

The World Whirls On

By JIM WOODBRIDGE

War Shifts Into Second

Signs of increasing activity in World War II were everywhere last week. British parliament members during their disgust at the present means of winning the war by slowly starving the Germans into submission. As a result, the royal air force stepped the Nazi naval and air base at Sylt. The other ally, France, also clamored for more activity. Constantly premier Daladier was ousted and a German-hating politician Reynaud was asked to take his place.

Russia and Finland Again

Russia signified that she might resume her war with Finland when Moscow newspapers announced that Finland's new treaty obtaining military protection from Sweden and Norway was an unfriendly gesture toward the Soviet, a sign of lack of faith in the recently formed Soviet-Finnish peace treaty.

Observers believe that the Moscow-Helsinki treaty was only a temporary affair after all. They say that Russia only wanted to stop the hostilities for a time in order to organize her troops. The line that Finland in two bites instead of one big one.

British Air Raid

The reason behind the unprecedented air raid of the British, these same observers say, is a desire on the part of the Chamberlain government to put an end to the recent peace moves from Hitler. The line has been that English militarists believe their air force equal to that of Hitler's. No longer do they fear a mass bombing raid on London or on an industrial center such as Birmingham.

In their recent raid is an indication, the English strategists are conducting a program of bombing German air and submarine bases in the North sea and the Baltic. A few weeks ago they bombed Heligoland, before that they bombed Wilhelmshaven. To destroy these conventional plane bases and thereby stop the Nazi bombers from attacking the English ships appears to be the objective.

Largest Raid On Record

Their raid on Sylt Tuesday involved the largest number of bombers employed since the inauguration of air warfare. For six hours, the British roared over the German coast, and after a few minutes of attack. The reverberation of the bombing and anti-aircraft fire could be heard distinctly on the distant Danish coast. It was a clear, moonlight night, with drifting clouds which the English bombers could hide. After several trips, the British found its mark in the ammunition dump on the island. Explosions which followed rocked the little island base severely; stored rockets burst out in a terrific shower. The attack was reported to have been successful.

When asked what his chief interest is at this time, Mr. Seymour said that he prefers etching and that his interest there is in characterizing the work of the past. "Formerly I preferred landscape and scenery etching, but my taste are changing," he said.

Little Opposition Seen To 'Unconditional Abolishment'

Although little opposition to the bill was voted a proposal for abolition of Hell Week by the legislature to allow students to express their opinion before the bill was voted on the measure.

Drawn up by Jim Caldwell (A & S, Jr.), the bill advocates unconditional abolition of Hell Week observances after September 15, 1940. Hell Week, according to the bill, "shall be construed to mean all forms of extended hazing or exhibitionism held before initiation periods or any other time during the school year."

Reasons for postponing action on the bill, as set forth by various legislators, were that the measure is so important an issue to be decided without student consensus and that time should be allowed for the bill to be introduced by its respective representatives of their opinions.

The measure will be voted upon at the next meeting of the legislature on Wednesday, April 3.

Caldwell said yesterday afternoon that abolition of Hell Week on this campus would be in accord with national chapters and the national Interfraternity Council. These organizations have already gone on record as disapproving the traditional observance, he declared.

Faculty Releases Propaganda On Final Exams

Professors, noticing the changing color of grass, the faint rays of spring sunshine, and hearing about May Day plans, are beginning to broadcast small propaganda notices about final examinations which are ten weeks off.

This first hint of final exam publicity is a gentle prodding about keeping good notes, dates for term papers, and highlights which make good exam questions. Those well intentioned reminders are voiced in the midst of still daily assignments, special reports, and quizzes. They are accompanied with the pretty lackeyed sayings about keeping work caught up for each assignment, proper review for quizzes, not too many class cuts, and a good attitude.

The result is that a hint to the wise is sufficient; and that accounts, no doubt, for the A's which come up at the end of the semester.

Most of us, however, keep thinking we'll worry about that tomorrow, or that exam week is plenty of time to worry about questions that may pop up on the finals. And that accounts, no doubt, for some of the E's - L. C.

Spring Cleaning—Hell Week Going

The inevitable is coming—thanks to the student legislature. Hell Week, that obnoxious, adolescent hangover will soon be only a tarnished memory if a bill introduced at Wednesday's session of the student legislature meets the approval it deserves at the governing body's next meeting.

Tabled at the recent meeting to allow student consideration, the bill will come up for a vote on Wednesday, April 3. What's more, it has a good chance of being passed.

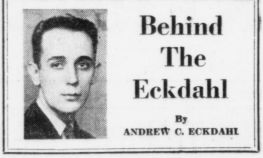

Although this has been gone over before, THE KERNEL would like to reiterate a few of the many reasons for abolishing Hell Week.

- 1) Hell Week activities invariably reflect unfavorably on the University.
2) Faculty members have complained so frequently about the practice that abolition would soon come from the administration anyway.
3) Pledge class standings suffer.
4) Almost without exception, national offices stand opposed to Hell Week.
5) Organizations frequently lose good pledges because of the practice.
6) Injuries to the physical and mental well-being of pledges have been known to result.
7) Groups, in pursuing this system, are furnishing their critics with ammunition for condemning all Greek-letter organizations—many times unjustifiably.
8) Most fraternity men on this campus agree that Hell Week hurts organizations more than it helps.

The only statement which we have been able to cull from the noise of those supporting Hell Week is that by some mysterious means, the pledges in undergoing hardships together form a stronger bond of friendship among themselves, and that the fraternity is able to tell by witnessing the treatment whether the pledge is the "right" man for the group.

It would seem that the fraternal group which advances this reason is acknowledging a weakness in itself. The higher type organization will furnish its pledges with other, more normal, ties of friendship. As for picking the "right" man, one seldom hears of a pledge being ejected because he was discovered to be the "wrong" man under "torture." If he does refuse, to undergo such treatment, the action is usually twisted by saying that he "just wasn't my type of fellow," which, probably, is all too true.

THE KERNEL, of course, has long been opposed to Hell Week. We are biased. Nevertheless, we believe that those organization members who stop and think will realize they are boosting their own groups' reputation by supporting the legislature's bill.

Behind The Eckdahl

By ANDREW C. ECKDAHL

JOHN SAMARA, Guest Columnist
Today is the first day of spring. Mother nature is expressing her joy in blooming flowers and budding trees, and silly students all over the country are expressing their sentiments with silly poetry. So, our face lit up with the joy of living, we approached our editor and asked if he didn't have some words of wisdom, truth or beauty to impart to students faced with the grim trials of spring. "Sure," he growled. "Keep off the grass."

Which only goes to show you how some people's minds work.

We were pleased no end to read the recent announcement of a women's military drill team. Too long have the foolish females murmured silly remarks to the effect that "there's something about a uniform." Now, we hope, they'll have a chance to wear those itchy woolen shirts.

This being election year, with nominations the order of the day, we would like to announce our presidential candidate—none other than that sterling exponent of law and order, that Botanical Garden guardian, the peepul's chere—Kelly, the campus cop.

Besides possessing all the attributes of good presidential timber (see any campaign speech for particulars), Kelly has more color and political oomph than all of the potential Republican candidates put together. Then too, his election would leave the B garden unpatrolled. And thus: "We'll go to the top with Kelly the cop."

Pasted on the side of "Wildcat" Pearce's office desk, along with the telephone numbers of three narcotic agents and a Department of Justice man, is the following definition: fubby—plump; chubby; short and stubby—just a nice juicy adjective waiting for some coed to attach itself to.

Have you a boring professor in your course? Does he plague you with corny jokes which, for want of a grade, you needs must listen to? If so, send them along (the jokes, not the professors) and maybe we can discourage the practice. You have no idea how unfunny a thing can look in print. They must be truly professorial, though; student jokes are ineligible; they wouldn't stand a chance, anyhow.

Just to start the ball rolling we'll contribute the following, rendered in jovial, sprightly fashion to a soundly sleeping class in economics recently.

"They tell one about the economics teacher who dreamt one night that he was teaching his class. Pause . . . He awoke and found that he was."

DEFINITIONS:
A bustle is a deceitful little seaful.
A snood is a bustle worn over the brain.

Is there any truth to the rumor that one of the participants in that recent slugging in a campus hangout was asked if he didn't know that it was unsportsmanlike to kick a man when he's down, replied: "What do you think I got him down for?"

QUERY OF THE WEEK:
What did Mrs. Confucius say?

Of course we knew that today wasn't the first day of spring, as stated in our first paragraph, but we just wanted this long to correct it because we wanted to see how many people read this far. We know that it was yesterday.

EDITOR'S NOTE:
We are curious too, so we didn't correct the foregoing statement. Everybody knows that Sunday was the first day of spring.

FBI men are frustrated, not knowing whether the signature on a student ticket book belonged to the person who accidentally burned it. They are wondering if this wasn't just a diabolical scheme to evade the amusement tax.

After attending a few convocations and meetings around here, we conclude that what this university needs is fewer speakers and more listeners.

Der fever Dr. Feubers, der fever Dr. Feubers der would be on der Continent. - W. T.

The drive "to make the University campus one of the most beautiful in the United States" is truly worthy of support, but it seems too bad to tear down all the new buildings. - G. L.

The Student Legislature Starts Spring House Cleaning

Proposed Hell Week Bill Bill Recently Presented To Legislature, Will Be Voted On April 3

For several years now, persons on this campus, as well as persons throughout the entire country, have been gradually growing more and more irritated with college Hell Weeks. Today the question has become acute, and several national magazines have dealt with it in a manner decidedly complimentary to us undergraduates. It is actually being used as an argument against the fraternity system, when actually there is little reason for it even to constitute an issue.

As a result, many colleges and universities have, either by student or faculty action, abolished them already. At the University of Kentucky, however, they are still permitted, although the bulk of public opinion is against them. There are several specific factors which indicate that the time is ripe for the abolition of Hell Week on the UK campus.

Reasons For Abolition:
1) Each year citizens of Lexington complain to the school authorities about the Hell Week activities of the "University students." Although only a small percentage take part in them, the practice is a reflection upon the student body as a whole, as well as upon the fraternities and societies which permit them. Needless to say, this does no good to our reputation.

2) Ten fraternities and two societies, comprising half the University Greek chapters, voted voluntarily this year to abolish Hell Week, indicating that at least half the Greeks themselves are opposed to the practice.

3) Many faculty members registered complaints this year against students being unprepared and sleeping in class because they were kept up the night before on "road trips." This occurred despite the sincere efforts of the Interfraternity Council to restrict the activities in such a manner as to keep criticism at a minimum.

4) Many of the fraternity members themselves (even some who say they approve of Hell Week) have expressed the opinion that this year was the last time the practice would be permitted on this campus. This indicates an opinion that sooner or later the faculty is going to outlaw hanging entirely.

A Chance For Retraite
It follows that it would raise the student status in the eyes of the faculty and townsmen if they would abolish Hell Week themselves, and it would make the entire process (which seems inevitable anyway) decidedly less painful for all concerned.

Therefore, if the Student Government Association would take the initiative in doing away with Hell Week, it would not only save the student body much criticism in the future, but would constitute somewhat of a feather in the Student Legislature's cap.

For these reasons is the following bill proposed:

Section A: After September 15, 1940, no fraternity, sorority, club, orary, or club, or local fraternity or society is found to be violating the rule, it shall be ordered discontinued by the Legislature with the Dean's approval. If the organization is of a national nature, the same step shall be taken as in Section C.

Section E: The secretary of the Student Government Association shall, upon the rule's adoption, write to the headquarters of each national fraternity and sorority and each national honorary organization on the campus, explaining the ruling, and asking that that organization's national office cooperate with the Student Government Association in case it should be forced to take the action described above.

IV: Jeanne Barker—the University's number one BWOC

We recall some three years back, when we were a mere freshman, people often would point Jeanne Barker out to us as being the University's number one BWOC. She was only a sophomore herself then, and we felt it rather unusual that a person who was only in her second year on the campus should have already earned such a distinguished title. Miss Barker is a senior now, and she certainly has not slipped from her top-rung seat on the mythical thing, she has locked on a few rungs of her own.

CAMPUSCENE

ten they actually got in a run. It finally got so that whenever election night came around, the AGD vice-president would take the chair and chant in the manner of a tobacco auctioneer: "Allin'avoro! Jeanne Barker yay yay yooopooooo - the yeeehavitherecleannestakethetree!" This doesn't sound much like the verbiage of a bunch of tabbies to us.

This year the Barker woman launched her 115-pound carcass into the churning waters of campus politics—and her glossy voice proved to be the oil that calmed them. We recall that night at the political rally last October when, after an hour or two of assorted boeing and heckling on the part of a slap-happy audience, J. B. got up to make a few choice remarks.

The Barker eyes got a thorough workout that night, and the campus makes got caught up on their whistling. The speech itself, we recall, was rather silly, but she looked pretty good and so nobody cared very much. Dr. Shannon says a thing like that is usually referred to as "appealing to the voter's emotions rather than his reason," and that it is pretty good politics. He must be right, because she got elected with little or no trouble.

However unethical she may be while campaigning for office, Jeanne is quite serious about this student government business. She is the only member of the legislature who served on the committee which drew up the student constitution last spring, and whenever one of the legislators gets puzzled over a particularly opaque clause, he goes to Barker person to find out exactly what it was the forefathers had in mind. She usually knows and isn't at all bashful about explaining it. And as student legislature speeches go, she has made some pretty fair ones here of late.

As far as we have been able to discover, Jeanne Barker hasn't any hobby; unless, that is, one could call Sid Buckley a hobby. This ex-UK journalist, who used to consider himself a Canadian citizen until he found the Ottawa Government was contemplating conscription, is now located at Cincinnati doing an occasional bit of advertising work. He drives down, so we are told, to see Jeanne every other week-end or so.

We wondered precisely what Buckley was in Miss B's young life so we brazenly asked her, "Exactly what" we queried, "is the relation between you and Sid? Are you pined, or what?"

She said she didn't think they were pined.

"It's just a beautiful friendship thus far," Jeanne added, "he merely drives down to Lexington for an occasional dance. We haven't made any definite plans as yet, really we haven't."

We were about to ask her how Buckley liked Cincinnati, but she said she had a couple of meetings to attend. We thought we'd better let her go after that one.

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

Although the idea may not be exactly exclusive, I venture to predict that public opinion polls, like the automobile and electric lights, are here to stay.

In a land where polls, taken by herds of people and institutions, are as common as back fence cats, I remain a soul no one (before Tuesday) had ever queried.

Now, however, I am a person reborn for I have received from a certain American Sports Foundation, New York City, a letter and questionnaire which has been stamped to college sports editors...

I was literally as lonely as that girl in the magazine ads who forgets her duty to herself, That was Tuesday.

I'm Wasting Time Here But to pass on to you (unless you) a few of the questions and answers before my chamber of commerce enthusiasm over reacting into an exclusive letter erodes into the space saved for this essay.

Q—Who do you consider the outstanding sports figure of 1939, amateur or professional? A—Since most everyone will nominate Joe DiMaggio, Nick Kinnick, or Don Budge, I'll slip a saddle on a dark horse, a veritable modern-day Samson who goes by the less Biblical name of "Evil Eye" Finkle.

FOUR CAT-FISH TO ENTER LOOP WATER TOURNEY

Swim Carnival Opens Today In New Tech Pool

For the first time in its five year history, Kentucky's far-famed "pool-ers" swimming team will be represented in the annual Southeastern Conference water tourney which opens this afternoon...

Four members of the Kentucky squad, Captain Lloyd Ramsey, Coach Frank Roberts, Bud Scott and Letelle Stephenson, left early yesterday by train for the meet.

Although disappointed in championship gossip, the Cat-fish, however, are given a good chance of picking up enough points to grab fourth, or possibly even third place in the tank carnival.

Favored for third place is the University of Georgia, while Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia Tech are expected to wage a three-way fight for the next place.

Basketball Coaches Speak At Banquets

Returning to the banquet circuit, Coach Adolph Rupp, head Kentucky basketball coach, and Paul McBrayer, assistant Cat coach, were guest speakers during the past week at cage dinners given in Lawrenceburg and Winchester.

Wednesday night the pair spoke at a banquet jointly honoring members of the Lawrenceburg and Kentucky basketball teams.

Not only Rupp, but also members of Kentucky's varsity squad, were guests last night at a dinner party held in the First Christian church at Winchester and honoring the coaches and basketball squads of Winchester, Clark County and Trapp high schools.

Mag Marks has a twit on Hood Combs. Bob Ruesch is still coming over weekend to see Elmer Rounsavall. The Kappas are still losing sleep since they found out two Yale boys were at the house and no girls were there.

Charlie Smith was in his glory at the style show; he had all the beautiful flocking around him. Tom Riley is going to India and it will take him two months just to get there. J. P. Munsey is seeing a lot of Sarah Netherly these days.

Sigma Nu prexy Bill Corum is taking new interest in Jane Richards. Lillian Mitchell plays "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" every night before she goes to bed.

Coach Calls Baseballers

First Meeting Slated For 3:30 Today In Main Gym

Paced with cut-throat 16 game schedule, including 8 Southeastern Conference bouts, Coach Frank Moseley has issued his first official call for Kentucky varsity baseball team candidates to meet this afternoon at 3:30 in Alumni gym.

Although the Cat pitching corps and catchers have been holding comparatively light workouts indoors for two weeks, the remainder of the team will be forced to round into playing shape in less than two weeks. The first assignment on the schedule pits Kentucky against Ohio State on the Stoll diamond April 5 and 6.

From last year's team that won 5 games in 12 times out, Coach Moseley will have to fill but two graduated positions, first base and center field. Lost in the June diploma round-up were Randall Phillips, the team leading hitter who batted over .500, and Bob Tice, who covered plenty of space in the outfield.

Otherwise the team shapes up much stronger than the aggregation that last season presented a powerful batting attack but was jittery as a bridgegroup at the church steps in its defensive work.

The complete schedule: April 5, 6—Ohio State, here. April 12—Kentucky, here. April 19—Cincinnati, there. April 26—Kentucky, here. April 28—Kentucky, here. May 3—A—Vanderbilt, there. May 7—Bastara, here. May 14—A—Vanderbilt, there. May 16—Cincinnati, here. May 21, 22—Tennessee, there. May 27—Xavier, there.

Favored for third place is the University of Georgia, while Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia Tech are expected to wage a three-way fight for the next place.

The "K" Club, flashing an 18-year scoring streak in the second half, gained the title of University Intramural basketball champions with a 30-20 win over Sigma Nu Tuesday night in the Gym annex.

Despite the fact that their ace scorer, Larry Spears, was kept well in hand by the smaller Greek team, the ransy "K" clubbers continually broke Joe Shepherd and Dave Zoeller loose for easy crisp shots.

During the first half neither team was able to grab a decisive advantage and, though both shot continually, the white-shirted "K" Club lived lead through by a narrow three point margin, 12-9.

In the second half the winners offense began to click and before the period was half over they had acquired a 21-12'edge.
