Funkhouser Sounds Warning Note About Bird Life

"Birds are one of the greatest factors in reducing the high cost of living," said Doctor W. D. Funkhouser, head of the Department of Zoology, University of Kentucky, in an address made Audubon Day at the Lexington Public Library.

"Since many of our native song birds are insect eaters and insects cost the farmer on an average of $8,000,000 a year in the destruction of crops, the bird is the farmer's most valuable ally. The song birds, however, are fast disappearing," said he, "and unless protective measures are soon taken will soon be extinct. At the average rate of decrease per year in Kentucky in three or four years there will be no bluebirds or quail left; in fifteen years no song birds of any kind.

"While the loss of our song birds is caused to some extent by changed economic conditions of the country such as the clearing of the land by the farmer for cultivation purposes of native shrubs and bushes on which many birds formerly subsisted, yet the loss is to some extent preventable just by killing of English sparrows and cats who are the song birds' chief enemies and then by feeding the birds in winter, and building homes for them."

Strollers to Establish An Annual Sinking Fund

Plans have been made by The Strollers, dramatic organization of the University of Kentucky, for a sinking fund which in time will be used to provide a permanent Stroller home, either in the form of adequate rooms or a building of some kind. These plans originated at a recent meeting of the members of the club, at which time it was decided to lay aside at least $150 each year for this purpose.

Officers for the next year were also elected at this meeting. Herndon Evans, Frankfort, stage manager of "The Climbers," the Stroller play for this year, was elected president. Other officers were: Martha Buckman, Henderson, vice president; J. Burton Prewitt, Mt. Sterling, secretary-treasurer; William Finn, Covington, business manager of the play next year; Fred Augsburg, Lexington, advertising manager of next year's play.

Center Man Honored; "No Chance to Reach Mars"

Dr. Walter H. Coolidge, chemistry professor at Center College, was elected president to succeed Paul P. Boyd of the Kentucky Academy of Science, at its seventh annual meeting held in the Physics Lecture room, University of Kentucky, May 8. Dr. G. D. Smith, Richmond, was elected vice-president to succeed Dr. Coolidge, Dr. Alfred M. Peters, Lexington, was re-elected secretary, and J. S. McHargue was re-elected treasurer. Twenty-four new members and eight corresponding members were admitted to the Academy.

Dr. R. A. Millikan, of Chicago University, was the speaker of the afternoon session. He discussed "The Twentieth Century's Contribution to our Knowledge of the Atom"—bringing out the point that the atom is not indivisible, but Sir Oliver Lodge, a world famous scientist, predicts the use of the atomic power within a few years.

"Atmospheric, climatic and economic conditions on Mars decree that man, constituted as we are, could not exist there," said Dr. Henry Meir, a scientist of Center College, in his discussion of some of the factors considered in attempting to communicate with the supposed inhabitants of Mars. He explained graphically that it was an impossibility and a dream and his fellow scientists offered no argument against his position.

Dr. Chas. A. The purpose of the society is to investigate and gather material about tracts of land which have remained in their natural conditions with the view of asking the Government to set these tracts aside as Government reserves or to make national parks of them that scientific students may have such places to carry on research and study.

Doctor Shull is in charge of listing Kentucky and Tennessee land areas and requests information of the citizens of the State about all such land areas that may still be existing in their natural state, such as the cypress swamp land along the Mississippi river and of unmoleted deciduous forest areas. Information of such natural formations as Mammoth Cave and Natural Bridge are also desired.

No Faculty Increase For the 1920-21 Session

The University of Kentucky will be unable to increase its faculty for the forthcoming scholastic year, owing to the fact that it is about $150,000 short of what is actually needed, according to University authorities. About $470,000 was appropriated for the use of the University the next fiscal year by recent legislation. This fact was made known when the executive committee of the University met and approved the budget with minor changes for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It will be finally acted upon by the Board of Trustees at the next quarterly meeting to be held June 1. A considerable increase in the student body is expected and instructors are greatly needed.
