that dentists eventually will be forced to do so by the government, health insurance companies and the fear of lawsuits.

Skidmore was among almost 1,000 dentists and dental hygienists who attended the Kentucky Dental Association scientific meeting. Skidmore and other dentists said its impractical to use a different drill for every patient, even though that is the ideal method for controllation. Each drill costs S500 to $800, the dentists said, and to have enough for a day's worth of patients would cost more than

"There's a second epidemic out there and that's an epidemic of fear. There's a fear of transfer (of the AIDS virus) within the health-care setting.

Richard L. Miller, acting dean of the U of L dental school ead, dentists said, they sterilize drills in chemicals between pa-tient appointments, and at high tem-peratures overnight.

Mark McGrath, a Louisville denist, said younger dentists learn new infection-control techniques in school so the precautions don't represent a big added expense or change in their practices.

Meanwhile, the group heard comforting news about AIDS.

school, and Douglas D. Damm, a UK dental professor, conducted the Miller called it "a very unfortu-nate, isolated accident."

Damm and Miller told dentists that initial symptoms of HIV infec-tions are lesions and other signs that will be evident in a patient's mouth. As a result, dentists must careful-ly examine the mouths of all their patients, both to make an early diag-nosis and for the dentists' protec-tion.

UK dental professor, conducted the session.

It is the first under a new state law requiring most health-care professionals — except physicians-to attend an AIDS-education program to retain their licenses.

"There's a second epidemic out there," Miller said, "and that's an epidemic of fear. There's a fear of transfer (of the AIDS virus) within the health-care setting."

That fear was fueled by a report last year by the CDC that a Stuart, Fla., dentist had infected three patients with HIV.

The dentist, David Acer, died in September of AIDS-related cancer.

Miller emphasized that the CDC believes — although is not certain— that Acer did not use proper infection-control techniques.

He apparently sometimes washed

Some of the recommendations the 15-member committee devised included ensuring that students have at least one small class or a class with a lab requirement because this provides an opportunity for students to get to know each other better, said George Chang, an associate professor in the department of nutritional sciences and committee member.

Also, Berkeley's administration backed a plan initiated by students that requires all incoming freshmen to take an American culture class encompassing the racial diversity of the United States.

Chang said smaller classes will give faculty members the chance to discover racial diversity themselves.

BOULDER, Colo. — An incentive program to help female students with families and careers get through college is now offered at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

The school, through the Women's Incentive Fund, gives monetary awards to outstanding, non-traditional female students — generally those older than 25 who had families and careers, said Liz Pollauf, the Fund's executive director and UC Boulder senior.

After looking through research data, Pollauf discovered that the population least likely to finish undergraduate studies was nontraditional women.
