Fraternities didn't foresee bylaw's impact on IFC vote

Fraternity leaders said yesterday they didn't expect a year-old bylaw that prevents academically deficient chapters from voting on Interfraternity Council issues to have such a tremendous impact so soon.

The bylaw, implemented last year to penalize fraternities failing to achieve an overall grade point average of 2.3 and a pledge class GPA of 2.0, prevented eight UK fraternities from youther on several in vortant is-nities from youther on several in vortant is-

"I think they didn't realize at the time the loss of a vote would have an effect," said Ron Lee, UK fraternly adviser and assistant dean of students. "It was something they didn't expect. The intent was to keep grades up. At the time it seemed like a very proactive measure to take."
"When it was passed last year ... we looked at how many chapters would be on probation," IFC President Sean Colernan said. "Only two were (on probation) last year, so the penalty didn't seem harsh."

Of the 20 UK fraternities, only 10 are allowed to vote this semester.

Eight fraternities lost their IFC vote under the year-old bylaw and are on weekday probation: Alpha Tau Omega; Kappa Alpha Psi; Phi Kappa Psi; Phi Kappa Psi; Phi Kappa Psi; Phi Kappa Psi; Dhi Kappa Csigma Kappa; Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Sigma Chi; and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Two UK fraternities have no vote because they are under what is known as developmental status — Alpha Phi Alpha and Fab Dec Sigma velopmental status — Alpha Phi Alpha and Phi Beta Sigma. Phi Sigma Kappa President George Carson made a motion in Monday's meeting to restore voting power to the affected fraternities but the resolution was denied in a secret ballot.

"The feeling was the loss of vote didn't fit the crime of low grades," Carson said last week.

In addition to removing the IFC votes of these fraternities, the bylaw imposes a ban on social events Monday through Thursday, Coleman said. He said he was "very surprised" by the number of UK fraternities that failed to meet the academic criteria.

Coleman said the resolution directly addresses the problem by forcing fraternity members to study instead of holding social events.

"The intent of (the resolution) was per-fect," said Victor Hazard, assistant dean of students. "In the long run, that would be beneficial."

Coleman said the alcohol policy and academic resolution probably will not be brought before the IFC again until next se-

UK's Chief of Police improves protection, stresses prevention

By TONJA WILT

When W.H. McComas graduated from UK almost 30 years ago, he had no intentions of becoming a police officer — let alone a chief of police.

But a decision by the U.S. Army to assign him to the military police division began a career path which started at West Point and led back to Lexington, Ky. And now he's in charge of an organization that did not even exist in 1961.

"I was approaching the time where I was going to have to retire from the Army" he said. "It just seemed to me a logical transition from there to here."

In the UKPD's 18-year history, McComas is the first professionally trained police officer to serve as chief of police. "I brought that total picture in here, into the police department that hadn't had it before," he said. "We established procedures, policies, that are in accord with national standards, national codes."

The professionalism McComas has brought to the department in his three years at UK has earned him respect.

"Mark my own words, he is his own man," said Ll. Robert Abrams, head of Criminal Investigations.

And he is a man of his word who cares not only about protecting the University community, but about the people doing that job.

"If he tells you something, he will do it and he stands un for neorthing, he will do it and the stands un for neorthing, he will do it and he stands un for neorthing."

that job.

"If he tells you something, he will do it ... and he stands up for people too, for officers," Abrams said. "If you mess up he "Il come down on you ... in the same respect, if you do a good job he will make that known to you also."

open-door policy for the officers.

"If one of my men has a problem and wants to go directly to him, he will listen," Sgt. Doug Swiggett said.
The 51-year-old police chief has focused on campus security since coming to UK, saying that circumstances on campus make enforcing the laws a secondary priority for the department.
"We don't have the criminal element on the campus that requires us to (make) the enforcement role heavier," he said. "Our role is more to provide a service which is basically a security service or a police service.
"Crime prevention is the biggest service we offer," he said.

When McComas attended UK from When McComas attended UK from 1957-1961, crime prevention took place on a much smaller scale. There was a security department with duties limited to patrolling UK buildings instead of today's full police force with jurisdiction over all University-owned land in the state.

"We weren't even aware of campus safety when It was a student," he said.

does the crime rate.
"It would be a misconstruction on any-body's part to say that there is no need for a campus security program," he said. "You should have somebody that is re-sponsive to the faculty and staff and stu-dent's needs immediately."

dent's needs immediately."
Frequently swapping information and working well with other police departments is another important part of everyday activity at the UKPD.
"For instance, if Lexington (Lexington-Fayette Urban County Police Department) gets real busy, where they've got some-officers and students:

thing going on and there are a lot of calls coming in ... they will call us and ask us to take their calls," he said.
"There is a professionalism in police, a cooperation," McComas said. "I deal regluarly with police departments outside the city, in the other counties, both professionally and personally."

One of the most important additions to the police department is the Crime Prevention Office, McComas said. This office is responsible for safety measures such as the installation of emergency phones on campus last year.

Graduate fair aids students looking for own activities

To alleviate that out-of-place feeling, Adrian Brooks is organizing the first UK Graduate Day Fair to help grad students find their niche through activities.

The fair will give them a chance to learn about many of the UK organizations for graduate students, said Brooks, vice president of the Black Graduate and Professional Students Association. The fair will be held Oct. 9 from 11 am. to 1 p.m in room 206 Student Center.

It can be difficult for students to find out-about graduate student organizations because many of them are not registered with the Student Organizations Assembly. Additionally, often they are very specialized and small groups.

Prejudice task force says education main objective

By MARY MADDEN

A new UK Student Government Associa-tion task force aimed at fighting prejudice on campus held its first meeting last night to set goals and get organized. "We want to have some education and ac-tion," said SGA Education Senator Christa Collins, head of the Prejudice Reduction

In last night's meeting, the members dis-cussed possible methods of stopping preju-dice and discrimination at UK, then watched a video about a discrimination ex-periment performed by a third-grade teach-r.

The video experiment, in which the third-raders were discriminated against on the asis of eye color, was educational, said ask force member and SGA senator Jay Ingle, e. a political science and philosophy sophomore, said people "really can't under-stand (prejudice) until it happens to you." Daryle Cobb, task force member and president of the Black Student Union, said he thought the video represented "society as a whole" because the students who were told they were better immediately condescended to the "lesser" students. The problem with prejudice, said task force member and senator at large Shannon Smiley, is that "you can't begin to comprehend it until it happens to you."

Task force member Sam Eden, a UK adumnus and the first handicapped student to attend a Fayette County public school all four years of high school, said it is difficult for people to understand the ongoing prejudice against the handicapped.

The task force did not outline a specific plan to attack prejudice last night; however, they agreed that education is their main obsicitive. Other task force is high.

Bucks stop UK, halt streak

By TIM WIESENHAHN

The UK Volleyball team's three-game winning streak was halted last night in Memorial Coliseum by the 13th-ranked Ohio State Buckeyes.

Coach Kathy Deboer's squad battled for nearly two hours before falling 13-15, 16-14, 7-15 and 8-15 in the best-of-five series.

"It hurts me to see my team back away." DeBoer said. "And I told them that... They just couldn't size it."

From beginning to end, DeBoer said. "If we would of gone down swingting, seraching and clawing I would have been happy. But we didn't. We played tentative."

In the first game, the Cats fell behind 7-3 and DeBoer used one of her two timeouts of the game. The time on the sideline seemed to lift the team to new heights as they quickly tied the score 7-7 and UK soon gained a 13-9 lead. But the Buckeyes bounced back. Thanks to a series of kills by OSU's. Leisa Wissler, the Buckeyes tied the game at 13 and then secored the next two points to win the game. After the Cats won a long, gruel-ng second game, the Cats again lost heir momentum. This time for good.

The Buckeyes beat the Cats handily in the third game, 7-15, behind the strong play of Wissler and Holly O'Leary.

In the crucial fourth game, the action was tight as UK pulled within one point of the Buckeyes at 9-8. But from then on, it was all Wissler.

Whissler served up five consecutive winners to bring the score to 13-8. The Buckeyes closed the game on a pair of O'Leary kills.

Though the loss was painful, DeBoer managed to find some positive signs in UK's disappointing performance.

"We were able to do some things we were hoping for with Ohio State," DeBoer said. Junior Yvette Moorehead and Sophomore Angels Salvatora led UK with 17 kills each.

"We took the game to them and had some super aggressive play. Carin Zielinski, Betsie Addridge, Angela Salvatore — just went non-stop, from beginning to end," DeBoer said UK senior Laura Linder, who had 55 assists, played her best match of the year.

Cats do have shot at decency

The drop of a hat.

That's how fast the air was taken out of the UK football team's balloon once the season started. After three losses in four games, what used to be hype and enthusiasm turned into moans and groans and thoughts of basketball season.

The only goal that appears to be left for UK to shoot for this year is a respectable showing in the Southeastern Conference.

The Cats will have a real problem breaking 500 after such a weak start. In fact, UK will have to go 5-2 in the SEC to reach the 6-5 plateau.

Folks, as much as I'd like to say that's going to happen, the fact is there's just no way. What would be nice to see is a decent showing in the conference and something to build on for next year.

Let's give credit where credit is due, though.

Coach Bill Curry said after the Idiana game that "it didn't even look like the same team" that played at the Meadowlands in New Jersey a week earlier. There was as much of an improvement in the North Carolina game as there was in the IU contest.

What will improve with time is What will improve with time is the attitude about the game. Curry is teaching football to a group that is used to the Jerry Claiborne system.

Ideas are floating around that if Curry gets another recruiting class like last year's, UK's rise to the top of the SEC might come sooner than a lot of people expect. It will happen. I really believe that the football program is taking steps forward despite its stumbling 1-3 record right now.

One thing I've just got to talk about is the Louisville football program. You've probably heard about the confident statements coach Howard Schnellenberger has made about his Cardinal program. Schnellenberger said before the season started that his Cardinals were on a collision course with the national championship and that the only variable was time.

Can you believe that? Does this guy still think he's at Miami? Sportswriters and sports fans across the country are saying "Who in the lid does this guy think he is?"

I think I have the answer to his variable of time, though. I just can't count that high.

THAT TIME OF YEAR

I know we're only a few weeks into the football season, but people are starting to talk about roundball.

We're allowed to do that; we live in are starting to talk about roundball. We're allowed to do that; we live in Kentucky.

Usually people are talking about who's going to play the post, who's going to bury the three-pointer or how much depth the Cats will have.

This year's conversations have been just a little different. In fact, most of the news we're hearing about is negative:

Former UK guard Derrick Miller has had a little trouble with the law.

Clay County graduate Richie Farmer got a little homesick and went home — for a while, anyway.

Freshman walk-on Jody Thompson is experiencing dizzy spells and shortness of breath and was admitted into the UK hospital Monday.

Not the usual things people in the Bluegrass are accustomed to talking about when it comes to hoops, hult?

Don't worry about the UK basket-ball program, though. It's just a mater of time before the best program in the history of college basketball gets back into the Top 20.

I know what you're thinking. Not a pop review!

But be open-minded for a few minutes and leave any preconceived, misguided notions of the pop group Breathe behind.

It's true this band has been a vicini of radio overkill as deejays mindlessly repeat such sappy songs as "How Can I Fall!" and "Hands to Heaven" from their first Iz. But it seems no one has heard their jazz songs, and it's this component of Breathe's new album Peace of Mind that distinguishes it from the sea of mindless pop music out there.

In "Missispip Water," lead singer David Glasper really belts it out. His soulful to vice complements the impressive bass guitar accompaniment of Jaz Lochrie. Harmonica and trumpets in the background give the piece a Southern edge.

Safe campus sign that police doing their job

Campus safety does not rank high on many students' list as a major cause of stress in their lives. They can thank the UK Police Department for that.

If one pauses to reflect on UK's location, it is somewhat amazing how few crime problems the University has. Many universities and colleges located near the oldest section of a state's second-largest city encounter crime problems. The open, laid-back atmospheres of many colleges often lull students. dents into a false sense of security, and UK is no different.

As Lt. Terry Watts remarked, "From a safety standpoint, I think here on campus (students) are better off than out in the city. To put it in perspective, in a day, we might get one assault complaint. In that same day metro (police) might get 20."

Only 35 percent of campus crimes involve students, accor dingto UK Police. Consequently, a large portion of the UK Police Department's efforts are directed at safety and educatio measures, such as the Student Escort Service and emergency se crime rates on the Lexington Camp low compared to Lexington crime rates is no reason to develop a false sense of security. As UK Police said, their police force is limited in how safe it makes the campus if students, faculty and staff are not willing to use common sense.

Today, the Kernel concludes its three-part series on the UK Police Department. Reading the articles, we hope that readers have a better understanding about the purpose of the UK Police Department and its responsibility to the University community. With a population of more than 27,000, UK is not unlike a me dium-sized Kentucky city. It is the job of UK Police to ensure ly, such as traffic lights, intersections and parking. Many times small police forces are the objects of scorn and ridicule. While some of their actions may deserve criticism, it is important for and ridicule. While people to remember a police officer's point of view and why he or she may snap at someone for running through a stop sign.

Many problems UK Police have with the campus community are caused by a lack of understanding or communication. We encourage campus organizations, such as the Student Government Association, greek houses and residence halls, to meet with UK Police representatives.

Through dialogue and open discussion, new problems can be addressed and hopefully solutions to other problems can be found. If the University is to be thought of as a "small city," then it is important for everyone to take an active role in cam-pus so UK can reach its potential.

Unfortunately, the fine sport of bowling is looked down upon by so-called intellectuals who probably won't be satisfied until every human in America sirs around discussing Proust in Latin for days on end. And since doing that would probably enable me to join the U.S. Olympic yawning team, I'll pass on the intellectual angle.

But even the hard-core bowler will have to admit that the sport really could stand to upgrade its image just a trifle.

'Doggy Bag' reinforces many sexist stereotypes

By Martha J. Einerson

This is in response to the Kernel's cartoon, "The Doggy Bag," on Sept. 10-11 entitled "Lies We Guys Tell the Babes" and "Fibs Those Phillies the Babes" and "ribs Those Phillies are Full of!!"

I applaud anyone willing to deal with controversial issues. However, it is impossible to successfully satir-ize controversy without first being educated in the realities surrounding that controversy.

I must thank Kenn Minter for providing a timely and controversial topic for class discussion in "Women's Studies 200." The student response was more than I had hoped for for.

What follows is a summary of their discussion, including the reactions of the majority of the students. The general "gut" reaction included the following terms: depressive, offended, appalled and mean.

The students agreed that the cartoons were degrading to females and males, however, women were the object or the punchline in both cartoons.

the professional judgment exercised by the Kernel in running these car-

Several students talked about the Kernel's role in representing the students at UK. They all felt that these cartoons were not representative of the attitudes on this campus. (One student pointed out that the Kernel must have advocated the attitudes in the strips because they were not presented as editorials/opinions.)

We discussed the use of satire as a form of humor and the risk involved when the material serves to condone and reinforce gender stereotypes. The stereotypes characterized by the female students included frigidity, uncaring, abusive, dishonest and disinterested in sex. This portrayal (which unfortunately serves to promote the stereotypes) is subtle (for many readers) and in most cases, instidious.

If the humor was intended as sati-rie, it was grossly unbalanced. The calls was divided on this issue. Some felt the carroons contained no element of satire, while others felt some satirical humor was intended. One analysis was that in theory, Minter may have been attempting to portray both perspectives—female and male. In practice, however, he failed.

stereotypes
in both cartoons. Female sexuality was referred to in four of the eight frames in "Phillies," while male sexuality was referred to in only one frame out of eight frames in "Guys."
This imbalance suggests a denial of women's sexuality. This denial is a frightening cultural expectation/norr which leads to sexual harassment, assault and rape.
These stereotypes place women in a no-win situation, trapped within the bounds of a male-defined sexuality, while at the same time being denied their own sexuality.
Three students said the cartoons created serious doubts in them regarding honest relationships. They fleth that now they must questions all the messages they receive in relationships. In reality, relationships do not grow and develop without trust and sincerity.
Another student stated his outrage in the last frame in "Guys." This student is formint, or certainly proferminist, and truly resemed the le that "guys" cannot be actively supporting ferminism.
Get with i, Milater, even the UK Student Government Association is actively supporting ferminism.
See
Oct. 18-21 panel discussion "Feminism — The Changing Role of Women." This panel will be a part of the American Association of University Students Southern Regional Conference.
There was one serious concern shared by the entire class.

There was one serious concern shared by the entire class.
That is, the "Phillies" cartoon portrayed a young, wide-eyed woman, innocently telling a "guy" she "didn't do it on the first date." It was followed immediately by the "censored" frame which overly portrayed a rape, implying and reinforcing the perception that women say "one" when they mean "yes."
Minter's "lies" were especially thoughtless given the numbers of college women totaly who are raped, notably date raped. (One in six college women will be raped before they finish their degree.) It appears that Minter is blissfully ignorant of these realities.
What I found most obvious and ant of these realities.

What I found most obvious and appalling were the days chosen to run the cartoons. They ran the Monday and Tuesday following "Take Back the Night," which was a nationwide march protesting violence against women. The Kernel failed to report on the Lexington march. The newspaper's message is loud and clear.

Campus must make the effort

I was pleased to see the Sept. 4 Kernel editorial dealing with the showcasing of art on campus. The College of Fine Arts, and the Art Department in particular, are rightfully proud of the student and faculty sculpture in outdoor campus locations.

ty scuipure in outdoor campus socabringing visual art into daily contact with people on campus is precisely the aim of the outdoor sculpture program. Professor Jack Gron and his students are to be commended for succeeding in this aim, and the Kernel in to be commended for noting their success.
People around campus are indeed talking about art, and we hope that they will be drawn into the UK Art Museum, the Center for Contemporary Art and other galleries to see what's there.

The Kernel editorial calls for more showcasing of the work of fine arts students on campus. Actually, there are occasions during the year when music, theater and other performing art students are featured outdoors.

One of these is the Outdoor Arts Festival, which has taken place every April for the last three years, and out of which grew the present outstanding Outdoor Sculpture program.

standing Outdoor Sculpture program.

From time to time other groups (for example the Tuba/Euphonium Ensemble, Trombone Choir, Percussion Ensemble) will perform on campus this year, as they have in the past. We certainly encouraged this activity of our students, and will continue to do so.

The students, faculty and staff of the College of Fine Arts, however, hope that people will do more than merely stop and look at or listen to the campus.

We want people to come to our we want people to come to our student performances and exhibits. The Otis A. Singletary Center for the Arts is home to almost 400 per-formances per year, many at no charge, and many presented by UK School of Music students.

We try to make available, as much as our students' schedules permit, presentations from student mu-sicians and actors, as well as student art work, on campus in outdoor set-art work, on campus in outdoor settings.

However, we hope that the campus community will exercise a bit initiative to come and appreciate the work of our students as they perform and display their work in appropriate indoor spaces — all art, als, is not portable.

Finally, we call upon the Kentacky Kernel to continue its efforts to help keep the campus community in the community of the provided of the presentations of our students.

We in the College of Fine Arts are proud of what our students are doing for the arts on campus, and we're glad the Kernel noted this contribution.

Noting students today are more open-minded than those of past gen-erations, McComas said today's col-lege students view police officers more favorably than students of past congrations.

generations.
"There is not this fear that 'he is a police officer and he's going to do something." I think students really understand," McComas said.
And this new trend for students to see police officers as people who can help them instead of as a threat has made McComas' job a little bit ressier.

four-day visit to the Iranian capital, Tehran, having failed to persuade Iranian leaders not to send food and other essentials to Iraq.

Washington had hoped that Assad, newly aligned with the West since the crisis broke out with the Aug. 2 Invasion of Kuwait, could secure a pledge from his Iranian allies to fully observe the embargo.

But sources close to the Syrian delegation said Tehran insisted that the embargo allows "humanitarian shipments" of food.

Saddam has declared he would rather go to war than let the U.N-ordered embargo "strangle" his Country.

The Iraqi rhetoric showed no signs of abating, Baghdad announced it would put President Bush "on trial" for "crimes against the peoples of the world," and it set a date — Oct. 15.

Shevardmadze suggested the same should be done to Saddam.

Speaking on the second day of the 45th U.N. General Assembly, he said that people who take hostages, use torture, threaten nations with destruction and are "guilty of particular ruthlessness in the use of force" should be tried by an international tribunal for their "crime against hu-
