Raven Run Nature Sanctuary offers a peaceful refuge for nature lovers

By Charlie Dennison
THE KENTUCKY KERNEL

In his poies "The Lake Isles of Innistree," William B. Yeats remarked, "And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow, dropping from the veils of the morning to where the crickets sing."

The peace Yeats speaks of exists not only in his Innistree, but also in the wildlife, nature trails, and the beautiful Kentucky River Overlook at Lexington's Raven Run Nature Sanctuary.

Lexington's rawen remains the trutary.

Exotic ferns, 49 different butterfiles and gorgeous wildflowers flourish on the trails of Rawen Run. More than 8 miles of trails make up the area including a paved, barrier-free trail called the Freedom trail. Aside from the Kentucky River Overlook, other sights include the Mills Fond Dam and remnants of limestone at the Lime Kiln.

"Raven Run has an excellent ability to educate and emphasize the importance of learning about the environment," said Rodrian, a UK biology graduate. "We have plaques surrounding a lot of wildlife that inform people of what they are."
In the nature center, Rodrian showed off a copperhead found on the trail years ago. "Don't worry," she said. "There aren't any around here anymore."

Volleyball Cats in for gut check

It may not be March Madness yet, but UK is on the bubble.

UK volleyball, that is. In the midst of the program's most successful season in a decade, the Cats enter their final stretch of Southeastern Conference games squarely on the bubble for the 64-team NCAA Tournament field. Head coach Craig Skinner believes his team can control its destination.

Going to the NCAÄ is definitely in our sights."

UK (157, 84 SEC) set agoal at the beginning of the season to make the NCAA Tournament. At that time, it seemed improbable the team would find itself in position to qualify. The Cats were picked last in the SEC in the preseason and have not been to the tournament since 1993. However, Skinner said, he is not surprised with the team's performance.

"They are competitive and tough," he said. "They strive to be great."

The Cats anticipated being where they are.

"Am I surprised? No," senior middle blocker Amy Kaplan said. "We worked our butts off all summer. We expected to do well."

UK has an opportunity to improve its NCAA resume this weekend with home matches tonight against South Carolina and Sunday versus Tennessee. The Volunteers swept UK two weeks ago in Knoxville. Tenn., and leads UK by one game in league standings. The Vols and Wildcats are both in contention for an at-large berth in the tournament. Skinner noted the importance of the weekend.

"We're at home and it's a big opportunity for us to do well and improve our chances of making the NCAA Tournament," he said. "We have a shot to do some very special things and our kids are very excited about that."

The players are focused on avenging the earlier loss to Tennessee.

Before the Cats take on Tennessee, they must first deal with South Carolina tonight at 7:30. UK defeated the Gamecocks 3-1 in Columbia earlier this year, and will look to add one more loss to South Carolina's nine in the SEC this season. Skinner knows his team will need to match South Carolina's intensity at the beginning of the match.

"They've started a lot of matches quickly." he said. "It's important that we control the tempo. We have to play good defense, because South Carolina's have to play good defense, because South Carolina has some really good hitters."

Zaremski somehow balances everything, and, according to Obermeier, never complains a bit.

"He just loves hockey and, most of all, he wants to be in the Air Force," Obermeier said. "Sometimes we'll go out on the road or we'll be traveling and he'll notice a plane and he'll just yell out the name of the plane. He's very knowledgeable and he loves with he hockey Somehow it doesn't get to him at all."

Both of Zaremski's activities take up an incredible amount of time, energy and heart, but they seem to help one another out. For example, the twice-weekly, one-hour required workouts aren't enough. Although he doesn't have the time to join other cadets that work out together at the Johnson Center, hockey.

Redevelopment grant a boon to Lexington

Lexington's last barracks-style housing project — Bluegrass-Aspendale — is going to be torn down and a new neighborhood will be built in its place, thanks to a $20 million federal grant awarded to the city last month from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The allocation is known as Hope VI grant, and the plan is to transform the downtown project into a mixture of 419 homes, some of them Lexington Housing Authority-owned townhouses, duplexes and apartments, some of them privately-owned homes, according to the Lexington Housing Authority-owned townhouses, duplexes and apartments, some of them privately-owned homes, according to the Lexington Housing Authority-owned townhouses, duplexes and apartments, some of them privately-owned homes, according to the Lexington Housing Authority-owned townhouses, duplexes and apartments, some of them privately-owned homes, according to the Lexington Housing Authority-owned townhouses, duplexes and apartments and the plant of the project will include a $400-student elementary school.

To top it off, the project will include mew streets and a grand entryway, according to the Herald-Leader.

Out of the lessons public officials have learned since embarking on public housing development 40 years ago is that the barracks-style developments concentrates and crystallizes proverty — which isn't desirable.

Policymakers have

Austin Simms, executive director of the Lexington Housing Authority, plans to give relocation counseling and aid to those required to relocate. That's important, because finding important places to live will be difficult for people with such tight pockethooks.

be difficult for people with such tight pock-etbooks.

Similar programs should be set up to ensure that people who actually need the housing most return to the neighborhood when it is complete, and that no group of people is excluded.

We understand that some residents are reluctant to leave their community, but the change is for the best. Hopefully Brown, the council and Mayor Teresa Isaac will be able to work with the housing authority and come up with a redevelopment plan that addresses these concerns and makes this low-income community a better place to live.

UK must deal with diversity now

The issue of diversity is going to be with us for sometime. It would be very shameful in the near future. When on the control of the control rollinear. This notion continues to be complasized any time the issue comes up. What about our failure to support the minorities on campus? Why don't we emphasize that we fell short in our recruiting effort as a school? That is the problem. We are competing with other schools for the best. If the best are not coming here it is not because we raised the scores to enter here. It is because there is something that did not attract the best students to this place. Although this issue is sensitive, when dealt students to this place. Although this issue is sensitive, when dealt conclude the score of the sensitive when dealt conclude the sensitive when dealt conclude the sensitive shock.

Kentucky cannot isolate itself for too long. Friends from New York should not come here to have a culture shock.

The world is moving toward a global economy and UK should lead the way in transforming this great state into a greater one.

There must be pragmatic steps in dealing with the issue of diversity on our campus. UK Multicultural Af-me that I experienced my first racist shock on campus around that same time. I wished my entire class had witnessed this.

One wonders why anyone would think racism is not an issue when Neo-Nazis shout, "white power" in predominantly black Toledo, Ohio neighborhoods. We cannot solve a problem when we think there is no problem in the first place.

The entire school must change its attitude towards the issue of race and diversity. When the UK administration in part emphasizes that the recent drop in black freshmen is due to a raise in the nation?

When the UK administration in part emphasizes that the schooltyping to say? Are there not enough black students making that score in the nation?

Other schools have higher entrance scores and yet do not have a 40 percent drop in black freshmen enrollment. This notion continues to be emphasized any time the issue comes up.

What about our failure to support must be financial support for minority students needing financial assistance.

Students should not be asking themselves, why am I the only black in my class?

I find myself asking this in all my classes this semester. In this semes, it would be great if the issues of diversity were tackled departmentally. We all have different needs in making our academic and administrative departments more diverse. Each departments more diverse. Each department should find solutions to their problems.

The President's Commission on Diversity should supervise these departmental efforts. They should conduct workshops for faculty, staff and the staff of the staff of the staff and the staff of the s either furthering liberal distaste for the Bush agenda or distancing the president from the various constituencies that helped him garner his victory last Bush's campaign last year was run on a platform that combined a tough, go get'em attitude toward Iraq, passionate brand of neo-conservative Christianity hat tends to drive people to speak in "tongues," handle snakes, or to gawk gaggle at pictures of aborted fesues. But if you were to gauge the politic winds today you'd find a general disenchantment among Bush's once-prized voting demographic.

One year after the election, Bush has crashed and burned

Perhaps it was the fact that Bush had the nerve to nominate Harriet Miers, whose credentials certainly didn't fulfill the desires of neo-cons to overturn Roe t. Wode, mandate prayer in school or repeal affirmative action, to the Supreme Court. Or maybe it is his unvillingness to take a hard-line Zionist approach to the Israel-Palestine conflict. Perhaps it's even his inability to the succeeded in simultaneously tearing this country appart and also uniting it: against him. With only 39 percent of the country approving of the job he's doing, President Bush doesn't have very many friends left among the American electorate, and thoy what he really is: a recovering-alcoholic Bible-beater whose administration is based on fervent religious factions and a willingness to distort at the highest level.
