Funeral for UK student Ted Presley tomorrow

Staff, wire reports

Visitation services for Wildcat cornerback Ted Presley, who died Friday, are scheduled to begin at 11 this morning at Gamble Funeral Home in Hopkinsville, Ky.

The 22-year-old electrical engineering senior died at 11 a.m. Friday when doctors at UK Hospital disconnected life-support systems.

Presley was taken to the hospital early Thursday after police say he fired a bullet into his right temple while playing a game of Russian roulette with roommate and lifelong friend Jason Smith.

Earlier reports indicated that Presley and Smith may have been drinking, but a Lexington-Fayette County coroner's report said no drugs or alcohol were found in Presley's bloodstream.

Presley's former teammates and coaches spoke highly of him Friday athlete from Christian County High School, attended Hopkinsville Community College for two years before walking on at UK two years ago. He never appeared in a game.

Although he played on the scout team in 1991, Presley sat out last season because he didn't yet have enough credit hours at UK.

He returned to the team this spring and was listed as fourth string on the depth chart.

UK athletics director C.M. Newton called Presley "an outstanding young man who was making fine contributions to the University, both as a student and as an athlete."

"He will be greatly missed by us all," Newton said. "This is a tragic loss, not only to those who knew Ted personally, but to the entire University community as well."

UK President Charles Wething-ton said Presley was "truly a fine student who was universally well

Man arrested after holding ex-girlfriend as hostage

By Dale Greer Executive Editor

An unemployed Lexington man walked into a campus building Fri-day and took his ex-girlfriend hostage at gunpoint police say.
Kevin Michael Gibson, 32, of 1711 Arcadia Park, faces charges of first-degree burglary, first-degree wanton endangerment, unlawful imprisonment and disorderly conduct in connection with the incident.

He is scheduled to be arraigned at a.m. today in Fayette District

UK Police Chief W.H. McComas said Gibson apparently was upset about the failed relationship with his ex-girlfriend, UK biochemistry technician Karen Fortenberry.

"It was an ex-girlfriend, ex-boyfriend situation — and had been for several months," McComas said.

An unidentified person called police at 4:16 p.m. Friday to report "a disorder involving a weapon" at the Dorothy Enslow Combs Cancer Research Building.

The Combs building, where For-tenberry works, is located off Rose Street near UK Hospital and is part of the University's cancer research and treatment program.

and treatment program.

When two UK police officers arrived at the site a few minutes later, Gibson was holding Fortenberry against her will and pointing a fully-loaded, 9 mm semi-automatic pistol in the air, McComas said.

The two officers aimed their pis-tols at Gibson and told him to drop the weapon, McComas said.

After the officers repeated the command "at least two or three times," Gibson complied, he said.

No one was injured in the ordeal, which was the second gun-related which was the second gun-related incident on campus in as many days. UK comerback Ted Presley apparently shot himself in the head Thursday morning while playing Russian roulette in his residence hall. He died Friday.

Gibson remained in custody at the Fayette County Detention Cen-ter last night. His full-cash bond is set at $20,000, a deputy jailer said.

Groups protest use of dogs in experiments

By Cara Danielle Moncer

About 40 animal rights activists gathered on Rose Street Saturday, waving signs and speaking to anyone willing to listen.

The demonstration, which included members of California-based In Defense of Animals, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals and Kentuckians for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, was one of 11 planned events across the country during World Laboratory Animal Liberation Week, which began Saturday.

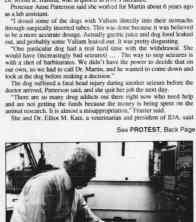

"I feel strongly that animal research is a waste ... especially when it comes to drug addiction," KETA member Carol Frazier said, adding that he activists protest cruelty to all animals, but the focus of the Lexington demonstration was the use of dogs, in particular beagles, in addiction research.

And watching their withdrawal ... The scientific community doesn't even use the data, so it's pointless." Frazier's statement reflected the printed opinion of addiction specialist Dr. Robin R. Ballina, who is quoted in IDA's literature.

Protester Anne Patterson said she worked for Martin about 6 years ago as a lab assistant.

Doctors William Martin and M. Ward Crowe hope their efforts to ounter possible bad press from aturday's In Defense of Animals gesics and the development of pain-killing drugs that are less likely to cause physical depen-dence and seizures during with-drawal in humans. His research in-volves live animals, 90 percent of which he says are rats and mice.

starday's In Defense of Animals protest will heighten public awareness of the reasons and rewards for animal research. The California-based activits group In Defense of Animals has targeted the institutions of well-known researchers such as Martin, a physician-researcher and professor of anesthesiology in the UK College of Medicine. The focus of his research is the addictive nature of narcotic anal-research for about two years," he said.

"We think these animal activists are ill-informed or misled because they have claimed and paint a very bad picture of how much our animals suffer. And the fact of the matter is, we have little evidence that they suffer at all," Martin said.

He added that none of the protesters have seen the UK facilities, although members of the local group Kentuckians for the Ethical Treatment of Animals were invited prior to talk of the protest.

Dr. William Martin studies brain wave graphs of gerbils in his See LABS, Back Page lab at the Albert B. Chandler Medical Center.

Agnostics dislike having religion forced upon them

The UK telephone book contains the phone numbers of 17 campus religious organizations. But for some UK students, none of these numbers make a connection — and neither does organized religion.

That's because these students find no comfort in turning to a higher power for support. Their beliefs are based on human endeavors.

"I kind of think of organized religion as a security blanket," said Jeff Wilder, an English sophomore. "I'm kind of down on organized religion. I on't see a need for churches,"

English sophomore Robin Vitucci, who considers herself an agnotic, said church was a "waste of time."

"If there is a higher power," she said, "then he doesn't care anymore."

Placing a figure on the number of people who call themselves atheists or agnostics is difficult because, for many, it is not a topic that comes up often.

ten. "Most are not willing to talk about religion," Vitucci said.
First, a distinction should be made between the terms atheist and agnostice. Both Wilder and Vitucci consider themselves agnostics, a philosophical position that states it is impossible to know about the nature or existence of God or any higher power.
Worldwide, agnosticism has grown by large numbers during the past

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Different theories on how black holes form and grow and how galaxies evolve will be discussed by 150 nstronomers from five continents during a UK conference today through Friday.

The first International Astrophysics Conference on Mass-Tramsfer Induced Activity in Galaxies will be held at the Radisson Plaza Hotel in Lexington.

New information will be presented and assimilated at the conference, with the goal of achieving greater understanding of galaxies and black holes, said Isane Shlosman, chairman of the International Scientific Organizing Committee and a UK professor of physics and astronomy.

"This is the first conference dedicated to this subject." Shlosman said.

He explained that black holes are very compact objects from which nothing — uncluding light — can escape and that they are located in the centers of galaxies. A giant black hole, for example, might be the size of our solar system, yet contain the mass of more than a billion stars like our sun.

Black holes have a huge gravitational pull. Everything around them is pulled in, squeezed and swallowed. It's like a monaster at the center of the galaxy," he said. "Little by little, it eats everything and grows."

The eating and growing occur in what are ternned "active galaxies." These galaxies emit a might and energy, and offer information above.

Program addresses youth needs after school

A new educational partnership designed to offer "fun and learning" after school to both adults and youth in some predominantly black neighborhoods in Lexington was announced recently.

To be known as the "Winburn Academy," named for the middle school in which the classes will be taught, the programs is a piont effort of UK, Micro City Government in Lexington and the Winburn School. The official types of classes to be offered by the academy will be determined after a communitywide survey of the needs of parents and children.

Faculty for the academy will include volunteers from UK.

Subjects tentucively suggested for the academy range from science classes to competition-quality Lego construction. In one proposed class, students would learn to build scap box cars.

In another, students would be encouraged to "rap" if they wrote down their lyrics — thus improving writing skills.

UK official stresses basics in reconstructive surgery

A "back-to-basics" focus on reconstructive surgery research and physician education will strengthen the spocialty of plastic surgery, said Dr. Edward Luce, professor and chief of surgery at UK Hospitel.

Luce recently was named prexident-elect of the Plastic Surgery Educational Foundation, the research and education arm of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons.

Luce previously has served as president of the American Society of Mazullofacial Surgeons and chairman of the American Board of Plastic Surgery.

He also is affiliated with the American Association of Plastic Surgeons, the American Association of Surgeon for Timum, he American Burn Association, the American College of Surgeons, the American Medical Association, the Plastic Surgery Research Council, the Society of Head and Neck Surgeons, the Southeastern Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the Southern Surgical Association.

Professors get Fulbright grants

For the 1993-94 academic year, three UK professors received Fulbright grants, a federal program that provides funds for study abroad.

Thomas Kinmermer, associate professor of forestry, will travel to the Universiti Pernanian in Malaysia to do curriculum development and do research in sustainable forest management and natural resource con-

Peter Perry, associate professor of mathematics, will travel to the University of Oslo in Norway for the full semester. He will teach a research-level course in spectral geometry of hyperbolic manifolds and will work with faculty and graduate students.

Greg Waller, associate professor of English, will travel to Hamilton, New Zealand, where he will lecture on film and American studies.

Grant supports family-practice doctors

The UK College of Medicine has received a $589,948 federal grant to expand professional development opportunities for family practice physicians in Kentucky. The three-year grant was awarded to the College of Medicine's department of family practice by the Bureau of Health Professions.

Dr. Michael Hagen, associate professor and interim chairman of the family practice department, is the principal investigator on the grant. Co-investigators are Dr. Gary Kearl, Dr. Richard Neill and Dr. Peggy Harrell, assistant professors in the department.

The grant will fund three major projects. One is a 16-hour workshop for practicing physicians who serve as voluntary teachers for third-or fourth-year medical students who receive part of their medical training away from the medical center at various claine sites in Kentucky.

Another initiative will offer min-fellowship workshops targeted at family practice doctors who want to update their computer, teaching and evaluating skills.

I didn't have to worry as much (this, of course, is the same theory that says if you wrap the pill in some meat, your dog will eat it because he doesn't realize that he's taking medicine). So I relaxed a bit. And then I got stabbed in the

And then I got stabbed in the back!

While I wasn't looking, a new English band called Suede released a self-titled album full of slick, tuneful guitar-pop that wormed its way into my brain before I knew what was happening. Morrissey may have failed to win me over on his own — he still annoys me to death — but his sound-alike minions have invaded my brain and obtained a quick surrender.

Every rising band needs a sledgehammer anthem to make its mark on the music scene, and Suede has one in the brilliant, twisted "Metal Mickey." The verses ride bumpily on Bernard Butter's nasty-sounding, occasionally dissonant guitar, but during the choruses, the song switches tracks and glides on the sweet strength of Brett Andersons' slinging. Also with anthem potential is "The Drowners," which is slow and halting but excellent nonetheless. It's like a freight train moving at 15 mph, not very fast, but it's powerful enough to smash you flat. "Animal Nitrate," a pleasant tittle song about violent gay sex, benefits from Ed Buller's imaginative production, which warps Butter's guitar into a threatening, evil-sounding noise.

Is Suede really "Morrissey II: The Smiths Strike Back"? Almost. Of course, the parallels are there: Anderson's soaring vocals recall The Pretentious One perfectly. Butler's guitar work is reminiscent of Marr and the Anderson/Butler songwriting axis just begs to be compared to Morrissey/Marr. Yes, they're very close to a sequel.

I have heard that, while almost unheard of in America, Suede is all the rage in England. Will we never learn? It doesn't matter — they'll break the States soon enough. Save this review, so that in a few years, when we stubborn Americans learn to appreciate how good Suede is, you can read this article again, and I can plant a big, fat, "I told you so!" right on your forehead.

Goo Goo Dolls mix punk, pop at Superstar Car Wash

Goo Goo Dolls Superstar Car Wash Warner Bros./Metal Blade

By John Abbott Staff Critic

"Punk is punk and pop is pop, and never the twain shall meet" is the usual rule in music.

The punks can't seem to write a song that has a pleasant melody, but the popsters seem unable to write any really meaty riffs.

A few bands, like Buffalo, N.Y.'s Goo Goo Dolls, can bridge that gap, though. On the band's new album, Superstar Car Wash, the Goos have pulled off that tricky meld time and time again. Finally—tuneful songs with bite.

— tuncful songs with bite.

Cleverly disguised as raucous alternative rock, the 14 songs on Superstar Car Wash are, in fact, just a bunch of amped-up pop songs. Pure

"Close Your Eyes" is a sweet, evoted love song, the kind of gendevoted love song, the salts of ga-uinely heartfelt poetry you always wished you could write to your true love on Valentine's Day. "Already There" is a warm remembrance of youth.

Though being an "alternative" band these days usually means acting like a) anti-everything street punks; b) spaced-out Gothic weirdos; or c) annoyingly pretentious artistes, the Goo Goo Dolls instead choose d) none of the

It's hard to pick a favorite song because there's a lot of good stuff on this album.

"We Are The Normal," the al-bum's first single, is a lush, tex-tured song complete with flowing violins and lyrics penned by guest-genius Paul Westerberg, ex-leader of Minneapolis' mighty Replacements.

Though I like almost everything on Superstar Car Wash, "Lucky Star" (which pounds the Madonna song of the same name into the pavement), "Don't Worry" and "Girl Right Next To Me" are the ones that find themselves piped through my headphones more than the others.

All three of them are nimble, speedy songs with enough hooks to poke out the eyes of an entire army battalion.

What I like best about a good three-piece band like the Goo Goo Dolls in that, unlike a four or five-piece unit, which usually involves two guitar players constantly fight-ing each other for attention, a three-piece is stripped-down and tight.

Guitarist/singer John Rzeznik, who wrote almost half the songs on the album by himself, doesn't pro-duce any intricate solos or buzzsaw punk-rock jams, but he writes some Singer/bass player Robby Takac does plenty more than just plunk out basic supporting lines. He makes himself heard, swooping up and down again and again, carrying the melody while Rzeznik solos or pounds out his strong rhythm riffs.

George Tutuska's drums are sim-ple and understated, but what's wrong with that? We've got enough would-be Bonhams in the world, so it's refreshing to see a drummer that is content to keep time and stay in support of his band mates.

Besides the fact that the sounds of both the Replacements and the Goo Goo Dolls lie in that frightfully narrow strip of music where punk and pop are fused together, the Goos also share a little bit of histo-ry with Westerberg's old outfit.

Both bands were forced to change their names on the spot when club owners refused to when club owners refused to them them under the names that they were using at the time. It may be a silly name, but what's that got to do with anything? That's like say? That's like support that all women named "Candy" are vacuous air heads. The music's what's really important, after all.

Superstar Car Wash is a tricky album. It looks like your garden-variety indie rock music, but peel away the layers and you can see that, at the heart of it all, it's just pop music. Louder and better, but pop all the same.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Shortly after yesterday's game against Florida, a Wildcat baseball player bellowed to his teammates from the dugout: "Hey guys, do you sweep with a mop or a broom?"

The sophomore right-hander gave up two quick runs in the first inning and another spot in the second. But like Reed did on Saturday, Bowles quickly settled down and controlled UF batters with his off-speed pitches, which had the Gators swinging for the fences. for the fences

Young Cats

are serious contenders

GAINESVILLE, Fla.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Some-where, perhaps on some interstane between Sweet Home Alabama and the Sunshine State, the UK baseball Wildcats took a wrong turn. If this weekend's series with Florida proved anything, it was that these young Cats have the potential to be much better than the South-eastern Conference's Eastern Divi-sion cellar-dwellers. Hopes were high for this bunch after 20 games. UK soared out to 15-5 start, including a sweep of No-tre Dame at home and the first two the Dame at home and the first two games of a series at Alabama. UK was atop its division and ranked in the top 25 by Baseball America. But the rapid ascent was followed by a nightmarish descent. UK lost the final game against the Crimson Tide and proceeded to drop 11 of their next 17, including eight of 11 at Shively Field and eight of inte SEC contests.

Maybe it was their youth and inexperience. Maybe it was the recurring mononucleosis that has kept preseason Ali-American outfielder Jeff Abbott from having any impact on the team.

preseason All-American outfielder Jelf Abbott from having any impact on the team.

His presence has surely been missed, as his replacements have needed binoculars just to see the Mendoza line. Regardless of the reason, the Cats simply couldn't put together strong pitching and timely hitting in the same ballgame.

"I think we're cursed," said short-stop Jeff Michael.

The only cursing to be found this weekend was in the Gators' dugout. The Cats blew into town and promptly shut the Gators' jaws with offense and defense.

There was Brian Reed making his first-ever start and handcuffing Florida batters with nine strikeouts and his wicked breaking ball.

There was Matt Bragga banging two home runs and Brad Hindersman going four for four in one game. There was Pookie Jones diving and sprinting to save runs in the outfield after producing them with his bat.

Looked nothing like a team thus 3-9 in the league before the weekend.

"Before the University of Louis-ville game (a 2-1 loss last week), we said this was going to be a whole new season," said head coach Keith Madison. "We wiped the slate clean. We're going to be an aggressive ballcub and we can't look back."

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — UK athlete Pookie Jones said the had never experienced what happened a couple of days before he left for Gainesville to play basehall.

One of his UK football teammates, Ted Presley, died Friday in Lexington after he apparently shot himself in the head while playing Russian roulette in his residence hall room early Thursday morning.

While his teammates were mourning, Jones had to play,
"It's hard," Jones said. "Because I've never had to deal with that kind of thing."

Although he had to play yesterday afternoon, Jones wanted to make it back to Lexington for a dinner with Presley's family that was given by the football team last night.

However, a situation like this could make one wonder about trying to play two sports.

"A couple of times, I have thought about how the quarerback is supposed to be a leader, and I felt bad because I wasn't there," Jones said.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Maybe all the UK baseball Wildcats need-de was a little photosynthesis.

The Cats have been stuck in the ground as of late. Before the week-end began, they had lost nine of 10 Southeastern Conference games and four of the last five in their own backyard garden, Shively Field.

But coach Keith Madison's club was in full bloom Saturday at Florida's sunny, 80-degree, palm-ree lined Perry Field.

UK's bats finally awakened, and the pitching held strong as the Cats swept a doubleheader from the Gators 5-3 and 7-6.

More than one Wildcat pointed to the weather as the reason for the team's rejuvenation.

"Oh, it's great," shortstop Jeff Michael said. "The wind's been blowing at home lately, and it's good to get out into some warm weather finally."

"The weather at home hasn't been great," senior pitcher Lohm Frazier said. "There's nothing like coming into a ballpark like this. It's a great time. It rains every day in

Of course, the Cats also don't get the kind of pitching and run support they got Saturday every day in Lexington either.

In the first game, Madison tried something different. Twenty minutes before the game, he told relief pitcher Brian Reed that he would start the first game of his career.

"I felt like he was the kind of guy who could do well against Plorida."
Madison said. "Even though he hadn't started yet, Jiust had this gut feeling, and I went with it."

relation is stated yet, I just had this gut feeling, and I went with it."

Perhaps Madison should listen to his gut more often. After yielding two first inning runs, Reed settled down and pitched six shoutout innings.

He gave up just six hits and two earned runs overall and struck out nine, mostly by painting the corner of the plate with his breaking balls.

"In the beginning, hey were really squeezing the zone," said the junior right hander, who now leads the nation in strucouts per nine innings." But then they started giving the corner, and I just worked the corners."

Pookie Jones provided the of-fense, with three hits and three RBI. Even Chad Estep, who had just three hits all season entering the game and was batting just above 100, earned an RBI when he was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded. It was the centerfielder's first RBI of the ware of the year.

It was the centerfielder's first RBI of the year.

Freshman Paul Morse moved from first base to the mound in the eighth inning and struck out four to pick up the save.

In the nighteap, UK jumped to a quick 7-1 lead behind the bats of Matt Bragga and Brad Hindersman. Bragga hit his second home run in as many games, and Hindersman went four for four with four RBI.

Meanwhile, Frazier was cruising until the sixth inning, when the Gartors rallitled for three runs to cut the lead to 7-4. After surrendering another run in the bottom of the seventh, Frazier was drilled in the kneecap by a line drive and had to leave the game. He suffered no broken bones.

Morse came on again and gave up another run before ending the Gators' hopes and earning his fifth Gators' hopes and earning his fifth

Bengals take defense Cincinnati makes Copeland fifth overall pick;

deal that may have been out there," coach Dave Shula said. Copeland and teammate Eric Curry were considered the two most appealing defensive linemen in the draft. They wound up the first two taken — Tampa Bay chose right after Cincinnati and got Curry. Curry's reputation is for rushing the quarterback. The Bengals consider Copeland a more versatile lineman. "He can rush from the outside as an end or he can come inside and occupy two guys," defensive line coach Bob Karmelowicz said. The main question is his size. At 6-foot-3, 285 pounds, be's a little light for a defensive lineman. Karmelowicz has told Copeland he needs to bulk up over the summer. He'll have a good opportunity on a team than's rebuilding. Among workers, 50 percent said smoking shouldn't be permitted at indoor workplaces. And in growing numbers, they are getting their wish: Three in four said they work at a place where smoking is either

limited or forbidden.

The poll, conducted by the newspaper March 17-23, found that only 22 percent said employees at their workplace can smoke wherever they want — down from the 33 percent in a 1990 Bluegrass poll.

It also found that 56 percent of workers weren't bothered by forwing number of smoke-free or smoking-restricted work environments.

Surprise attack in Feb. at Waco wasn't

The Texas Rangers are investigating how cult members learned of the raid as part of a broader probe of the murder of the four ATF agents.

ATF refuses to discuss how it be-lieves advance word reached Ko-nesh and at least II reporters who were also waiting when agents ar-rived at what came to be called Ranch Apocalypse.

Agent Robert Rodriguez, who had gone undercover to learn the habits and routines of the cult, was inside the compound a half hour be-fore the raid stated according to combat count documents.

Rodriguez stood in a foyer outside a room where Koresh's associated ablored and the court papers, ACTF agent Rob Williams died when he stood up to try to cover a tream of fellow agents trying to enter the compound. Williams was struck in the side of the face by abullet.

The fire fight lasted 45 minutes until ATF negotiated a cease fire so agents could carry off the bodies until ATF negotiated a cease fire so agents could carry off the bodies. ## 300,000 take part in homosexual rights march

By Jill Lawrence Associated Press

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Throngs of gay men and women spilled across the Mall yesterday demanding acceptance and equal rights from a society that often scorns their community. "A simple matter of justice" was their rallying cry.
In brilliant, summery sunshine, they came by the hundreds of thousands to tell America who they are and what they want.

"We are the new American refugees, coming home from exile," Torie Osborn, executive director or the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, exhorted the mellow, enthustastic crowd.

sastic crowd.
"We won't compromise our free-dom. We won't negotiate our free-dom away so those who have free-dom can be more comfortable," said David Mixner, a Los Angeles business consultant and fundraiser who has advised President Clinton

The U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 300,000, and local officials reported no problems.

ficials reported no problems.

Organizers had hoped for 1 milion marchers, and predicted that their turnout would rival the great civil rights and anti-war protests of the past quarter-century.

Some same-sex couples held hands or hugged in an atmosphere they described as more comfortable and accepting than what they encountered in their daily lives.

"You can walk around hosting-

"You can walk around holding hands and being completely natural with each other without fear," said Chris Triebert, 41, a graphic de-signer from Brattleboro, Vt.

The formal program was a blend of music, political speeches, biting humor and insistent demands for rights. One speaker drew a laugh when she announced that redsequined dresses were burned in front of the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover sequined dresses were burned in front of the FBI's 1. Edgar Hoover Building — a barbed reference to recent published accounts of Hoover liking to don women's clothing. Two cross-dressers were on the program, including a male comedian who poked fun at straight fears about letting gays into the military. The subject spoke volumes about the historic moment. The first gay march on Washington since 1987, in the planning for two years, came in the first 100 days of the first White House openly sympathetic to gay aspirations.

Clinton, who invited gay leaders to a White House meeting earlier this month, lent support from a distance. In a speech in Boston to newspaper editors, he said he had paid a political price for supporting the military ban.

In a statement issued for the march, he declared, "I stand with you in the struggle for equality for all Americans, including gay men and lesbians."

Thousands of marchers came not

Thousands of marchers came not for the rhetoric, but to shatter by their presence the stereotypes that others have about there. "All gays aren't flaming queens," said Steve Starr, 43, a Denver travel agent marching alongside Robert Jacobson, 37, a telephone company technician. "We don't cross-dress. We don't wear heels. We're just normal gay men."

The marchers clogging streets and lawns on an unusually warm and lawns on an unusually warm spring day looked a lot like other summer demonstrators in their shorts, colorful T-shirts and sensible shoes.

March contingents ranged from parents with their grown gay children to gay parents pushing their toddlers in strollers. There were disabled people in wheelchairs, and a separate group of marchers with AIDS.

T-shirts and banners advertised 1-shirts and banners advertised attitudes from humorous to defiant. "It's not just a phase," and "Friend or phobe?" "I can't even think straight" and "Hate is not a family value" and, in a sign of the times, "We're here, we're queer, we have E-mail."

we te here, we re queer, we have be-mail."

From North Carolina came the Pride Marching Band. From Colorado came Buddhists for Civil Rights Justice. There were lesbian social workers from the Mid-Adantic Gay Rodeo Association and gay American Indians who assembled under a huge monument to World War I heroes.

Some marchers said they were angered by Clinton's absence, but others said it was politically astute and better in the long run.

"I don't want the right to have

"I don't want the right to have fodder. I don't want the right to have a picture of him standing with us," said John McJunkin, 32, an investment adviser from Charlotte,

Only a few opponents were in evidence at a small counter-demonstration. "Protect our Children from Clinton's homosexuals," said one sign. "Sodomy-Free Zone," said another.

There were also sobering signs of the plague that some say has built sympathy for the gay cause — a "Safe Sex in the 90s" T-shirt, a display of the AIDS quilt memorializing victims, and marchers with AIDS. "We've been too long at that graveyard, for too many men acrying," went the words to one song during the program. ng the program.

during the program.
"I have a lot of hopes," said Ray-mond Kerr, 34, of Monterey, Calif., painfully thin and seated in a wheel-chair. "It's not like gay pride marches which are fun, our version of the Mardi Gras. We're really here for our rights this time."

Anniversary of King riots sees L.A. still rebuilding

By James Anderson

LOS ANGELES — Having weathered a second trial in the police beating of Rodney King without renewed rioting, the city faces a more difficult task: using that peace dividend to restore jobs and hope. Acquittals in the first trial of four officers who beat King touched orf three days of rioting on April 29, 1992. It was the nation's worst rioting this century, leaving 34 people dead and doing about 31 billion in property damage.

The violence took away at least 25,000 jobs in south-central Los Angeles, an area that had already lost tens of thousands of jobs when factories closed in the 1970s and population lives in poverty, accord-ing to Rebuild L.A., a nonprofit agency created after the riots to bring in business investment.

The group's chairman, Peter Ueberroth and Mayor Tom Bradley hope the calm after two of the policemen were convicted in a federal trial persuaded businesses to move in. Others warn against premature certainiem.

"It is unfortunate that when things don't blow up here they say it's getting better," said Celes King, state president of the Congress of Racial Equality and a resident of south-central since 1938.

south-central since 1938.

Progress has come in fits and starts. Rebuild L.A. received $450 million worth of corporate help to train hundreds of minority workers for jobs, open stores and fund local, minority-owned banks.

But despite the widespread de-struction from the riots, only 160 city permits have been issued for major rebuilding and repairs, ac-cording to the Department of Build-ing and Safety.

"I have never seen animal abuse at this institution," Crowe said.
"We are much concerned with animal welfare."
Crowe stressed that UK researchers comply with the Federal Animal Welfare Act, which mandates an Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee at all U.S. research facilities.

This committee evaluates the pro-tocol plans of all research proposals.

The scientists at UK also are required to attempt to use alternatives such as computers and cell cultures as well as to ascertain that they are not needlessly duplicating research.

Crowe explained that animals do not suffer during seizures. "They don't know anything. It is as if they

they believe that Martin's research will never yield results applicable to humans.

"Half a billion dollars a year is being taken away from preventative drug programs and drug rehabilitation and treatment programs to go into the kinds of bizarre and stupid and cruel research that Dr. Martin is doing," Katz said.

"This sort of research tries to find a 'magic bullet' solution to the

Martin explained that he does not consider human subjects an acceptable alternative for initial research. "It wouldn't be approved by the institution because of health hazards to participating patients. It would open those responsible, including the institution, to possible malpractice suits. Also, human subjects often have mixed addictions, which would make results ambiguous, and these patients are not really very cooperative. "This is not where you start the onus, and these patients are not really very cooperative.

"This is not where you start the therapeutic adventure."

Crowe contrasted the concepts of animal rights and animal welfare.

People have to ask themselves if they equate animal life with human life. Animals are sentient, feeling creatures, but they are not human."

"We know people disagree about the use of animals; they have been disagreeing for a couple of hundred years. Our society has a way of adjudicating these differences. All alwa-abiding citizens will abide by what our country decides," Martin said.

said.
"I do not feel threatened by this, or even embarrassed, because what we've been doing I think is important research. I have a demonstrated track record that other people respect," he said.

problem. That's not the way to stop drug addiction. You're never going to stop people from doing the harm-ful things they want to do." Protest

Katz said the way to stop drug addiction is not through a capsul-ized product of biochemical re-search, but through preventative and rehabilitation programs.

"We have a society that is wrong-ly taught that you don't have to take care of yourself so much, you don't have to worry about what you are doing because science will find some kind of pill so you can do what you want," be said.

Polls show Yeltsin winning Russian vote of confidence

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin won a vote of confidence in a key referendum yesterday but was likely to fall short in his push to force new parliamentary elec-tions, according to exit polls and partial official results.

In a surprise development, most voters backed Yeltsin's market reforms despite the hardships they have brought, a result that may partially mute Yeltsin's critics in the hard-line Congress of People's Deputies.

But the turnout of about 65 per-cent was too low to enable Yeltsin to force elections. Approval for new elections required a majority

Yet while voter support was strong for new elections, it did not tally up to a majority of the electo-rate, one poll showed.

Such a result would also mean that Yeltsin would not have the verse.

Despite popular belief, the term is not interchangeable with "nonreligious." Many "high" religions, such as Buddism and Taoism, also do not base their beliefs in the existence of a higher power.

Vitucci said she used to be an atheist but has since changed her view.

"Atheists who are true atheists be-"Atheists who are true atheists be-lieve there are no higher powers than humans. I believe that is actu-ally a pretty arrogant assessment. They can't prove there is no God," Vitucci said. Wilder bases his stance on logic and said both atheism and agnosti-

Wilder bases his stance on logic and said both atheism and agnosti-cism are impractical. Wilder said he often has discussions with his friends about religion and the Bible. He said he can't side with either atheism or organized religion. While he said he argues with atheists sometimes, his biggest problem comes from believers who try to make him believe what they do.

"It's ridiculous. ... It pretty much rules out friendship." Wilder said.
He said the only way to prove that there is a God is to "bring him down, and I will believe it — maybe not worship.

Vitucci was baptized Catholic, as was Wilder, but her family stopped going to church when she was about 5. She stayed away from church for several years, but she never really thought about religion and its rela-tion to agnosticism until her junior year in high school.

She was involved in the Ken-nucky Governor's Scholars Program and met someone who didn't be-lieve in any higher power. She said it made her begin to think about re-ligion and she made up her mind during her freshman year of col-lege.

Vitucci said when people first discover she is agnostic their reactions can tell a lot about them.

"Some immediately think I'm a Satan worshipper or something," she said.

It is not difficult to find agnostics at UK, she said.

"We just kind of find each other through the people that we meet. Once you find one, you can always find someone else."

Wilder also said most of his friends are either agnostic or atherist. He said it is just a natural progression when he meets people who believe as he does.

Wilder and Vitucci say they disagree with much of organized religion. Wilder, however, said he thinks religion has its place in society because it provides a kind of socialization and a code of morals.

Curry also praised Presley's work ethic: "On the very first day Ted walked on the football field, he earned the respect of his teammates by displaying courage and unusual determination while going through the grinds of a conditioning drill."

Presley's funeral service is scheduled for 1 p.m. tomorrow at Freeman Chapel CME Church in Hopkinsville.

creen Cemetery.
Presley is survived by his father and mother, the Rev. Robert Presley and Mae Frances Brewer Presley of Hopkinsville; two sisters, Doretha Benson of Columbus, Ga., and Mary Lewis Northington of Ashland, Ky; and two brothers, John Fitzgerald Presley of Hopkinsville, and Gregory Wayne Presley of Evansville, Ind.

UK police are treating Presley's death as an accidental shooting, and no charges have been filed, UK spokesman Ralph Derickson said.

Officials still are trying to determine who owned the gun used in the shooting.
