One Side, And T'Other

Because the bill for additional allowance for college veterans of World War II proposed by the veterans at the University is receiving state-wide attention, the views both pro and con are here presented.

The bill, now before the legislature, would supplement federal allowances under the GI Bill of Rights with state funds. Each single man would receive $10 and each married man, $35 per month, as long as they qualify for educational benefits, and are attending some educational institution in Kentucky. Each man must have been a resident of Kentucky when he entered the service.

CON—

To all veterans on the campus:

As an unmarried member of the Veterans' club, I am writing to express the opinions of myself and of some other veterans with whom I have conversed, in regard to the bill proposed to the state legislature whereby veterans going to school in this state will receive additional subsistence allowances.

First of all, I would like to question the attitude of the veterans proposing or supporting such a bill. Should we come back from the war with the concept that we should receive more favors such as those in this bill, in addition to those already allotted to us? As the situation now exists, we are in a far better financial position to receive our education than those students in past and present who have had to work their way through college. Also, it is not true that the veterans who are attending school are already receiving far greater benefits than those who are not? Surely these are factors which we cannot overlook.

Looking at the matter from a more practical viewpoint, this bill would impose a great strain on our already overburdened state budget. There are so many worthy causes for which this money needs to be appropriated, such as the providing of better education in all schools and colleges throughout the state. An amount totaling several million dollars would be employed in meeting the requirements of the bill, and I am convinced that this state in its present condition could not afford it.

Some may say that this bill represents an investment in the young men of this state in hopes of building a better state. But could not this aim be achieved to a greater advantage by raising the general educational standard throughout the state and thereby aiding not only veterans who may attend school, but also all young people seeking an education and their descendants who may do the same?

Some legislators, with whom I have talked, have expressed the opinion that the sum of money necessitated by this proposed legislation could only be obtained either by reducing the appropriations for other state projects, perhaps more in need, or by enacting bills providing for increased taxation.

I also contend that neither the unmarried veterans nor the married veterans without children have a pressing need for additional subsistence allowances. If we have a real interest in getting an education, I believe the vast majority of us will continue to go to school even though this extra allotment is not granted. In most cases, the wives of the married veterans who do not have children can, and probably do, work. Their salaries should make the financial situation of this group of married men as good as, if not better than, the financial situation of the unmarried men.

I believe the married veterans who have children do need more money in order to provide for the needs of their children, but this proposed bill makes no distinction between the married men who do have children and those who do not. Even Public Law 346 under the federal GI bill makes no discrimination in this case, which I consider a negligence. In order to remedy this situation, I think it would be better if the veterans used their influence to change the GI bill accordingly rather than to ask appropriations from the state.

You yourself, have probably used the expression, "Things are tough all over!" This is definitely true today. Instead of asking for supplementary grants from the state, would it not be more proper for us to say "Thanks for the benefits we are already receiving," and strive to make our present allowances meet our needs?

William C. Rogers

PRO—

First, I am not agreed on one basic assumption, viz., that the people of the state want to do something for the veterans, then there really will not be much reconciliation between the two views on this subject.

Let me clarify the position of the veteran in regard to this bill and/or any other piece of legislation that has been or will be enacted for the benefit of veterans of this war. The veterans that I know do not feel that the state or the federal government owes them a living or that any monetary obligation is owed them that is not owed to any other citizen or group of citizens regardless of the fact of military service.

The present bill before the Kentucky legislature is only a request. A request such as this could be placed in the form of a bill by any group of citizens that feels that it should be entitled to some benefit that the state can bestow. If the general assembly does not feel that it is suitable to enact such a request into law then it shall be no, and the Veterans' club which is sponsoring the bill cannot feel that a wrong has been done. We believe, and sincerely, that we have a just request for which there are substantial reasons. One paramount fact should remain in your mind throughout this discussion. The money asked for is needed. It is not merely an attempt to extort money from the state treasury that could be better spent (an idea which has been indirectly expressed), purely on the so-called magic of the word, "veteran." There are men now in school under one or the other of the two federal laws who have leaned heavily on money saved during the war and who will doubtless have to discontinue their college work sometime in the future because of lack of funds. The present allowance from the federal government, even though very generous, is by far insufficient to meet the obligations that many of us have incurred during the preceding war years. In reality, then, to those who find the present allowance insufficient, and I believe this to be the very large majority, there may as well be no federal allowance, because when the funds with which we have so far supplemented our federal allowance run out, we will have to retire from school.

This bill is an opportunity for the state to invest in the young people of the state, who, one day, sooner or later, will have to take over the reins of the state government, whether they like it or not. These people affected will help to form the voting, thinking, and acting public of tomorrow, and every dollar spent toward educating them is another dollar spent for the betterment of the state as a whole. If this money can be better spent in other channels, then, if it pleases the general assembly, spend it for those other things. If our position becomes untenable, I believe that we, as a group, will be the first to recognize our fault. If we fail to detect the alleged wrong, then we as open-minded, free-thinking individuals will be reasonable enough to listen to such claims and, if wrong, to soundly denounce our own plans.

There are so many points for and against such an issue as this that I feel that I have not the mental acumen to present all of the pros or cons in this letter. Needless to say, students or citizens of Kentucky outside of our immediate area here at the University are very cordially invited to write and inquire about the work of the Veterans' club, not only on this matter but on any other point that might come up concerning us as a group or as one of the community of groups to which we belong. As veterans we have joined together into a club, but as students and citizens of the state we have the same problems in the club as we do out. Those same problems solved or unsolved affect every one of us just as much as they affect us, and undoubtedly we either work them out together or no equitable solution will be effected.

Washington Frank Serini, recently voted most popular man at UK, is a native of Tuckahoe, New York. He graduated from high school there in June of 1942, and soon after entered the Marine Corps, in which he served for six months.

Wash came to Kentucky in June, 1944, and went out for football; his outstanding exhibition of tackling and offensive playing brought him a berth on the Southeastern Conference first team in 1944, and placed on the second team during the past season. He also received honorable mention on the Associated Press All-American football team for the past two years.

Serini has put on a number of extra pounds since the end of last football season; he attributes this gain to his love for spaghetti and steaks, and Wash was informed by Coach Bryant that he must lose 15 pounds. This undoubtedly will put a cramp in the big boy's eating, but Wash, understanding the necessity of "Bryant's order," is sacrificing his spaghetti and steaks, and has, to this date, lost seven pounds.

Serini's faith in Coach Bryant is boundless. As he expressed it, "Bryant and his coaching staff are one of the finest groups of men Kentucky could have gotten to pull the University off the bottom of the SEC."

The big wildcat tackle believes his most embarrassing moment occurred during the Kentucky-West Virginia game of 1944 when his hip pads broke, and it was necessary to change them in mid-field while his teammates formed a human wall around him.

Wash looks upon the Georgia game of '44 as the most exciting game in which he has ever participated. With only one play remaining in the game, the Wildcats were leading Georgia 12-7; in the last play, Georgia scored a touchdown, winning the game 13-12.

Sid Luckman is Serini's favorite athlete and he plays on Wash's favorite team, the Chicago Bears. Wash, along with the many Kentucky football fans, is looking forward to the kick-off of the coming season, a season which he believes—and feels confident—will be a winning year for the Wildcats.

Says College Thesis:
Drinking and Thieving:

The Louisiana State University board of supervisors was told in a report made public today that "drinking and thieving" is on the increase on southern college campuses.

The report, prepared by Dr. Houston T. Karnes, LSU assistant professor of mathematics and former acting dean of men, was submitted to the last meeting of the LSU board by Dr. W. B. Hatcher, president of LSU.

Dr. Karnes attended a meeting of the deans of men of southern colleges and universities in Atlanta last October 19 and 20, from which his conclusions were drawn. "Drinking and thieving were declared to be in the ascendancy on all campuses," Dr. Karnes reported. "The reports made by the deans indicate that drinking, and especially in the fraternities houses, than at other places."

"Many of the other schools are located in dry counties," he added. Colleges represented at the Atlanta meeting, Dr. Karnes said, were Georgia Tech, University of Florida, University of North Carolina, University of Alabama, Mississippi State, Auburn, North Carolina State, Emory University, and Louisiana State.

Karnes declared that LSU has had "virtually no trouble" on the score of returning war veterans.

Lips that touch wine shall never touch mine, declared the coed, and after she graduated she taught school for years and years.

Schools of the Future:
Schools of the future will be service stations of education, predicts Dr. Lester H. Munzenmayer, professor of education at Kent State University.

Schooling will be more of a continuous program, the professor explains. Every two or three years, students will return to study and apply the latest methods in their fields. Munzenmayer believes that the ability to live and work with people will be highly stressed in the schoolrooms of tomorrow. Education will be less formal and more emphasis will be placed on knowledge, skill and actual working experience rather than just textbook material, he adds.

Centers of Learning:

Foul Play:
Class members of Reporting Public Affairs commit a blunder a week.

A pale senior dashed up the winding steps from The Kernel office last Friday and shouted, "Dr. Plummer, I hear someone meaning down there! Probably hidgedown with a blunt instrument!"

Dr. Plummer and two bystanders investigated. A Negro painter lying behind a box on the floor near the foot of the steps was merely groaning in his sleep.

"Well, he looked dead anyway," retorted the now red-faced senior in answer to the men's jeers.

Life, Liberty, and Pursuit

By Adele Demman

We have all been reading the numerous comments made by the newspaper sages, who predict that weapons of war will not be useful in peacetime. Well, one man, named Margie Hall's father, commonly referred to as Mr. Hall, decided that the sages were wrong—so when it began to snow, he went down town to Rears and Sawback (any reference to a well-established mail order house is purely coincidental) and with catalogue in-hand, he purchased a flame thrower, which he intended to use to melt the ice off of his front pavement. After several hours of trying to light the thing, he was mostly frozen and the ice still resided on the pavement in its solid splendor with all the disgusting traits of the Rock of Gibraltar. He gave up, returned the flame thrower to its former owner, and now he firmly believes that man cannot triumph over nature.

Disappointed beyond tears, and climbing the wall as not being able to get a new Chevrolet soon enough, one of our students was consoled to discover that "Chevrolet" meant "little goat" in French. The names he has used will not be printed here, on account of because it is best to use only two cuss words in a column at one time.

Grid Practice Starts; Cagers Ready For Vols

Rejuvenation of the football team at Kentucky started this week with the hopes of bringing to an end the days that spectators have had to leave Stoll field with disappointment in their hearts and tears in their eyes. The new regime started Monday and if things work out as planned, Kentucky's football gains will no longer be an obstacle course that the Wildcats can't get over. No more heart breaking second half losses to the Vols like the Cats humiliatingly suffered this year.

Yes, football practice got under way this week in spite of Old Man Winter's more than three-inch blanket of snow that covered the practice field. Coach Bryant and his still incomplete staff took advantage of an opportunity and worked out the large squad in the gym, when the basketball team called off practice Monday to fully recover after the return trip from Paducah. There were between 65 and 70 candidates out for the first day's practice, and after some skill practice, the squad moved onto the floor. Calisthenics were the order of the day to limber up muscles that were out of condition from months of rest or serving in the armed forces.

Coach Leslie worked out with some 25 guards and tackles. Coach Whitlow and Manager Harris caught passes from the five center prospects. Coach Moseley put the backfield candidates, whose number reached 26, through some shifting exercises, and the head mentor himself limbered 13 end hopefuls. Practice continued through the week even though most of the fellows could hardly walk after the first day. The squad patiently waited until the cagers finished each day, then scrambled onto the floor and started their work. At least a dozen of the large number out for practice were returning veterans, some of whom were key letters at Kentucky in the past, such as Charlie Kuhn, Jay Rhodemeyer, Bob Bealer, etc.

Wildcats Overwhelm Vandy; Parkinson Leads Scoring

The Kentucky Wildcats won their 17th victory in 19 games last Saturday night when they rolled over the Vanderbilt Commodores by a score of 46-31. Capt. Jack Parkinson led the Wildcat scorers by looping in 23 markers. The game was a walk away for the Kentucky team as they more than doubled the score. The halftime score was 30-19 in favor of the Wildcats.

Kentucky has won 24 out of 27 games with the Vandy cagers. The only time that the Vanderbilt squad threatened was in the second period when they began to ring up a number of points while the Cats remained motionless. However, the "mountain boys" of Kentucky began to move, slowing down the pace of the medics of Vanderbilt considerably. Running second to Capt. Parkinson in scoring last weekend was Ralph Beard who made 13 points. Next in line came Scotty 23 points who scored the points for the Wildcats. The Wildcats had previously beaten the Commodores this season by a score of 59-37.

The last time that a Kentucky team was beaten by Vanderbilt was in the season of 1938-39 when the Commodores won, 40-32. However, there have been many close games between the two squads since that time.

This was the fifth SEC win for the Wildcats compared to no losses. Kentucky and Louisiana State are now tied for first place in the SEC with five wins and no losses. In Scotty's 23 points in the game last Saturday night, Jack Parkinson remained in second place in the Southeastern Conference, only five points behind the leader, Nolan, the lanky center from Georgia Tech. Parkinson has now scored 218 points and seems sure to be top scorer for the Wildcats with only two games remaining after tomorrow night's tilt with Tennessee. It seems to be a race as to who will be second high scorer for the Cats.

Captain Jack

Jack Tingle, who is now in second place, is only seven points ahead of Ralph Beard, who in turn is only eight points in front of Wallace Jones.

The scoring to date is:

Player	G	FG	FT	PF	TP

Ohio Game Monday

After the game Saturday night, Coach Rupp will take the Wildcats to Athens, Ohio, where they will encounter, for the second time this season, the Ohio University quietest. Shortly after the Christmas holidays, the Cats played Ohio U. here and defeated them 57-48. In this game the Kentuckians were slow in getting started, but managed to pull away in the final minutes.

Kentucky has not been beaten by Ohio University the four times they have met. In the 1943-44 season, Kentucky came in contact with Ohio U. for the first time, beating them, 61-35. Last year the 'Cats played the Ohio U. team twice, defeating them by scores of 59-46 and 61-38. The past game this season was the closest tilt that Kentucky has ever played with them.

Intramurals

By Jim Maynard

The intramural tournament grew into its final stages with Sigma Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Gas House Gang, and Sad Sacks leading in the elimination after Wednesday night's game. Last week it was stated that there might be some "dark horses" in tournament. Time has proven that these rumors were not unfounded. Alpha Gamma Rho breezed through two games only to be stopped by Sigma Chi. Delta Tau Delta won their first game but were defeated by Sigma Chi. An upset of the tournament was the defeat of the Phi Delta by Pi Kappa Alpha Sigma Alpha Epsilon cagers took to the floor to defeat Sigma Nu.

In the independent league the Veterans bowed to Morgan Raiders who in turn were defeated by Wildcat Manors. Another dark horse in the independent league was the Sad Sacks who breezed through three games to get into the semi-finals. The Panthers defeated Breckinridge hall and the Gas House Gang snatched victory from the Demons in the last fifteen seconds of play. Gas House Gang added another win to their list by defeating the Panthers.

The finals between fraternities and independents will be played Thursday, Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. Twenty-five cents admission will be charged for students and others. The proceeds will go to World Student Service Fund which is making a nation-wide drive through the universities. University of Kentucky's quota is $2,500. The object of this organization is to help students and professors in Europe and Asia forward their education. All students are urged to attend the finals of the fraternity and independent championship.

Boxing entries are extended another week. Volleyball "round robin" will start Monday. Check intramural bulletin board for the elimination schedule.

Time Out!

By O. C. Halvard Jr.

Remember the Lost Battalion? They were the third, fourth, and fifth teams of the Wildcats squad. The Lost Battalion started off the season with a couple of games, then sort of got lost. Some of the boys continued to work out with the regulars and others just seemed to disappear.

Well, the Lost Battalion reorganized about two weeks ago and charged over to Paris to beat a Paris independent team. Then last week Crockett, Weber and Lorraine led the Battalion to their second victory over the Midway Independents. This time by the close score of 56-53.

Ralph Beard was back practicing Tuesday afternoon. He took an Army physical Monday in Louisville, but was placed in 4-F for stammering.

Overheard last Friday about noon, Joe Holland said, "Saw your picture in 'The Kernel' today." To which Wilbur Schu replied, "Yes, Introduce me—ha! ha! I've been here four years and now they introduce me."

Sorry, Wilbur, we didn't mean it that way. As you know Introduce's has been a standing head in the column since back during the football season. But don't you think that out of over 3,000 students there might have been a few who didn't know you until last week's Kernel came out?

Fouts and Penalties

A headline in one of the recent papers which read, "New York Race Tracks To Stop Doping, aroused the following question in the mind of a two-back hay buyer. Does this mean I won't be able to dope out the races anymore?"

After the contest with Ohio U., the Kentuckians have only one more regular scheduled game. This will be with Xavier in Alumni gym on February 23.

Coach Adolph Rupp sent his charges through a strenuous workout this week in preparation for the final Southeastern Conference tilt and possible leadership of the SEC.

The victory laden Wildcats of Kentucky will meet their arch rival of the ages tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Alumni Gym when they clash, for the second time this season, with the Volunteers of Tennessee.

In a game at Knoxville on January 19, the Wildcats defeated the Tennessee boys by the large margin 50-32. The Kentuckians led throughout the game and the Volunteers did not, at any time, threaten to take the lead.

The rivalry between Tennessee and Kentucky has always been red hot and usually the two schools end up the season in the finals of the Southeastern Conference tournament. Kentucky was beaten by the Volunteers in football last season, but the Wildcats held their own and outplayed the Tennessee boys for the first half, only to lose by a slim margin. However, the brother cagers came back to avenge this defeat when they rolled over the Volunteers on the Tennessee court in January.

Kentucky and Tennessee have met on the hardwood thirty-six times and the Ruppmen have come out victorious twenty-seven times.

In the 43-44 season, the two teams did not meet but in the previous season, Kentucky dropped the Volunteers by scores of 39-28 and 53-29 only to lose the final round of the conference to them by a three-point margin. The score — 23-20. In the 1941-42 season, both teams won one tilt. In the past ten years, the Kentucky teams have scored 928 points while the Tennessee teams have scored 824 points.

However, Tennessee is always a team that will bear watching, and although Kentucky is slightly favored as they are playing on their home court, the game tomorrow night will be a toss up.
