UK employees still without liability insurance

By SCOTT WARD
Managing Editor

Despite the efforts of the UK administration, most of the University's faculty and staff are still without operations and evaluations liability insurance.

The former policy, with the CNA Continental Casualty Company, was not renewed when the three-year contract expired last February, and efforts to find a new policy have been fruitless.

Until last February, all of the University's 11,000 faculty and staff members were insured against lawsuits that involved "professional liability," said Bradley Canon, the former chairman of the University Senate Council. He said the type of cases covered involved tenure and promotions decisions and students who were appealing suspension or expulsion.

The policy cost $13,000 per year — about $1 for each person covered — and insured the University for up to $3 million per year with a $10,000

"We could not talk them into insuring everybody . . . They said here's who we'll cover, 'take it or leave it.'"

Bruce Miller,
director of risk management per incident deductible, said Bruce Miller, director of employee benefits and risk management. It covered external legal fees and the settlement in the event the University lost a lawsuit.

UK had been operating under three-year renewable contracts with CNA for nine years, until last summer when CNA, the largest writer of operations and evaluations insurance among colleges and universities across the country, according to Miller, announced that it would not renew the policy.

"We had plenty of advance warning, but it didn't do us any good," Miller said. He said the University has not been able to find the policy at any price.

He said policies that are available exclude coverage against employees suing employees — "one of the isues that we certainly want covered" — and "teachers' professional services."

The only insurance that the University has been able to find is a policy from National Union Fire Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., which covers UK's trustees and officers — 62 people including the president, vice presidents, chancellors, vice chancellors, deans and the directors of the community colleges.

Committees begin long quest

Burch to assume vice chancellorcy

By BRAD COOPER
Assistant News Editor

A search committee will begin reviewing applications for a new vice chancellor for student affairs in about two weeks.

Until the position is filled, Joseph Burch, dean of students, will serve as the acting vice chancellor.

Burch was selected from among three candidates the search committee recommended to Art Gallaher, chancellor of the Lexington campus, said Student Activities Board President Lynne Hunt, a search committee member.

The search committee is trying to find a replacement for Robert G. Zumwinkle, the former student affairs vice chancellor who retired at the end of June.

The committee met twice during the spring.

At both meetings, the eight-person committee discussed candidates for the acting vice chancellor position and made a recommendation to Gallaher, said Larry Crouch, director of the Career Planning and Placement Service and committee chairman.

However, because of scheduling conflicts among the search committee's members, it has not met since June, Crouch said.

Presidential search committee to meet behind closed doors

A four-member panel met behind closed doors yesterday to discuss the criteria and qualifications for the next UK president.

But the Lexington Herald-Leader is appealing a ruling by the Fayette Circuit Court that allows the search committee to meet in private.

Timothy Cone, Herald-Leader attorney, expects a response soon to the newspaper's request to bypass the Court of Appeals and take the matter directly to the state Supreme Court.

Cone said the newspaper has broken from the normal judicial procedure because of the "importance and urgency" of the issue.

"We're trying to get to the Supreme Court as quick as we can," he said.

Fayette Circuit Court ruled Aug. 11 that the presidential search committee was not a public agency, therefore not subject to the state open meetings law.

"We feel that that simply is a subdivision of the law," Cone said.

He contends that as a subdivision of the Board of Trustees, which is considered a public agency, meetings of the search committee and the subcommittee discussing the criteria for determining the president should be open.

"Our position is, of course, it is a public agency," Cone said.

Robert T. McCowan, chairman of the search committee, said the meetings should be closed because of the personal nature of the meetings.

"We think it's appropriate for it to be a closed meeting," McCowan said.

"One agrees that when the meetings turn toward discussion of specific individuals, the meetings are entitled to be closed. However, while the committees are discussing criteria, the meetings should be open.

Owensboro grants 100 acres for college

By FRAN STEWART
Editor-in-Chief

The Board of Trustees yesterday moved to implement legislation passed during this year's General Assembly session providing for the establishment of a community college in Owensboro.

The board voted to accept about 100 acres of land from Owensboro and Daviess County.

The land will be deeded to the state to be used by UK, said Charles T. Wethington, chancellor for the community college system.

Owensboro and Daviess County will bear the cost of the site, which is valued at $795,000, Wethington said.

The board also moved to authorize the employment of an architect and the development of plans and specifications for the construction of the college facilities.

Wethington said he hopes to have the new facilities available by fall semester of 1988.

"I'm very excited about being able to move into Owensboro," he said.

The planned Owensboro construction represents the first establishment of a community college since 1968, Wethington said. "It signifies a new life for the system."

Also concerning the community college system, the board voted to accept a gift of $500,000 from the Community Improvement Foundation Inc. of Madisonville.

The board authorized President Otis A. Singletary to enter into a "memorandum of understanding" with the foundation.

The money will be used to defray the cost of a $2.9 million auditorium building at Madisonville Community College. The building of the facility was approved during the General Assembly session.

Wethington said the gift represents the largest single cash contribution from a community specifically for a community college.

The facility will be used jointly by the community and the college, Wethington said.

A resolution authorizing Singletary to enter into an agreement with the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government was temporarily withdrawn during a finance committee meeting earlier in the day.

Committee members failed to come to terms on an agreement between Lexington and the University, which would provide for the development and operation of a near 90-acre arboretum on the main campus, south of Alumni Drive.

Art Gallaher, chancellor of the Lexington campus, said the arboretum would exhibit primarily Kentucky flora and trees and would serve as a laboratory, research and teaching facility.

"In effect, it's an outdoor laboratory," said Jack Blanton, vice chancellor for administration.

The city offered an initial contribution of $500,000 for the project, which was expected to cost $3 million to $4 million. The park would be open to the general public.

Committee members, however, balked at entering into an agreement with the city that would tie up University land for 99 years, the time period specified in the recommendation.

"I don't know what's going to happen 99 years from now," said Trustee Tracy Farmer.

No-alcohol policy leaves campus dry; problems expected

By JAY BLANTON
News Editor

A "proposal is in the mill" to more strictly enforce alcohol use on the UK campus, said Joseph Burch, acting vice chancellor for student affairs.

Burch said that in the past each campus location, such as the Student Center or Commonwealth Stadium, has dealt individually with the alcohol issue. This proposal, however, would encompass the entire campus.

The proposal basically centers on stricter compliance with already existing laws, Burch said.

First, the law states that no one under the age of 21 is allowed to obtain or consume alcoholic beverages.

In addition, a new law recently passed by the Kentucky General Assembly more specifically defines public intoxication.

According to the law, "a person is guilty of alcohol intoxication when he appears in a public place manifestly under the influence of alcohol to the degree that he may endanger himself or other persons or property, or unreasonably annoy persons in his vicinity."

Burch said this statute directly affects the University in how the term "public place" is interpreted.

"Public place" is defined as a "place to which the public or a substantial group of persons has access." That list of places specifically includes schools.

Also, an opinion issued by the attorney general in 1974 lists universities as a public place.

Now, Burch's proposal will go through many channels before ultimately going before UK President Otis Singletary.

Burch said that while the plan is still in the "proposal stage," the issue should be settled "in the near future."

As a result of the proposal, one rule in existence has been clarified, Burch said. The rule on alcohol concerning residence halls is that students can't openly display or consume alcoholic beverages in the residence halls.

This rule led to last year's interpretation that alcohol must be kept in an opaque cup, Burch, however, said this interpretation of the rule has never been the case.

To make the rule less ambiguous, the words "public display" have been deleted. Now, there is to be no alcohol in the residence halls.

Rosemary Pond, associate dean of residence halls life, said it is "just being realistic" to expect some problems. Pond, however, said the rule will not be enforced in such a way that would lead to a "confrontative situation."

The first time a resident is seen with alcohol, the resident adviser will explain that the resident has already been informed of the rules. The resident will be told to dispose of the beverage.

For a second infraction of the alcohol policy, a resident will be written up and sent to the hall director. The third time, a resident will go before Assistant Dean of Students Bob Clay, who will decide on disciplinary action.

Pond said RAs will not be going into rooms and opening refrigerators to find alcohol. The rule will basically involve the open display of alcohol.

Pond said she knows that both residents and RAs will be uneasy about the rule, but it's "something we're going to have to live with."

From the RAs that have to enforce the alcohol rule there has been mixed response concerning possible problems that could arise.

Ken Walker, an RA at Kirwan III, said he has had to stop a few people and remind them of the rules.

"Most don't like the rule," Walker said. But "once we enforce it, they're pretty much agreeable to it."

Walker said most of the residents he has talked to disagree with the rule. Walker also said most people don't realize the rule is not a new one, but a clarification of the old rule.

Kathy Watkins, an RA at Boyd Hall, said she, too, has had to tell several residents to dispose of alcohol. Watkins, though, said most of the residents she has warned were not trying to defy the rule. Rather, they were not aware of it because they were freshmen.

Watkins said she hasn't received too many complaints about the rule, but she sees a potential for problems.

"I can see where it could be a problem . . . especially with returning students," Watkins said.

Mike Ekman, an RA at Kirwan Tower, said he hasn't had any problems with residents obeying the rule. Ekman said he thought the rule was a good one despite what he views as a few "discrepancies."

Ekman said the alcohol policy "should be a rule that covers the whole campus." But he thinks the fraternity system will not feel the effects of the rule.

Newspaper moves to new office

The Kentucky Kernel is pleased to announce that it has moved into a new office in the basement of the Journalism Building, almost directly below its old office on the first floor of the same building.

Kernel officials were pleased to discover that after a long summer in the cramped quarters of the basement of Miller Hall, the new, relatively spacious offices were completed on time — early enough so as not to interfere with the paper's daily schedule.

Also located in the basement are the Kernel advertising and business offices, in 027 and 026 Journalism Building respectively, as well as a couple of assorted School of Journalism labs.

Journalism offices are still on the third floor of McVey Hall and will remain there until Sept. 8.

Markey cancer center receives major national research grant

By SAILAJA MALEMPATI
Senior Staff Writer

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-6th District, officially announced yesterday the receipt of a National Cancer Institute Core Support Grant awarded to the Lucille Parker Markey Cancer Center.

The cancer center will receive about $900,000 from the Core Grant during the course of three years, Hopkins said at a press conference yesterday.

The money will be used to fund cancer research and will "provide a valuable boost to the already comprehensive and ambitious effort being made here," he said. Though the grant will mainly be used for research, "the money we receive will come back to Kentucky people in an indirect manner," said Gilbert H. Friedell, director of the cancer center.

Basic research in areas such as molecular genetics, tumor immunology, membrane biology and developmental therapeutics is currently being conducted at UK.

The Core Grant will not fund these individual research programs but will "provide access to facilities that individual researchers cannot duplicate themselves," said Mary Sue Coleman, associate director of the cancer center.

A "shared lab" with shared resources will be set up to provide information and several complex analytical techniques for many investigators to use, she added.

According to Friedell, success of the cancer center depends on the integration of many different departments.

"There is already a solid base of laboratory research going on at the center," he said. The grant money will help consolidate the program.

In addition to money, the grant will also give recognition to the center, Friedell said. "It shows that we achieved a specific status, and it will help draw attention to our program."

The recognition will also aid in attracting more qualified scientists to the program, Friedell added.

There are currently 125 researchers involved with the cancer program. A small amount of the grant money will be used for the recruitment of scientists. "We are seeking six to 10 additional people for the core facilities," he said.

He referred to the grant as "seed money" and said it is the first major step in the building process.

The award will "help ensure that this Kentucky program is firmly established in the vanguard of institutions leading the battle against mankind's most dreaded disease," Hopkins added.

"It is a very competitive award," Friedell said. The Markey Cancer Center is now one among only 38 cancer centers around the country that NCI has endorsed for its comprehensive program in patient care and research.

"They're among the very best," Hopkins said.

STEPS program aids students in finding local employment

By KAKIE URCH
Staff Writer

The University has a program designed to help students earn money, beef up a resume and still keep their schedule somewhat manageable.

The UK STEPS (Student and Temporary Employment Placement Service) program places student workers in all manner of temporary jobs by using a computer system at its office at 252 E. Maxwell St.

Students have been placed as clerks in law offices, as auditors, bank tellers, salespeople, engineering assistants, food service workers, outdoor workers, house-sitters and horse farm assistants, said Lillian Downing, manager of the STEPS program.

STEPS, which is part of UK Human Resources Services, places students in jobs in the community and maintains a job pool of temporary workers who work at UK. The office is also responsible for coordinating the campus visits of summer camp employment recruiters.

STEPS has been operating at UK for three years, and in that time has placed about 3,000 students in temporary positions. The average wage of a STEPS job is $4.25 per hour in off-campus positions and $3.93 per hour for on-campus positions.

Bill Felly, a theater graduate student, who obtained three jobs through STEPS during his undergraduate years, said that he found the placement service "real helpful, and the pay was a lot higher than other jobs I'd found on my own."

A student interested in obtaining a temporary position through STEPS should visit the office, fill out an application and have an interview. Information concerning the applicants' interests, skills and schedule are entered into a computer, and then matched with information about employers' needs.

"Our idea is to put that student with that job," Downing said. "We're here to help save some steps and help the student be more selective."

Once an applicant is matched with an employer, either the STEPS office or the student sets up an interview with the employer.

Many chain restaurants, including Rafferty's and The Fifth Quarter, hire through STEPS, Downing said.

The computer employer listing also includes some one-time project work such as house-painting and carpentry.

Downing said most employers are very satisfied with the STEPS employees they hire. "Two things that an employer likes about a student worker is that they are very, very good in attendance and that they are trainable."

Of the 2,000 students who registered with STEPS last year, the office placed 1,059 of them in jobs. Those placed collectively earned more than $1,717,000 from their jobs, as compared to $750,000 earned by the workers placed the previous year.

Downing said that the typical STEPS applicants are students who haven't gotten enough financial aid, or students looking for a job in their field.

"It takes a special person to be able to work and go to school, but they'll definitely have the edge on the job market when they graduate," Downing said.

If you are a special person who needs money or just the edge, you can contact STEPS at 257-3843.

Cats end two-a-day practices with plenty of work still ahead

By JIM WHITE and TODD JONES
Staff Writers

The Kentucky football team ended its two-a-day workouts yesterday with loud cheers and fresh watermelon for all, but according to Coach Jerry Claiborne, the hard work has only begun.

"Overall, it's been a good two-day session, but we have not had that much contact yet," Claiborne said. "We've only had three days in pads and it takes 11-on-11 to see who can play football."

That comes today.

Claiborne's squad will have an opportunity to show some intensity when they suit up for their first intrasquad scrimmage.

Today's scrimmage, the first full-contact workout since spring, should shed some light on the positions still up for grabs, Claiborne said.

One main position still open is the defensive end spot — a spot Claiborne said has been a strong point on past Wildcat squads.

"We don't have anybody who has stepped front and center," he said. "We're working with quite a few people and we will have to wait and see who stands above the rest and gives us some good defensive play."

Even though the Wildcats still have plenty of physical work ahead of them, the players' attitudes are good and their spirits are high.

"The best thing right now is our attitude," said defensive captain Tom Wilkins. "Everyone is coming out here and having a good time and is willing to work hard."

One problem the Wildcat coach did see in the summer workouts, however, was the team's lack of intensity as a whole. "We've had two working sessions and the offense has dominated one and the defense has dominated one," he said. "When you compete, you have to have intensity on both sides."

When one squad would have a strong practice session, the other would not.

Claiborne said that in order for the squads to improve, they must have good workouts on both sides of the line in every practice.

"Both (the offense and defense) have got to get intense at the same time," he said. "We can't have one team intense, the other not."

Gone from last year's 5-6 team are 11 defensive lettermen, six of those regulars, which leaves several gaps needing to be filled.

"We're still pretty rough (right now)," Wilkins said of the gaps. "We're a long way from being a good football team, but I see the effort."

Offensively, the team still has a "few things to polish," said senior quarterback Bill Ransdell. "Everybody will try to improve in their own area. Eleven-on-11 is the best place to let how everyone is doing."

The Wildcats' summer practice season has been reasonably free of serious injuries, said UK trainer Al Green. Other Southeastern Conference teams have not been as fortunate.

"I have talked to some of the other SEC teams practicing right now and they are all kind of injury riddled," Green said. "Compared to them, we are in pretty good shape."

"We have what we call injury cycles. Some years are good, some are bad and so far this has been a good year."

Hamstring pulls have been the main injury this season, and while they are not as serious as other injuries are, numerous players have been sidelined.

Linebacker Don Yarano, offensive linemen Sam Rotella and Conrad Carney have all missed practice because of hamstring pulls. Preseason starting fullback Mark Logan has been hampered with a hamstring pull and was recently placed on the third squad.

Defensive end Carwell Gardner, who missed a day of practice with a bruised shoulder, returned to practice yesterday as did defensive tackle Jerry Reese, who was held out because of blood pressure problems.

Tight end Matt Lucas, who had a pulled hamstring earlier in the summer workouts, is now out again with the flu. He is questionable for today's scrimmage.

Information was also gathered by Contributing Writer C. A. Duane Bonifer.

Injury sidelines Bennett; senior to miss six weeks

Staff reports

Senior forward Winston Bennett severely sprained his left ankle last week during a pickup game at Chickasaw Park in his hometown of Louisville and will be out of action during the Wildcats' preseason conditioning program.

Bennett, the Wildcats' top returning scorer from the 1985-86 season, will be on crutches for two to three weeks, said Brad Davis, UK assistant Sports Information director.

Bennett is expected to be ready for the start of regular season practice, which begins Oct. 15.

The Louisville native had the ankle X-rayed Friday and no break was detected.

Kentucky team physician Dr. Michael Ray estimated that Bennett's full recovery would require at least six weeks.

Bennett said he didn't anticipate any major problems with his normal preseason conditioning.

Brewer, Elder lead pros into classic; Bank One tourney kicks off today

By ANDY DUMSTORF
Sports Editor

When play gets under way for the fourth annual Bank One Senior Golf Classic at the Marriott's Griffin Gate Course today, the pros better have both their putting and driving skills sharpened.

About 60 of the Senior Tour golfers have committed to play, including Gay Brewer, who won the 1984 tourney, and Lee Elder, the 1983 winner. Brewer, who captured the 1967 Masters title, described the Griffin

Gate Course as "a challenge" and "perfect for the Senior Tour."

"This is a good shot-making course, a good driving course," Brewer said.

At a previous tournament, the Lexington native also was quoted on the importance of putting.

"If you can't make putts on this course, you can't win," he noted. Dan Ruffin, the golf professional at Griffin Gate, agrees.

"The greens are well undulated and the speed of the greens will definitely make it a putting tournament," he said. "It is also a shot-making course. You will use most of the clubs you are carrying. There's little room for error."

At 1 p.m. 10 of the Senior Tour's most exciting and talented players will be competing head-to-head in a nine-hole, $9,000-prize purse competition.

Five-time British Open Champion Peter Thomson and 1985 USGA Senior Open Champion Miller Barber head the field of 10.

Cost for today's nine-hole competition is $5.

Oklahoma opens season where it left off: No. 1

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press

Defending national champion Oklahoma and runner-up Michigan will begin the 1986 season where they ended the 1985 — as the 1-2 teams in The Associated Press college football poll.

And if history is any barometer, Oklahoma stands a good chance of being No. 1 when the final poll is taken Jan. 2. The Sooners have been No. 1 six times in the preseason poll, on four of those occasions — 1956, 1974, 1975 and 1985 — they won national championships. Oklahoma received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters in results announced yesterday. That put the Sooners well ahead of Michigan, which had six first-place ballots and 1,016 points.

"I'm not surprised I thought we would be (No. 1), us being the defending national champions," Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said.

Switzer said the preseason No. 1 ranking would not create any added pressure. Oklahoma has been the preseason No. 1 choice four times in Switzer's previous 13 seasons as head coach, winning three national championships under him.

"Everybody gets ready to play us even if we're not No. 1 just because of who we are," he said.

Switzer said the Sooners have looked good in the preseason workouts but the defensive line is a problem area.

"We've got a chance to be a really good offensive team," he said. "Our young people have improved and it looks like the offensive line might be better."

"But on the defensive line we're going to find out how much we miss (All-American nose guard) Tony Casillas. Our ends, linebackers and the secondary are pretty good but we're just an average college football team on the defensive line."

The 1985 Sooners led the nation in total defense and pass defense and finished second in rushing and scoring defense.

Since the AP preseason poll began in 1950, the only teams besides Oklahoma to win the national championships after being ranked No. 1 at the start of the season were Tennessee in 1951, Michigan in 1952 and Alabama in 1978. However, no team has remained No. 1 through an entire season that included a pre-season and/or post-season poll.

Miami of Florida, which was in the title picture last season until a 35-7 Sugar Bowl loss to Tennessee dropped the Hurricanes to ninth, is third in the preseason poll with one first-place vote and 976 points.

UCLA, which finished seventh a year ago, is fourth with three first-place votes and 972 points. The Bruins open the season by visiting Oklahoma on Sept. 6.

Alabama, which opens the season tonight against Ohio State in the Kickoff Classic, is the highest ranked Southeastern Conference school at the fifth spot with 911 points. The Crimson Tide finished 13th in 1985.

Penn State, which ended the 1985 regular season No. 1 and then slipped to third after losing to Oklahoma 23-10 in the Orange Bowl, starts 1986 in sixth place. The Nittany Lions received three first-place votes and 892 points.

Texas A&M, No. 6 last year, is seventh this time with one first-place vote and 871 points. Then comes Nebraska, 11th last year, in eighth place with one first-place vote and 826 points.

The other first-place vote went to Pitt, but the Panthers were not mentioned on any other ballot and the lone vote was not nearly enough to get them into the Top 20.

AP Football Poll

The Top 20 teams in the preseason Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, 1985 record, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and ranking in the final 1985 poll.

Many UK bus routes help ease commuting

By MARY ANNE ELLIOTT
Staff Writer

Lexington Transit Authority's campus bus service shifts into gear for another year of service to students in the campus area.

The campus buses, six in total, run two routes Monday through Friday, said Dave McKay, assistant general manager of LexTran. The routes are divided into two routes, north and south campus.

The north route begins its daily pickups at 6:45 a.m. and makes its last stop at 5:48 p.m. It picks up on Euclid, Rose and Limestone, serving the northern end of campus.

The south route, which starts its daily run at 6:30 a.m. and ends at 5:30 p.m., runs down Rose, Columbia and University Drive. The south route serves the Medical Center.

To facilitate students who park in the Commonwealth Stadium parking lot, both routes have service to the stadium.

Both north and south routes also run to the Greg Page apartments and to Shawneetown apartments.

Last year the buses had to alternate trips between Greg Page and Shawneetown, but because of the completion of the road linking the two, the buses can now make both stops in the same trip, McKay said.

The buses run on regular intervals. The north route normally runs every 15 minutes and the south route usually takes 6 to 8 minutes to complete its run. The time it takes to make a run depends "on traffic," among other things, McKay said.

Traffic jams on Rose Street make the buses late, as do a large number of passengers boarding or leaving a bus.

"It's the nature of bus service" to be a little late, McKay said.

DO YOU HAVE BULIMIA?

Bulimia, binge eating followed by vomiting, laxative abuse or starvation, frequently begins as a seemingly harmless form of weight control which progresses to a compulsion. Bulimia influences the social, emotional and physical health of approximately 15% of college students.

INTENSIVE TREATMENT PROGRAM

If the binge-purge cycle has reached an intensive level, if academic performance and social relationships are suffering, and if available help has failed to produce change, the 4 week Intensive Treatment Program offers rapid interruption of bulimia without hospitalization.

Live in an apartment while receiving 6-8 hours of therapy/day, intensive individual, group and body image therapy.

Offered under the direction of Susan C. Wooley, Ph.D. and O. Wayne Wooley, Ph.D., Directors of the Eating Disorders Clinic, University of Cincinnati Medical College. For application or information on published long term success rates contact Marsha Boquette at 513-872-5118.

Veterinary science department to start typing Thoroughbreds

UK laboratories to participate in horse registration

By BEN GUESS
Staff Writer

Kentucky will soon get a boost to its traditionally prestigious Thoroughbred industry when a UK laboratory becomes one of only two official blood-typing labs in the United States.

According to Dr. Ernest Bailey, UK professor of veterinary science and director of the new laboratory, the veterinary science department has informally tested blood-types of standard-bred horses for the past three years, but analyzing Thoroughbreds will be a first for the department.

However, contractual agreements have been arranged between UK and the U.S. Trotting Association to begin formal testing of the standard-breds, in addition to the Thoroughbred contract.

Permission to analyze the Thoroughbred blood-types comes under a new contract with the Jockey Club of Lexington, which oversees registration of Thoroughbreds throughout the United States. UK will be responsible for blood-typing nearly 10,000 Thoroughbreds and 5,000 standard-breds annually, Bailey said.

Although analysis of the standard-breds has already started, the lab will begin its work with Thoroughbreds in January.

Currently, all official Thoroughbred blood samples must be analyzed at the University of California at Davis.

Bailey said the need for additional Thoroughbred blood-typing facilities was obvious.

"There has been an increase in the number of horses tested. Since there is the need for additional work, we are setting up the laboratory here for it," he said.

Although a number of universities vied for the blood-typing license, the selection of UK was an obvious choice, Bailey said. The laboratory will soon be housed in the new Gluck Equine Research Center.

"Since we had personnel here who were experienced with this, it was a clear choice to locate the blood-typing operation here," he said.

Incidentally, the veterinary science department will have two professional staff members who will have the primary responsibility of blood-typing the horses. Dr. Gus Cochran and Dr. Katherine Trembecki have been given the task of typing the nearly 15,000 blood samples each year.

Bailey said plans are now under way to expand the operation in order to increase the number of annual samples. The lab staff hopes to one-day type about 30,000 horses per year, he said.

According to information provided by the Jockey Club, the club keeps extensive records on Thoroughbreds in the United States "in order to preserve honesty in racing and to maintain the integrity of the breed."

In the future, the Jockey Club plans to require blood-typing of all Thoroughbreds as part of formal registration. Because of the expected increase in blood-typing, the UK facility will provide the much-needed laboratory space to handle the increased workload.

Work continues on new equine center

By BEN GUES
Staff Writer

Construction on UK's new veterinary research facility is currently on schedule and University officials predict not only physical growth in the department but also a greater understanding of the genetic and reproductive disorders that affect horses.

According to Gene Williams, assistant vice chancellor for business, the Maxwell H. Gluck Equine Research Center is targeted for operation by the end of April. Currently work is right on schedule, he said.

The center is located on the southernmost point of campus along Nicholasville Road and adjacent to Commonwealth Stadium.

The four-story building, which consists of 62,000 square feet, is being built at the cost of about $9 million, Williams said.

Money used for both the construction and operation of the center came from funds raised by a separate group, UK's Equine Research Foundation. According to an aide to Bob Babbage, director of the foundation, UK's fund-raising efforts have succeeded in raising more than $18 million.

The foundation is soon expected to make another announcement regarding additional money that has been raised for the center's operation, Babbage's office reported.

The foundation office also hinted that two additional buildings could one day share the existing site of the research center. However, additional physical space is currently not a part of the immediate plans for the equine center.

Roy Leach of the veterinary science department said the completed facility will deal in several aspects of equine research in order to learn more about genetic diseases and reproductive physiology of horses.

In short, the center will aid horse owners and veterinarians in breeding healthier, stronger and faster horses, he said.

However, Leach stressed that the center will deal with equine research only and will not interfere with any existing clinical equine facilities.

"We will not compete with veterinarians. Horse owners will continue to have their individual veterinarians," Leach said. "We will provide knowledge to the veterinarians that they can use."

Leach said the center will deal with nine major areas of equine/veterinary research, including pharmacology, epidemiology, pathology, immunogenetics, reproductive physiology, virology, parasitology and biomechanics.

In addition to the increased research ability, the equine center will also be the new home for UK's veterinary science department, including the recently announced addition of the Horse Blood-Typing Laboratory.

According to Dr. Ernest Bailey, UK professor of veterinary science, the larger physical space could also translate into more faculty members for the department.

"At this point, the department has 14 faculty members and additional positions have been considered," he said. "There are plans to hire additional faculty for the center."

However, he was not sure how many total faculty members and researchers would one day fill the center.

candidates to assume the vice chancellor position is not limited to UK administrators and faculty.

In a memorandum sent to panel members in May, Gallaher said the search should extend nationally, inviting qualified candidates from outside the state to apply.

The search committee acted accordingly by placing an advertisement in the nationally circulated magazine Chronicle of Higher Education. The ad ran twice in May.

Applications were accepted from May 28 through July 31. Crouch would not disclose how many applications the committee has received.

Although Crouch declined comment on the qualities the panel would look for in applicants, the ad said an applicant should have "outstanding interpersonal and communication skills."

The ad also said an applicant should demonstrate "significant administrative and leadership experience" at the university or college level.

Joseph Fink, assistant dean of the College of Pharmacy and panel member, said he hopes the next vice chancellor for student affairs will be able to involve academics in student affairs.

Student affairs is "already aligned with academics, but it could be more," Fink said.

He also said experience dealing with students would be a critical factor in determining a new vice chancellor. However, Fink would not say how much experience the position requires.

Gallaher said search committee members were selected so as to ensure representation from student affairs, the faculty and the student body.

Of the eight committee members, three are students, two are faculty members, one is from Lexington Community College and two are from student affairs. Other search committee members include: Donna Greenwell, SGA president; William Lacy, sociology professor; Craig Sanders, an Arts and Sciences senior; Paul Taylor, director for student affairs at LCC, and Doris Weathers, director of the Recruitment and Learning Center.

"We don't feel that it is a personal matter." Cone said. When the committees begin to discuss individuals, the meetings become "a personal matter at that point."

Albert G. Clay, chairman of the subcommittee, described the case as a "friendly suit" between the University and the newspaper. He said the committee will abide by the law whatever the outcome of the appeal.

Yesterday was only the second meeting of the subcommittee, which in addition to Clay includes Mary Sue Coleman, assistant professor of biochemistry; Wilbur W. Frye, professor of agronomy, and Trustee Ted Lasseter.

The search committee consists of five trustees, four faculty members and a student.

Clay said during a recent interview that he hoped the subcommittee would reach some consensus during yesterday's meeting so the criteria for determining the president could be submitted to the search committee during its Sept. 16 meeting.

Clay said he expected the subcommittee to have to meet again. "I see no problem there."

The search committee gets final approval of the suggested criteria, Clay said. It has the power to accept or reject the subcommittee's recommendations.

McCowan said the search committee is ready to accept applications for the position. He said he hopes to have the position filled by the time President Otis A. Singletary retires June 30, 1987. Singletary has served as UK president for 18 years.

The search committee has advertised in the Chronicle of Higher Education for applications of nominations of potential candidates. The committee has also sent letters to alumni and university presidents asking for recommendations.

McCowan expects to receive numerous applications for the position. He perceives a long process of elimination before the BOT can vote on a new president.

Although a simple majority is enough to determine the president, McCowan hopes the vote would be unanimous.

McCowan said the search committee will use the criteria as a guideline to measure applicants. Although he declined to comment on specifics, "we're obviously looking for a high-caliber person who can guide this University. We've been blessed with good leadership over the past years."

In response to a question concerning whether the search committee would choose a president from outside the state, as in the case of Singletary, McCowan said it wouldn't rule out any possibilities.

"We're not going to limit ourselves to any one area," he said. "It would be nice to have a Kentuckian, but that's not a limited criterion."

In other words, Clay said, "you have to find the right person for the job — man or woman."

Efforts to bring student radio station to campus continuing

By JAY BLANTON
News Editor

The search for a student-run independent radio station reads like a long diary of hope. With that hope has come both the inevitable successes and setbacks.

Now, the reality of a radio station is closer than it has ever been. However, there is still a long way to go.

The idea for a radio station started in a column. Kakkie Urch, a journalism sophomore, wrote the column clamoring for a student-run radio station. She did not, however, even dream that the idea would come as far as it has.

"It was just another column idea. It was obviously something I had an opinion about," Urch said. "Obviously other people share my view."

A group, Radio Free Lexington, was formed. At the end of school last semester RFL had submitted an application to the Federal Communications Commission for a radio consultant. The Student Government Association had allocated $1,800 to the group for the search. The radio consultant found an open frequency for the station — 88.1.

RFL also contacted more than 20 college radio stations comparable in size to UK and gathered a "wealth of information on their operations," Urch said.

From the information gathered, Urch said the group compiled a book about 750 pages in length, which contained general information and FCC documentation. The board also received permission from the administration to place an antenna on Patterson Office Tower for broadcasting purposes.

The members of RFL left at the end of the year and planned to meet during the summer.

In early summer RFL was notified by the FCC that the decision on a station license had been postponed until the spring of 1987. Urch said the postponement occurred because the FCC, for reasons not given, had decided to postpone all decisions on the docket. UK's bid for a station license was included in the FCC decision.

An anonymous donor offered $20,000 on the stipulation that RFL match the funds. RFL also became incorporated as a non-profit organization. A board of directors was formed.

The board currently consists of SGA Senior Vice President Kenny

ROLAND MULLINS/Kentucky Staff

Arlington, chairman; Pamela Bratcher, vice chairman; Urch, secretary-treasurer, and members at large former SGA President John Cain, SGA President Donna Greenwell, Student Activities Board President Lynne Hunt and Mark Vest.

Vice Chancellor for Administration Jack Blanton, John Herbst, director of student activities and Paula Anderson, student publications adviser, also serve on the board.

Urch said the board met several times over the summer. The board also received offices in Miller Hall. It is now imperative for the board to keep students aware of what is happening with the station. Urch said now is a "perfect opportunity for people who have interest" in the station to get involved.

Urch, however, said the problem with getting the station on the air is not lack of support. "The problem is almost strictly monetary." The board is now trying to access matching funds for the $20,000 offered.

Urch said the board has numerous routes it can go in raising the money. One option, Urch said, is to work with the SGA for a student body referendum to raise student fees by $1. If passed, the fee increase would bring the station $17,000 to $20,000 yearly. The money from the increase would go toward station operating costs.

The board is now planning a concert in the fall to raise money. Four local bands will donate their time, Urch said. Admission will be $1, and with the admission patrons will receive an "RFL" button.

The board is also planning to set up a pledge tower display in front of Miller Hall to show students the progress being made, Urch said. The display will be similar to the United Way type of displays used in fundraising.

Urch said that in order to begin operation, the board must raise $80,000 in capital funds. Capital costs include all sound and office equipment and a record library.

Urch, however, realizes that there is still a long way before UK has a student radio station.

"Some people get discouraged when the results aren't instantaneous," Urch said.

Bratcher, a second-year law student, agrees with Urch about needing to keep student support strong. "I think there has been a perception that the radio station effort has stopped," she said.

A lot of work has been done that is not "easy to see," Bratcher said. "I don't think people are really aware of it."

But Bratcher has no doubts about the final outcome. "I think there will definitely be a radio station. It's just a matter of when."

As Urch said, "At the racetrack, when a known trackrat puts money on a horse, it gives other bettors faith in a horse, drops the odds and pretty soon everybody at the track is betting on that same horse."

Insurance

ty $195,000 — about $30,000 per person — and is good for $3 million with a $10,000 plus 3 percent of costs in current deductible. It will expire in February of 1987.

"We could not talk them into insuring everybody," Miller said. "They said here's who we'll cover, take it or leave it."

The lack of liability insurance prompted the Board of Trustees to pass a resolution at its May 6 meeting giving the president emergency powers to act in cases where faculty members declined to do so because they are not insured.

Wilbur Frye, chairman of the Senate Council, said UK President Otis A. Singletary has had to use that power, but declined to elaborate.

There are certain hard decisions that have to be made and someone has to make them," Frye said.

He said the board's action is a means to "continue to operate the University in a fairly normal way until such a time that the liability insurance problem is resolved."

Until that time, Miller said, the University is still committed to providing legal defense to faculty members who want it in the event of a lawsuit.

Currently, UK is still looking for a company that will sell a policy as well as exploring some other options, said Jack Blanton, vice chancellor for administration.

According to a memorandum released by Blanton, "the University is also collaborating with two national groups (the National Association of College and University Business Officers and the University Risk Management and Insurance Association) that are working to establish companies that will sell liability insurance to colleges and universities only."

Also, Blanton will be attending a meeting in Louisville tomorrow with representatives of the state's public colleges and universities to discuss the possibility of establishing a trust fund that will enable them to become self-insured.

Blanton's memo says that in the meantime, "there are some general guidelines (or employees) to keep in mind." They include:

—Knowing and understanding University policies and rules, especially in regard to promotion and tenure issues, student rights and employment practices.

—Following and adhering to the rules and regulations.

—Avoiding statements that will have to be retracted if challenged.

—Making sure of facts. "It is one thing to have an opinion and another to assert that something is factually correct," the memo states. "Do not confuse opinion with fact."

Supercomputer network to aid research

By SEAN ANDERSON
Special Projects Editor

With the aid of modern technology and the National Science Foundation, researchers at UK will further their work on some of the fastest and most advanced computers available.

UK will be the only Kentucky member of the 12-state Southeastern University Research Association network of supercomputers to be established at major state universities.

Membership in SURANet will provide UK with access to sophisticated computers capable of producing large scale simulations and solving calculations quicker than mainframe computers, said Leonard Peters, associate dean for research in the graduate school.

Peters said SURANet will be a regional network attached to the main National Science Foundation network, which links supercomputers from New York to San Diego. While several regional networks connected to the East-West "backbone" are planned, he said SURANet is the first one funded by NSF at an initial cost of about $1 million.

The system will link UK researchers with work going on across the nation in their respective fields. Peters said he expects SURANet to be operating within a year.

In addition, UK will be purchasing its own supercomputer separate from SURANet. Peters said UK researchers have been using supercomputers at other universities for several years and having one at UK will benefit work in various fields such as engineering, chemistry, computer science and graduate work.

Alan MacKellar, chairman of physics and astronomy, said a supercomputer "will be a very useful research tool for physics and astronomy."

"We are dealing with research problems, which are getting more and more complex," MacKellar said. "Computing needs in the basic sciences have exploded rapidly. The scope of problems we now solve (with supercomputers) was unheard of five years ago."

Tate Tsang, assistant professor of chemical engineering, said he has furthered his work with aerosol dispersion in the atmosphere on supercomputers at Purdue University and the University of Illinois.

He said the larger memory and greater speed of supercomputers allow him to perform more advanced research than possible on a mainframe computer.

Peters said UK's supercomputer should be installed sometime next summer although the exact model has yet to be decided upon. He said UK's system will be a "statewide resource" for schools across Kentucky.

THE STUDENT FINANCIAL AID OFFICE HAS MOVED TO THE FUNKHOUSER BUILDING

Faculty club to open its doors this Dec.

By CYNTHIA A. PALORMO
Editorial Editor

When December roles around, UK faculty will receive an extra Christmas present.

That's when the faculty club, located on the corner of Rose Street and Clifton Avenue, is scheduled to open.

Although the $2 million facility should be finished in mid-November, Warren Denny, director of design and construction, said it will not be ready for "useful occupancy" until December.

UK alumnus Hilary J. Boone Jr. donated $1 million for the club. Daniel Reedy, associate dean of academic affairs in the graduate school and professor of Spanish, said the additional $1 million came from gift funds set aside by President Otis A. Singletary.

When the donation was made two years ago, Singletary appointed Reedy chairman of a nine-member faculty committee assessing faculty interest.

After the UK Faculty Club Inc. was organized, Reedy was voted president of the 12-member UKFC. Inc. Board of Directors.

When the full-time faculty was surveyed, "No. 1 on the list was a formal dining room environment where they could get lunch and dinner comparable to any of the finer restaurants in Lexington for basically the same price," Reedy said. "We intend to have that."

The second request was for something to satisfy the "get-in/get-out dining element." This resulted in a bar/pub. Liquor will be available, but Reedy doesn't believe faculty members will abuse the availability of alcohol.

Even though the club is located on University property, alcohol will be allowed because the UKFC, which is renting the building from the University, is a private, non-profit corporation.

The faculty also requested the availability of catered luncheons for special meetings. To do so, a dividable room has been built to accommodate up to 250 people.

In addition, there will be a music room, a room for faculty art, a game room with two billiard tables and bridge and pinhole tables, a two-tiered library and a video room.

Reedy said the video room probably will be used for meetings or catered events. The library has a floor-to-ceiling fireplace as well as a second-story balcony setting off a small conversation room.

There is also a president's room, which will hold 18 to 20 people. Reedy said the UK president will have first priority.

"The faculty also wanted a health club, but there wasn't enough money to have one initially," he said. Even so, room has been set aside because Reedy thinks they will ultimately get the money.

Also requested were some overnight accommodations for University guests, but such facilities were "prohibitively expensive," he said.

All this, for only $12 a month, with no initiation fee.

Membership is open to all full-time faculty — active or retired — on any UK campus; any person in personnel and administration; and any professional non-faculty.

President Singletary has agreed to pay membership dues for three groups related in some way to the University: all retired full-time faculty members; board members of UK foundations and corporations and members of the Board of Trustees during their tenures; and UK

Fellows. These members won't have voting privileges.

"We want to build interaction between the faculty and the people in this commonwealth who support this University," Reedy said.

"We realize that some people are going to be excluded, but you're always going to exclude someone when you have a club."

The potential is for 4,000 members, but Reedy anticipates only about 10 percent of that number initially. "When we did the survey, only 20 to 23 percent of the faculty showed interest in such a club." He expects interest to grow once the faculty see what they have.

A membership drive will probably begin at the end of October.

"Some people will always complain about the faculty club, and some will say the money should have gone elsewhere. But since the money was given for this purpose, President Singletary had two choices: accept it or refuse it," Reedy said. "This place is going to be spectacular. In three years, this will be a part of faculty life at the University of Kentucky."

Casio challenges you to find more power. At any price.

The amazing Casio FX-4000P programmable scientific calculator. In power, it's comparable to the most highly touted calculators on the market today.

It offers you 160 total functions, including 83 scientific functions, such as hexadecimal/decimal/binary/octal conversions, standard deviation and regression analysis.

Making it easier to deal with long computations, its 12 character alpha-numeric display scrolls to 79 characters and its instant formula replay feature lets you review, edit and replay your formula at the touch of a button. It even has an answer key that stores your last computed value.

And to make things still easier, the FX-4000P has a "perfect entry" system, which allows you to enter and display a formula exactly as written.

Plus, it has a non-volatile 550 step program memory with 10 program divisions. This allows 10 different programs to be stored at once.

And it includes up to 94 data memories, which are invaluable for statistical analysis.

Finding all this power at your fingertips is remarkable enough, let alone at half the price of some competitors. If you can put your finger on a scientific calculator that gives you more power at any price, by all means buy it.

Student organizations plan for fall semester

Free-for-All, homecoming highlights of SAB schedule

By SCOTT WARD
Managing Editor

Whatever your tastes, the Student Activities Board should have something to suit them with its fall lineup.

The annual Fall Free-for-All will be held this year on Sept. 21 at Stoll Field. SAB President Lynne Hunt said the event is a day of free concerts and freebies from local merchants who will give away coupons, buttons, visors and other promotional items.

Last year's participants included Hardee's, Domino's and LexTran. Music will be provided by the local rock bands Rebel Without a Cause and Two Small Bodies.

SAB will also be giving away tickets during the event, one of which will be good for a free balloon ride at the end of the day.

The Free-for-All is being cosponsored this year by the SAB, the Student Government Association, the Collegians for Academic Excellence and the Kentucky Kernel.

Sept. 15-19 is SAB Awareness Week, which will "showcase the board and show the diversity of entertainment (SAB) can bring," said SAB Public Relations Director Mindy Martin. She said the event will begin with a Student Center open house.

Martin said the activity is a way to "get everybody involved and let them know what we're doing."

On Parents' Weekend, singer Dionne Warwick will perform in Memorial Coliseum, Hunt said.

The concert is set for Nov. 7, but Hunt said ticket information is not available yet.

Plans are also under way for homecoming, which will be on Oct. 4 this year. Homecoming week will begin on Sept. 30 and will consist of "all our traditional homecoming activities," Hunt said. Those include the fraternity, sorority and residence hall house displays, the homecoming parade, the Wildcat Roar pep rally and, of course, the homecoming queen competition.

The theme of this year's homecoming is "A Tribute to the Stars and Stripes."

The Spotlight Jazz Series will also continue this year and boasts a lineup of "names that new jazz fans recognize as well as old," said Spotlight Jazz Committee Chairwoman Lyn Congleton. The plans for the spring concert haven't been finalized yet, but the fall lineup is set.

This year's series will open with jazz trumpeter Chuck Mangione at 8 p.m. Oct. 5. Windham Hill Records package featuring Liz Story and Montreux will be at 8 p.m. Nov. 21. Both shows will be in Memorial Hall.

Tickets will cost $10 for the Mangione concert and $9 for the Windham Hill performance. Series tickets will cost $27 for students and $32 for the general public.

Further ticket information will be released later.

Student Center among SGA priorities

By JAY BLANTON
News Editor

While the rest of the student body was off on summer vacation, the Student Government Association was at work planning for the upcoming year.

SGA President Donna Greenwell said priorities for this year's senate are numerous. And with a budget approaching $120,000, projects for the senate will be large in both size and number.

At this point, however, "several things (are) tentative until school starts," Greenwell said.

Projects such as the two speakers SGA brings to UK annually must be kept confidential until approved by the entire senate.

As for new projects, Greenwell said she hoped for "more billboards on campus" to publicize events and happenings around the UK community.

Also, Greenwell said she hopes to expand the legal service SGA offers by adding a night service to the program. Currently, the SGA is looking for a lawyer for the service.

Greenwell also said one of the top priorities of SGA is commercialization of the Student Center. The Student Center has been suffering severe financial problems, and last year the center cut services to six days a week.

Commercialization of the Student Center, which entails leasing out space to commercial businesses, has been one of the most talked about remedies for the center's problems.

During the first full week of school, SGA plans to conduct a phone survey of students to ask their opinions about the possibility of commercializing the Student Center, Greenwell said.

Greenwell and Fine Arts Senator John Menkhaus traveled to the University of South Carolina this summer to observe a similar program.

This year SGA will also be helping sponsor the Fall Free-for-All on Sept. 21, Greenwell said. The annual event, held on Stoll Field, will feature three bands. SGA is currently soliciting merchants for the event.

At the Free-for-All, SGA will also set up a booth for voter registration. But Greenwell said that since this year is not an election year, turnout will probably not equal last year's voter response.

A new SGA feature this year is the circulation of a news exchanger. The exchanger will be two pages long and will be circulated four times this year. The exchanger will inform students of SGA news and events.

One SGA project that students can make use of right away is its new parking meters the senate purchased for the Student Center parking lot. Students can come and "get in and out easily," Greenwell said.

SGA is also working closely with the formation of a UK radio station. SGA Senior Vice President Kenny Arrington chairs the station's board of directors.

Even today, there are still a few students who don't have an HP calculator.

Burning the midnight oil may be necessary. Burning the 2:00 or 3:00 or 4:00 AM oil is absurd. Especially when an HP calculator can get the answers you want - in time to get a good night's sleep.

For instance, our HP-15C Professional Scientific Calculator has more built-in advanced math and statistical power than any other calculator. Our HP-41 Advanced Scientific Calculators have even more potential.

That's because there are better than 2500 software packages available for them - more than for any other calculator.

There's even a special plug-in software package (we call it the Advantage Module) that's designed to handle the specific problems an engineering student has to solve in his, or her, course work.

No wonder professionals in engineering and the physical sciences widely regard HP calculators as the best you can get.

So check one out. Then, when your mother calls to ask if you're getting enough sleep, you won't have to lie.

'Stand By Me' not ordinary kiddie fare Change-of-pace outing for author King offers hope to disappointed fans

BY WESLEY MILLER
Assistant Arts Editor

Following nearly a half-dozen disastrous attempts to turn a Stephen King horror story into a successful movie, someone at Columbia Pictures got smart and tried a novel twist. Adapt one of King's non-horror stories and forget about trying to scare the hell out of the audience for a change.

That is what director Rob Reiner ("The Sure Thing") has done with "Stand By Me," and the results are a somberly marvelous.

Based on the autobiographical novella "The Body," which appeared in the King collection Differ- ent seasons, "Stand By Me" traces the emotional maturation of four boys involved in a trek to find the body of a youngster who has been struck by a train.

The story takes place in 1959, and focuses on the relationship between two of the youngsters, Wil Wheaton ("The Buddy System") portrays Gordie Lachance, a shy, creative 12-year-old who has lived his entire life under the shadow of his recently killed older brother (John Cusack). His best friend is Chris Chambers ("River Phoenix"), a kid shunned by everyone due to his trouble-making family's reputation.

The two share a very special friendship. Gordie recognizes that Chris is smarter than most people give him credit for, often having to remind his uncertain friend of this. Chris, on the other hand, soothes Gordie's doubts about his crumbling relationship with his parents.

Director Reiner has brought out the best in these two fine young actors. Wheaton and Phoenix seem to have known each other for years, and their scenes together are acted very tenderly and naturally.

Corey Feldman ("Goonies") and Jerry O'Connell star as the other two members of the gang. Richard Dreyfuss, ("Down and Out in Beverly Hills") has a cameo as 40-year-old Gordie Lachance, now a successful author writing a reminiscent piece about his childhood.

Perhaps "Stand By Me" is a sign that a Stephen King work can be transferred successfully to celluloid without depending on cheap thrills. Even if this is the case, the movie audience will still have to wait to see if this tender drama is just a fluke, because we still have Steven Spielberg's "The Talsman" and Tobe Hooper's "Pet Sematary" coming on the horizon.

River Phoenix (left) and Wil Wheaton share a special friendship that reaffirms belief in their own potential in "Stand By Me."

"Stand By Me" is rated R for language and excessive vomiting, and is being shown exclusively this week at the Fayette Mall Cinemas.

Broadway 'Live' opens 1986-87 season

Distinguished stage performers highlight award-winning productions

By WESLEY MILLER
Assistant Arts Editor

Ben Vereen, Anthony Newley and Imogene Coca will headline the upcoming 1986-87 season of Broadway "Live" at the Opera House.

The Broadway "Live" series will feature three musicals in which stars from the original Broadway productions recreate their Broadway roles. Also, two other Tony Award-winning productions will be presented.

Formerly known as Broadway Nights at the Opera House, the Broadway "Live" series has undergone some changes in this, its 11th season.

"We've taken a new name because we felt that it better communicates what we are trying to do," Holmes said. "We are striving to bring the best national and international touring shows to Lexington."

The five-attraction series begins Oct. 7-9 with the musical "Pippin," which earned the talented Vereen a Tony Award.

The story is set in the eighth century and chronicles the adventures of Pippin (Sam Scalamoni), the son of Charlemagne, in his search for meaning and fulfillment in his young life.

The musical comedy "On the Twentieth Century" will begin a three-day run at the Opera House on Nov. 13. Set on a luxury train, the production stars Coca as a batty reporter, Frank Gorshin (the "Batman" TV series) as a cunning producer, and Judy Kaye as a glamorous motion picture star.

Veteran British performer Newley directs and stars in the musical "Stop the World - I Want to Get Off!" Dec. 11-13. Newley traces the seven stages of the life (based on Jacques' soliloquy in Shakespeare's "As You Like It") of Littlechop, a British everyman who blunders his way up the ladder of success.

The production features some of Newley's classic tunes, "What Kind of Fool Am I?" and "Gonna Build a Mountain."

One of the most popular Broadway musicals of all times will come to the Opera House March 12-14.

"Dreamgirls" tells the story of three young girls from Chicago who dream of singing and dancing their way to fame. "Dreamgirls" won six Tonys and two Grammys in 1981.

The 1986-87 Broadway "Live" series concludes May 14-16 with the Neil Simon comedy production "Blues."

This production, which was the Tony Award winner for Best Play of 1985, follows the exploits of private Eugene Morris Jerome in his first days of the Army.

Individual tickets for the musical "Pippin" will be available on Sept. 22 at the following prices: $44.50 and $40 for evening performances; $24.50 and $20 for matinee performances.

Grand pageantry

R.E.M.'s latest effort flourishing insight mixed with nostalgic anthems

By ERIK REECE
Arts Editor

Lifes Rich Pageant R.E.M./R.S. Records

After a brief detour to conjure up murky tales of regionalism on Fables of the Reconstruction, R.E.M. is continuing its grass roots pilgrimage, cutting to the emotional and political core of a nation and its people.

Lifes Rich Pageant is a flourishing spectacle, 12 songs that address the archaic problems faced by a society while offering naive solutions through mystical anthems of hope. This is nihilistic optimism at its best.

And like all albums that can also be seen as catalysts of movements in music, Pageant offers a depressive overview of the times beside vague visions of the future.

Make no mistake. This is no call to arms...because today's listening public is no longer spurred to violence or rebellion as it was with the release of the Sex Pistols' Never Mind the Bollocks... — but instead seems to be spurred to, if anything, apathy — R.E.M.'s latest album may not be seen as the momentous effort that it assuredly is.

Pageant opens (on the Dinner Side) with "Begin the Begin," a condemnation of old ideas ("Life's rich demand creates supply and demand for the powers, the only vote that matters.") and continues on with "These Days," an assurance of renewed optimism ("We are young despite the years we are concerned we are hope despite the times").

Pageant is virtually empty of personal concerns. Political and topical matters are instead given priority. "Fall on Me," the album's first single that might be construed as blatantly sexual, instead approaches nuclear possibilities on the most primal level of understanding. "Buy the sky and sell the sky and tell the sky and tell the sky. Fall on me."

As is the case with most of this band's songs, the ineffable verses of public is no longer spurred to violence or rebellion as it was with the release of the Sex Pistols' Never

"Cuyahoga" is perhaps the most poignant song on the album, though its lyrics get characteristically tangled in Stipe's delivery.

If Pageant stumbles at all, it does so on "The Flowers of Guatemala," the first cut on the Super Side. Stipe's crooning that "Flowers cover everything" seems too trite even in the context of an album where doric style is its greatest device.

"I Believe" is a straightforward anthem on the scale of "Anarchy in the U.K." (though certainly more intricate both lyrically and instrumentally) that offers such powerful couplets as "I believe my spirit's wearing thin/And change is what I believe in," delivered with a snarl that only emphasizes its importance.

Pageant ends as mystically as it begins, with the dangling images and historic ramblings of "Swan Swan Hummingbird."

"Johnny Reb, what's the price of heroes?" asks Stipe as he connects the past and the present with a hope for miraculous intervention in the future: The whiskey is water/The water is wine."

Peter Buck blossoms as a full-fledged folk-meets-blues guitarist reminiscent of The Band's sound, while Mike Mills makes a stunning singing debut with a cover to the 60s tune, "Superman."

Perhaps the most astounding thing about R.E.M. as a maturing band is that the sound continues to become more complex and layered without losing the raw power of the albums that first catapulted the group into the critics' open arms.

This is a band whose radio acceptance is long overdue and whose latest album is one of the best the year has seen.

Solid lyrics of 'Boomtown' aid return to ill-fated rock 'n' roll

By ERIK REECE
Arts Editor

Boomtown David & David/A&M Records

Combine the lyrical tendencies of Lou Reed with the delivery of Daryl Hall and you will begin to get an idea of what these two musicians are about.

This is the stuff that "gutbucket" rock 'n' roll is made of. It would do Dylan proud, at least in spots. Boomtown could easily be subtitled "More Songs for the Ill-Fated." Word for word, these guys can hang with the most recognized of our downward visionaries.

Boomtown has a very distinctive packaging - resemblance to Springsteen's Darkness on the Edge of Town. The album cover has a very low-budget, leather jacket appeal.

Inside is a lyric sheet with a homemade look - typewritten songs without corrections and displaced photos of the Davids.

"Heroes" lists what can be seen as the album's cast of seedy characters - "the punks and the drunks and the bad guitar players and the dew-eyed teen-age dragon slayers."

ers." From here we get quick character sketches of these individuals who cannot escape their past mistakes.

"Welcome to the Boomtown," the album's single, introduces Handsome Kevin who "got a little off track/Took a year off of college/And he never went back/Now he smokes much too much/He's got a permanent back/Deals dope out of Denny's/Keeps a table in the back."

This portrait is followed by a cut-throat chorus: "Welcome to the Boomtown/Pick a habit/We got plenty to go around."

REVIEW

"Swallowed By The Cracks" is a first-person narrative of a dancer who becomes "Swallowed by the cracks/Fallen so far down/Like the rest of those clowns begging busfare back/Swallowed by the cracks our pride worn down/Talking times gone by like everyone else."

Here, David and David seem very close to their characters and concerned with their situations. The delivery is convincing and brazen.

Unfortunately, lyrics don't remain this strong throughout the album and the guitars become stifled, restricted to the occasional solo long after the chorus has been beaten down by burdensome drums and keyboards.

This is a shame, too, because these two are no strangers to the six-string. In a genre where there is no real influence from other styles of music, there simply isn't enough focused instrumentation.

History robot helps promote Courier-Journal sales

By EVA J. WINKLE
Staff Writer

In December of 1967, the No. 1 song was "Up, Up and Away" by Jimmy Webb, a Ford automobile cost $2,724 and a loaf of bread was 22 cents.

Lyndon Johnson was president, Hubert Humphrey was vice president, and the St. Louis Cardinals won the World Series.

X-TRA: The Courier-Journal robot, was on the Student Center patio yesterday giving out "News Notes," a sheet containing information about world affairs on the day a person was born.

The robot had data available from any date between 1899 to July, 1986. It gave the headlines that appeared on or around the date requested, the consumer price index, a commodities index, arts news, sports news and listed the president and vice president of the United States.

The sheet was $1, or free with a subscription to the newspaper.

The robot is a new feature of The Courier-Journal. After appearing in the lobby of The Courier-Journal for about three months, it went to the State Fair last week.

Curtis Young, director of circulation for The Courier-Journal, said the robot was a good way to promote the newspaper.

"A lot of people don't even know the days they were born on, or the things happening worldwide," he said.

Bill Miller, state sales coordinator, said he was hoping the robot would attract attention to The Courier-Journal booth on the patio.

"It's fun for people to see what happened on their birthdays," he said.

Mary Faulkner and her son, Eli, said they thought the robot was cute.

"It's kind of interesting to think of how much time has gone by," Mary said.

The Courier-Journal expects to get around 900 subscriptions before closing the booth next week, said Jim Mason, the Lexington district manager. He said although the Lexington Herald-Leader, as the local paper, takes precedence in Lexington, many people from across the state still subscribe to The Courier-Journal.

"They've grown up with it in their families," he said. "They feel like they've got somebody from home with them."

The Herald-Leader had a booth set up directly across from The Courier-Journal's. Wendy Huffines, a saleswoman at the booth, said she thought the Herald-Leader "basically sells itself."

Representatives in the booth were giving out free papers and offered a 30 percent discount on subscriptions.

Although yesterday was the only day to see the robot on campus, The Courier-Journal booth will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. until Friday of next week.

Campus asbestos removal continues in medical buildings, Chem-Phys

By BOBBI WOLOCH
Staff Writer

The asbestos found in two campus buildings last spring is not dangerous, but the Kentucky General Assembly's Capital Construction Oversight Committee approved a request for its removal Aug. 19, said Jack Blanton, vice chancellor for administration.

"The asbestos was discovered late last spring in the Dental-Medical and the Chemistry-Physics buildings while we were conducting fire safety projects," Blanton said.

"It must be removed before we can proceed with those projects," he said.

Although the asbestos is not currently hazardous, it will be removed to prevent a "friable" condition from possibly developing. Friable refers to a situation when the material crumbles and becomes powdery, allowing inhalation of the particles, said Bernard Vonderheide, director of UK Information Services.

"None of the asbestos that's in there now is in a dangerous state," Vonderheide said.

Handling the material during renovation may cause it to become friable, Vonderheide said, "and that's the only time that it's dangerous."

The asbestos "is not in any friable state. We've had air checks," said Blanton, who submitted a letter to the committee requesting removal of the potentially hazardous material.

"If it were friable, it would have been removed immediately, in an emergency procedure," Vonderheide said, such as was done in November 1984, when friable asbestos was discovered in the Funkhouser Biological Sciences Building.

Officials said the asbestos removal should not interfere with the buildings' normal operations and classes will continue to be held at both locations.

"Normally, it's done during a break period, such as Christmas or spring break, so as not to disrupt any normal activity," Vonderheide said.

The removal process "will be a massive job, and it must be carefully scheduled to ensure minimal interference of the operation of the buildings," Blanton said.

The University has not yet hired a company for the removal, Vonderheide said. The contract will be awarded to the most qualified bidder, submitting the lowest bid.

The total cost for removal from both buildings will be about $1 million, Blanton said.

Sept. 10 deadline for fee payments

By MARY ANNE ELLIOTT
Staff writer

If you don't have the time or money to pay tuition now, you have until Sept. 10 to do so.

Ben Crutcher, director of student billings, said the lines were long Monday with people waiting to pay tuition and housing fees, but that the office was only "moderately busy" yesterday.

Crutcher estimated a waiting time of about 15 minutes. He said the rush should slack off tomorrow, but that the lines will pick up again Sept. 8-10, the last three days to pay.

Normally, no exceptions will be made to the deadline. But because a number of students are experiencing delays with their financial aid this year, Crutcher said exceptions will be made in such cases and those students will be granted extensions.

The student billings office is working with the financial aid office to accommodate those students.

Crutcher said the financial aid office is awarding as much aid as possible as soon as possible, but invariably delays occur.

Students who are waiting on financial aid need not worry about having their classes canceled because they are late with their tuition, as long as they make arrangements with the financial aid office to get an extension.

Crutcher said a drop box was available in front of the student billings office for those who do not want to wait, or for those who cannot come to the office during business hours.

For those who decide to drop their payment off in the box, Crutcher said the students need to make out a check or money order to the University, with their name and social security number on it.

The office plans to be open on Saturday, Sept. 6, to facilitate anyone who can't come to the office for regular business hours during the week.

The student billings office is located in 257 Student Center and is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Learning series to offer word skills assistance

Staff Writer

admitting someone younger," Byars added, "unless the class got too big."

Adult students and UK staff will be able to improve their grammar and vocabulary skills this fall during two non-credit classes offered by the Academic Support Services.

An English grammar review and a class on vocabulary acquisition "are short courses which will be offered in a non-threatening way to adult students who need to brush up on those subjects," said Susan Byars, director of Academic Support Services.

The classes are especially designed for the older student, who may feel embarrassed or intimidated in a classroom of younger students, Byars said.

"This is the group that feels rustier because they have been out of school longer," she said.

But "I wouldn't have any problem

An English grammar review will be offered at noon Tuesdays, from Sept. 9 to Oct. 21 in 211 Chemistry-Physics Building.

The grammar course is beneficial to "secretaries, staff assistants and all those who feel a special need for grammatical clarity," Byars said.

The vocabulary acquisition class will be held at noon Tuesdays, from Oct. 28 to Dec. 9 in 211 Chemistry-Physics.

The vocabulary course, dealing in part with the word usage in politics, advertising and science and special problems such as sexist and racist language, should benefit most anyone, Byars said.

A $25 fee will be charged for each class. For more information, call Byars at 257-3383.

Campus, policy and personnel changes begin fall semester

Well, it just had to happen.

What with the Earth rotating around the sun and the sun spinning around the galaxy and the entire universe moving away from itself and all, it just had to happen.

Seasons come and seasons go. You just can't avoid it. And so the summer came. And so the summer went. And you're back.

Welcome.

That is to say, the Kentucky Kernel — your Kentucky Kernel — would like to wish you a hardy and heartfelt welcome back to the University of Kentucky.

Now, we'd like to welcome you back with music and entertainment like the Student Activities Board does.

But we can't.

Nor is it within our meager powers to offer you the thrills and chills of add-drop like the registrar's office can.

But, for what it's worth, we can offer you a little inside information.

There's a new — or at least revised — alcohol policy. It contains a lot of fancy wording and new definitions of some old phrases, but it looks like it's boiling down to one simple message: NO BOOZE IN THE DORMS.

In all fairness, the greek system and zealous tailgaters will be affected also, but the bottom line still seems to lie somewhere between the Haggin Hall courtyard and the roof of Keeneland Hall.

Without question, the new policy will raise some eyebrows, and don't be surprised if some voices of protest go up with them.

On the administrative front, the search is on for two key big-wigs. UK President Otis A. Singletary will be leaving his position in June of 1987, and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Robert G. Zumwinkle retired last June. Search committees have been established to find replacements for both of them, and you'll find the committees' findings in this very newspaper as soon as we find out what's going on.

Then there's liability insurance. As it stands right now, all but about 60 of UK's faculty members are without it. Administrators who are involved in getting new insurance — which, by all appearances, seems unavailable — say the lack of insurance shouldn't really affect the day-to-day operations of the University, but it may be something faculty and students want to stay aware of.

And finally, there's the Kentucky Kernel, which has a new office and a new look. You can see the new look at the top of the front page of today's edition. And if you want to see the new office, stop by any time. We're now located in the basement of the Journalism Building, on the heart of central campus.

Our room number is 035.

Welcome back.

Letters policy

Readers are encouraged to submit letters and opinions to the Kentucky Kernel.

Persons submitting material should address their comments to the editorial editor at the Kernel, 035 Journalism Building, Lexington, Ky. 40506.

All material must be typewritten and double-spaced.

To be considered for publication, letters should be 350 words or less, while guest opinions should be 450 words or less.

Frequent writers may be limited so that we may publish as many letters as possible from as many writers as possible.

Writers must include their names, addresses, telephone numbers and major classifications or connections with UK on all submitted material.

If letters and opinions have been sent by mail, telephone numbers must be included so that verification of the writer may be obtained. No material will be published without verification.

The author's name will appear on all material published unless a clear and present danger exists to the writer.

Editors reserve the right to edit letters for clarity, style and space considerations as well as the elimination of libelous material.

Editor extends invitation to get involved

Fran STEWART

Attention all would-be writers, artists and photographers, consider this column a call to action.

And for all you potential readers, consider it an invitation.

We at the Kentucky Kernel want your help in making this a successful year.

The Kentucky Kernel is an independent student publication run by students for students. To some that may sound clichéd and trite, but that's why we're here.

We have been independent of the University since 1971, and we're proud of that.

But regardless of our independence and our noble purpose, none of this would be necessary or even possible without you.

The Kernel is open to all students at the University. We aren't just a bunch of journalism majors interested in bettering our chances when we do finally leave the University and the Kernel with a diploma in one hand and a portfolio in the other.

The Kernel transcends the lines of academic disciplines. English, business and political science are a few of the departments represented here. We even have an engineer or two.

I just thought you'd like to know. Maybe you'd also like to know how accessible the Kernel is. Do you have a desire to write? We can help.

Do you have a desire to take photos or do artwork? We can help there, also.

Do you want fellowship in an atmosphere combining work and pleasure while providing a sure-fire way of learning about the University as well as the newspaper business? Well, we've got that covered, too.

Recently, I had reason to look through the student registration files in the journalism office and I was amazed. Of the hundreds of journalism majors at this University, only a handful are Kernel staffers, or even Kernel contributors.

If you're planning on landing a job in the real world of journalism, editors are going to want to see more than a transcript. The stories you do here may lead to a job a couple of years down the line.

Also, the Kernel offers the only opportunity on campus to experience firsthand what it's really like to work on a daily newspaper. You're not going to learn that in a classroom.

Plus, we can offer you that feeling universal to all newsrooms — that rush of adrenaline as you realize you have to write a 10-inch story about a two-hour speech and deadline was five minutes ago.

Where else — on campus at least — can you get paid, albeit a nominal amount, for listening to music, watching movies and attending ball games?

And you just can't beat the fellowship.

All we ask is that you give us a chance. If you don't like to write, draw or take pictures or if you don't feel that any of those are exactly your forte, then at least pick up the Kernel at one of the many distribution points across campus and read it. It's free, so what have you got to lose? Who knows, you might even like what you see.

Read us, then let us know what you think. We want your input.

If we make a mistake, tell us. If you are particularly pleased with something we do, let us know. If you have any ideas about possible story topics, stop in at our new offices in the basement of the Journalism Building or just give us a call.

And, for those interested, there'll be a new writers' meeting at 4 p.m. today in the Kernel office. Maybe I'll see you there.

Editor-in-Chief Fran Stewart is a Journalism and English senior and a Kernel columnist.

Officials overreact to alcohol on campus

Erik REECE

I turned on my TV Saturday morning to the matinee theater and was just in time to see Batman and Robin scaling a wall next to a seaside pub.

Robin looked down into the pub from high atop his respected wall and announced something to the effect of, "Gosh, Batman, I think I'd rather be dead than have my senses blurred by alcohol." My immediate response was, "Lighten up, Robin."

I offer the same advice to Dean Joseph Burch, acting vice chancellor for student affairs, who has recently proposed a new campus alcohol policy.

Burch's proposal stems from a new statute passed by the Kentucky General Assembly that puts greater importance on the unlawful act of drinking in a public place. Public place is defined as "a place to which the public or a substantial group of persons has access and includes . . .

unwritten drinking laws" that dormitories abided by last year will no longer be upheld.

No longer will students be allowed to drink in the halls, in the lobbies and in the courtyards of dorms as long as the alcohol is in an opaque container.

And where previously the under-21 law was never addressed, it will be addressed — addressed and enforced.

Legally, UK is perfectly in the right. However, the situation is not that black and white.

If students aren't allowed to drink socially at UK, they will flee the campus in favor of drinking spots where such restrictions are not so vigorously enforced and where students are not in walking distance of their dorms and apartments. The repercussions are obvious.

It's a simple matter of the lesser of two evils. Students will drink. Students under age will drink.

For this reason, UK has a certain responsibility — not a responsibility to offer its students easy access to alcoholic consumption, but a responsibility to keep its students from greater harm incurred away from campus.

In this situation, the state school should act as and learn from a private school such as Centre College, an institution that condones campus drinking although it is located in a dry county.

Students, it goes without saying, would be hard pressed to offer a convincing argument for campus drinking — for drinking period.

Yet that doesn't alter the fact that it will continue, and if it is forced off campus, the situation could only go from bad to worse.

Could this nightmare become a reality?

Thomas J. SULLIVAN

Traveling through the scenic terrain of Ohio can have serious effects on the subconscious. I fell victim to this madness in the form of a nightmare.

It was 4:39 a.m. and I was exhausted. The white lines on the highway had started to dance to the music I was playing on the stereo. I needed rest, and everybody knows the best place to get rest is in one of Ohio's famous rest areas. After choosing an appropriate space for my car, I drifted deeply into a much-needed sleep and an unneeded dream.

Suddenly I found myself standing in line outside my dorm. Luggage in hand, I slowly made my way toward the armed guard at the door.

"Wait a minute, son," he said, "I need to inspect your belongings." He politely took my bags and began his search.

The first thing he removed was a six-pack of beer. "You can't have this, son," he scolded. "You could get drunk and hurt yourself and UK would be legally responsible."

I argued that it was my room, I paid for it, and I should be allowed to do there what I could in my own home. He screamed at me. "We had a kid die from drinking in this state, son."

I was then informed that it was now illegal to have alcohol on state property regardless of age.

He then grabbed my copy of the Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition. It was tossed in the confiscation box next to the beer. The pictures are now considered pornography. He

He took my girlfriend's picture saying that it would distract me. They had five guys flunk out of high school last year because they stared at their girlfriend's picture too much. I promised I would use good discretion. I promised to budget the moments spent gazing into her photographic likeness, but he tossed Cathy into the box anyway. If I flunked out of college, UK would be legally responsible.

Being in Kentucky, I thought that at least the cigarettes would be spared. I was wrong. Quite a few people, apparently, have died from cancer linked directly to cigarette smoking. Tobacco products of any kind are now illegal on state property. If I died of lung cancer, UK would be legally responsible.

When he was through, I took what was left, my clothes and Bible, and started into the building. As I walked away, he marked my name on the box and loaded it in a truck marked "Pat Robertson Election Committee." Waving goodbye he shouted: "Welcome to the Bible Belt, son. Have a good year."

I could still hear him laughing as I approached my door, 1313, when suddenly I began falling. It was then that I woke up.

The sun had risen and the rest area was full of cars. Two little kids were staring in at me; apparently I had been screaming. After I inspected my composure, I regained my belongings.

I still had all my stuff. Records, magazines and my girlfriend's picture were still in my possession. Thank God it was only a dream.

It was, wasn't it? I mean, there's no chance that we would actually let the public officials we put in power do these things, would we?

Rupp ticket outlet in Student Center
By LISA CROUCHER Contributing Writer
This year UK students can enjoy the convenience of buying Rupp Arena concert tickets here on campus. "This is a good service for the students," said John Herbst, director of student activities. "We realize that transportation (to other outlets) has been a problem for students - especially in the winter."
For the first time, students can avoid the off-campus haul to Disc Jockey Records or Rupp Arena by simply going to the Student Center Ticket Office to purchase their tickets. "We know that students are a big part of our audience," said Jeff Bojanowski, concert chairman at the box office before a big-name concert. UK will benefit by receiving a 25-cent dividend from each ticket sold. Most of that money goes to pay handing fees, Bojanowski said.
Last year, UK hired its first full-time ticket manager, Debbie Harmon, who supervises the ticket office. "We're having pretty good success with it so far," she said.
More than 200 students lined up at the Student Center yesterday to buy tickets for the Bob Seger concert on Sept. 17. Steve Wonder will also be playing at Rupp Arena on Sept. 13. Tickets for the Seger and Wonder concerts are still available at the Rupp Arena outlet located in the Student Center.
