Eddie Sutton resigns as coach

'Love' for UK provided as reason for quitting

Yesterday afternoon, Sutton left a message on the answering machine of his trainer, Walt McCombs.

McCombs repeated the message: "He said, 'I appreciate your taking care of the team. That was one thing I never had to worry about. About these reports, there was no truth to them whatsoever. I'll resign later this evening. Love you.'"

"And he hung up," McCombs said. "He just sounded like a beaten man."

Saying it was in the "best interests" of the UK program, Sutton resigned as the men's basketball coach yesterday, just 24 hours after firmly stating he would not step down from the position.

Sutton, who made the announcement on national television, said he was not pressured by the UK administration to resign.

Rather, he said, it was his sole concern for the UK basketball program and his family that caused him to suddenly change his mind about the decision.

"My family, my players and I just feel like for the best interests of the University of Kentucky basketball program, it's best for someone else to come in and take over," Sutton said.

"After much thought, consideration and consultation with my family and a lot of praying, I've decided I'm going to resign from the University of Kentucky," Sutton said. "And I do it for one reason: the love I have for the University of Kentucky, the Kentucky basketball program and the people of the Commonwealth."

In a press conference following Sutton's last night, UK president David Roselle said he did not discourage the coach from resigning, but rather, indicated that he had told Sutton his resignation would be a good move for the UK program.

"The implication was clear as to what was good for the program," Roselle said. "Yeah, we talked about continuation of the program, what was good for the program."

Roselle also said Sutton was aware of a meeting of the Athletics Association Board of Directors scheduled for Tuesday and knew that his future at UK would be discussed. The board meeting was cancelled after Sutton's announcement.

If Sutton would not have resigned as head coach, Roselle said a review of the basketball program fact that his name is not mentioned in any of the 18 allegations charged by the NCAA against UK.

"I still maintain that I am innocent," he said. "I stand by the fact that I have tried to run an honest basketball program."

Sutton was angered by a televised report Saturday that indicated he would offer to fire his assistant coaches to keep his job. Both Sutton and Roselle said yesterday that the report was false.

"An untruth was told," Sutton said. "I've always tried to be loyal to my staff. In no way would I dump my staff to save my position."

"These incidents have popped up, and I think they will continue to do so, and I think a lot of people are going to get hurt. I can't see doing that."

Roselle said that besides the NCAA investigation, problems with recruiting, academics and competitiveness also added to "the considerable difficulty with the basketball program."

With this in mind, Roselle said he agreed with Sutton's reasoning that his resignation was best for the program. Roselle said that, with a new athletics director — C.M. Newton, currently head basketball coach at Vanderbilt University — and soon, a new basketball coach, the UK program is "well-positioned for a fresh start."

was to be presented to the board and a vote by the board to fire Sutton was possible.

"I had thought that there could be such a vote by the Athletics Board," Roselle said.

Roselle said the University will honor the remaining year on Sutton's contract, which will cost UK $84,334.

UK will be under no further financial obligations to Sutton for other money he makes as UK coach from such enterprises as promotions or radio and television shows.

Sutton maintained his innocence yesterday, reiterating the

C.M. Newton, UK's new athletic director, shakes hands with former basketball coach Eddie Sutton after the Cat's loss to Vanderbilt earlier this season. Sutton resigned as head coach yesterday afternoon.

"C.M. will move with dispatch to employ a coach who can restore the tradition of Kentucky basketball," Roselle said in a prepared statement read at the beginning of last night's press conference. "I am confident that we will be announcing a new coach of whom all Kentucky fans will be proud."

Roselle, who said he had notified Newton of the resignation, did not give any clues as to who the new coach would be.

Sutton, who said he had been treated fairly by the UK administration during the investigation, yesterday thanked Gov. Wallace Wilkinson for his support. Recently, Wilkinson said that the University's response to the NCAA allegations should be made public. Sutton had often expressed the same opinion.

But Sutton said that the support from the governor he was referring to was that of a UK fan.

"I think I'd be remiss if I didn't give special thanks to a person who has stood behind me through all this," Sutton said. "That's the governor of the commonwealth, Wallace Wilkinson."

Sutton said he had tried to notify most of the players on his team and will meet with each of them today.

Sutton said he did not know what his son Sean, a point guard on the UK team, planned to do, but he said the decision would be left up to him.

"I will encourage him to remain," Sutton said. "When Sean made the decision to come here, I tried to point out the pros and cons as a father and a coach."

Sutton's only recruit, 6-foot-6 guard Jeff Brassow of Houston, Texas, is still intending to come to UK, according to his father, Duane, reached last night.

"I have talked with (Jeff) today for a few minutes," Duane Brassow said. "Nothing has changed. We didn't want this to happen. He said, 'I still plan on being a Kentucky Wildcat.'"

None of the UK players could be reached for comment yesterday.

Sutton said he would remain living in Lexington and hoped to coach one day again on the college level.

"I would hope some college president out there in our great country would give me the opportunity to coach again," he said. "If the right opportunity came along ... I love coaching and love working with young people. It's been a part of me for so long."

Sutton said he'd use his time off to travel the state and "meet some of the great Kentucky people I haven't had a chance to meet."

Faculty say Sutton made good decision

Members of UK's faculty and administration said last night that UK basketball coach Eddie Sutton's resignation was in the best interest of the University.

"I'm sure Coach Sutton has done what he thinks is best for the University," said James Applegate, a member of the University's faculty senate. "The University can now move on to focus on academics and try to begin to rebuild a good, strong, clean program."

Sutton's resignation came after a week-end filled with rumors about his future at UK. He had been UK's coach since the 1985-86 season.

Doug Alexander, spokesperson for Gov. Wallace Wilkinson, said Sutton notified the governor of his resignation yesterday afternoon.

"He respects Eddie's decision," Alexander said. "It's been a difficult several months for Coach Sutton and his family and he has conducted himself throughout in a fine manner."

Wilkinson had said that the response to the 18 NCAA allegations should be released to the public, and he did not think Sutton should resign.

President David Roselle speaks to reporters about Coach Eddie Sutton's resignation last night in the Administration Building.

Yesterday Sutton thanked Wilkinson for his support throughout the investigation. Some UK faculty said they were glad to see the end of some of the problems the University is having with the basketball program.

"It's just part of the end of an unfortunate page of history of a great institution," said Paul Eskin, a member of the faculty senate. "There is nothing to be gained by dwelling on it. Let's move forward and look to the future."

"It's a relief to see the end of this. It has been consuming too much time and attention from the important things we have to do at the University."

"I think this is a good solution to part of our problem," said Foster Ockerman, chairman of the UK Board of Trustees. "I commend Coach Sutton for the action he has taken and wish him every success."

"I'm glad we're at the end of a long ordeal," said Jack Blanton, vice chancellor for administration and a member of UK's Athletics Board. "I think Coach Sutton made the right decision."

Some UK students say Sutton treated unfairly

Although some UK students said Eddie Sutton's resignation was the best thing for UK, they also said it seems as if he had been declared guilty before being tried.

"I guess it's good for UK," said Chuck Wilson, a business sophomore. "But I feel sorry for Eddie Sutton personally — that's the way I feel."

Galen Linville, a psychology junior, said, "I think it's kinda sad because Kentucky's losing a good coach. I feel that a lot of reasoning behind it is because of the NCAA and pressuring from the alumni and faculty."

"I really think Eddie Sutton's a good coach," said Amy Hayner, a child psychology sophomore. "Once he leaves, UK's really gonna regret putting the pressure on him to resign before any real evidence is revealed."

Jon Whetsell, an accounting junior, said Sutton is digging a hole he can't get out of by resigning.

"I think that the reason he's resigning is because he was pressured into it, and I feel that he did the best job he could — it was just bad fate for the team," Whetsell said. "Everyone's gonna be down on him forever if he doesn't get out now."

Saj Ruzvi, an accounting and computer science sophomore, said, "It's a really unfortunate situation. I empathize with him. I guess he was pressured into it by a lot of people. I hope UK can start building its basketball program soon."

Rich Humphrey, a biology junior, said he believes the press made Sutton sound guilty.

"I was disappointed because I thought he was a really good coach," Humphrey said.

"I'm very upset," said Laine Gorman, a communications junior. "I don't think he should have been forced to resign until all the allegations were proved or disproved."

Laura Broadwater, a hospital administration freshman, said it's unfortunate that Sutton has been accused of doing something that other coaches do.

"I think it's terrible," Broadwater said. "I'm sorry to see him leave because I think he got caught doing something that a lot of other coaches do, too."

Many students were surprised by the fact that Sutton's resigned last night.

"I'm not surprised that he resigned, but the timing really surprised me," said Vicky Spencer, an education senior. "I'm sorry to see him resign. I think there's a lot more to the problems than Eddie Sutton."

Chase lives

Chevy Chase reigns in his role as master of disguises E.M. Fletcher in 'Fletch Lives'

By TIM FOGLE
Staff Critic

No matter what the film, plot or situation is, Chevy Chase stays the same. And that would be an insult to most other actors, but not Chase. Most of his films (except "Fletch" and "National Lampoon's Vacation") were pretty weak.

What made all the others bearable (including winners like "Oh Heavenly Dog") were those goofy faces and the ability to fill in the lulls with nonsense that make Chase special. The latest installment of the Fletch saga sees the oft-disguised-but-never-recognized reporter inheriting an antebellum mansion in Louisiana.

The female lawyer who is, as Fletch puts it, "handling my briefs," dies mysteriously after she has sex with the smooth-talking Chase. Fletch is then forced to clear his name through a ridiculous series of adventures.

Fletch, in his own irrepressible style, goes undercover as exterminator Billy Gene King, faith healer Claude Henry Smoot, Civil War hero Bobby Lee Swartz and Harley Davidson owner Ed Harley.

Fletch (Chevy Chase) tries to solve the mystery surrounding his late aunt's plantation with the help of Becky Ann Culpepper (Julianne Phillips) in the new movie "Fletch Lives."

"Fletch Lives" isn't exactly "Fletch." But sequels never manage to live up to their originals anyway. But anything with Chevy Chase in it is better than the majority of everything else. So "Fletch Lives" is worth it.

"Fletch Lives," rated R, is now playing at North Park and South Park cinemas.

Entry-Level Programmer/Analysts

Start At The Top. Then Work Your Way Up.

When you start with the world's leader in the computer and communications services industry, the only direction your career can go is up.

EDS is a place for achievers—people who make things happen. If you're interested in applying your talents in the information processing services industry, you won't find a better place to grow than EDS.

Consider the exciting options offered by our highly-respected developmental programs—nationally recognized as models for the industry. Our Systems Engineering Development (SED) Program provides technical challenges and opportunities to those interested in becoming programmer/analysts capable of solving complex business problems in a sophisticated technical environment.

Systems Engineering Development

This comprehensive development program provides the instruction in programming, systems analysis and business skills you need to become one of the best-prepared professionals in the field. To qualify, we ask for:

- ▶ A 4-year college degree (any major) with a minimum 3.0/4.0 overall GPA preferred
- ▶ Demonstrated technical aptitude
- ▶ Good communication and customer-interface skills
- ▶ A proven track record of achievement
- ▶ A willingness to relocate (nationwide)

Successful candidates will receive competitive salaries and excellent company-paid benefits—and a supportive environment where your contributions are recognized and rewarded. Take the first step toward reaching your top career potential today.

EDS has immediate openings and is conducting on-campus interviews on March 21st. If you want to start at the top, contact the Placement Office for sign-up.

Sutton placed UK first by resigning from his position

Choosing to quit something you dearly love is a hard decision for anyone to make. But Eddie Sutton's move yesterday to step down as the head coach of UK's men's basketball team was a display of class.

When Sutton came to UK four years ago, he said that coaching the Wildcats is the No. 1 job in the nation. He often spoke of the "wonderful" UK fans and the outstanding support he received from the Big Blue faithful.

But since his program was slapped with 18 allegations by the NCAA last fall, it became increasingly clear that Sutton could no longer remain as coach.

The investigation also caused problems for the University community.

UK President David Roselle, while he tried to distance himself from the investigation, was soon forced to pay more attention to the probe and less to administrative duties.

The NCAA probe also reportedly caused a cooling in relations between Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson and Roselle, demonstrated when Wilkinson publicly criticized Roselle's handling of the investigation and called for UK to release the text of the response to the NCAA.

Sutton's resignation should have several positive effects on the basketball program's future.

When UK appears before the NCAA Infraction Committee next month, it will be able to tell the NCAA that it no longer has the athletics director (Cliff Hagan) or the basketball coach who were in charge when the program allegedly violated NCAA regulations.

Hopefully the NCAA will see that UK is serious about having a clean and honest program, and therefore will not be as harsh if it decides to hand down any sanctions.

In addition, when the NCAA gets through with UK, the basketball program will be able to rebuild with new personnel and put the investigation behind it.

It has been an ugly 11 months for UK's men's basketball program, but now the University needs to work on rebuilding a once strong program that all Kentuckians can take pride in.

Student service

Several SGA officials are concerned with students' needs

UK's Student Government Association officials often are accused of being too self-serving, caught up advancing their own political careers and could care less about the average "student on the street."

While it is true there are some SGA officials who are running a perpetual campaign and are more concerned with padding their political resume than making life at UK easier for students, there also are several people in 120 Student Center who are truly dedicated to helping students.

Case and point is Senator at Large Amy Butz.

Butz, who was elected to her first term in the Senate last year, came into student government as a true outsider. She did not have many ties with SGA, and although she supported one of last year's presidential candidates, she has not made a habit of making political connections and building coalitions to further her career.

"I'm just not like that," Butz said. "I'm not like, 'Oh, give me some publicity.'"

Butz said one reason she decided to run for the Senate was because too many senators were more concerned with their political aspirations, rather than serving the student body.

"People are so concerned with themselves sometimes. They're not concerned with the student body," Butz said.

When Butz entered the Senate, she said she "didn't know exactly what I was going to do." It did not take her very long to find her niche.

In the first few weeks of the fall semester, Lisa Whalen, a UK junior, was killed when the car she was riding in went out of control. The driver of the car had been drinking.

Although the incident was a terrible shock to the campus, something positive managed to come out of it. Butz and Whalen lived in the same residence hall last year, and although they were not "best friends... I knew her well enough to talk to her," Butz said.

Following the accident, Butz said she wanted to do something that would prevent future tragedies, such as Whalen's, from re-occurring.

Butz then got together with several other students and organizations and formed CARE — Committee on Alcohol Responsibility and Education.

CARE's major project thus far has been to issue designated-driver cards to students. When a group of students goes out to the local bar scene, one of the members carries the card and is entitled to free non-alcoholic drinks from local establishments who honor the cards.

"No matter what, people are going to drink and drive, but I'm trying to do something about it," Butz said.

Butz said she was not sure how well the program would be received by the campus, but after only a few weeks she had to get several hundred additional cards printed up.

Other plans CARE has, Butz said, include a possible taxi service, more alcohol education and greater awareness of alcohol abuse.

A decade ago, if someone was convicted of drunken driving, and even if they hurt or killed someone in an accident, they usually received a very firm slap on the wrist, a stiff fine and were admonished by the courts. Usually, only repeat offenders were considered a "problem."

But once society realized that drunken driving and repeated alcohol abuse is a disease not to be scoffed at, people began to take action.

College has typically been a place where people have experimented with life, and for many that has included going on alcoholic binges. In the past, fraternities and sororities have been associated with excessive use of alcohol, but thanks to people like Butz, those attitudes are beginning to change.

"I know the greek system definitely has become more aware of it, and I'd like to say the whole campus has, but I don't know 23,000 other people," Butz said.

There are seven candidates for SGA president this year who are being called "outsiders" because they do not have extensive experience in student government.

The "outsiders'" reason for running is to bring a "breath of fresh air" into SGA and clean out all the dead wood.

While UK's student government certainly could use a good spring cleaning of the political opportunists, students need to realize that there are several SGA officials, such as Butz, who are sincerely committed to serving students' needs.

Kernel Checklist

A weekly public service of the Viewpoint Page to help keep its readers abreast of the hot items in the universe.

➤ Bye-Bye, Eddie. Eddie Sutton. After conflicting stories about his future at UK, Eddie Sutton finally stepped down as head coach of UK's men's basketball program. Although Sutton is not in any way admitting guilt of any wrong-doings, his resignation hopefully will cause the NCAA to be a little more lenient if it decides on any sanctions.

➤ Gov. Busy-Body. Wallace Wilkinson. Gov. Wallace Wilkinson, returning from his trip to Japan, took time out last week to once again criticize the way UK has handled the NCAA probe into the men's basketball program. Although Wilkinson has incorrectly stated that Kentucky taxpayers are paying, the governor is quick to speak up for Bubba's rights.

➤ Gettin' Mighty Crowded. SGA Presidential Election. Seven students have filed to be president of UK's Student Government Association. While the unusually high number of candidates may reflect a growing disenchantment with student government, at least students are interested in making SGA better.

➤ Hoop Happy. Basketball. Although the Wildcats did not see postseason action for the first time in more than a decade, four Kentucky colleges played in tournaments this month. Lexington just hosted the high school boys' Sweet Sixteen and Frankfort is getting ready for the high school girls' Sweet Sixteen. No one can say there is not anything to do.

➤ Six More Weeks. The End of the School Year. OK, you're tan, you're rested and you're back, now all you have to do is to survive six more weeks of classes, or 29 more issues of the Kentucky Kernel.

Letters Policy

Readers are encouraged to submit letters and opinions to the Kentucky Kernel.

Writers should address their comments to: Editorial Editor, Kentucky Kernel, 035 Journalism Building, Lexington, Ky. 40506-0042.

Letters should be 350 words or less, while guest opinions should be 850 words or less. All material must be typewritten and double-spaced.

Frequent writers may be limited so that we may publish letters from as many writers as possible.

Writers must include their name, address, telephone number and major classification or connection with UK on all submitted material.

If letters and opinions have been sent by mail, telephone numbers must be included so that verification of the writer may be obtained.

The author's name must appear on all material published unless a clear and present danger exists to the writer. All submissions are subject to editing.

Make seat belts mandatory

This is in response to Adam Goldberg's Feb. 16 column, "Unbuckled: Government cannot force people to wear seatbelts." I agree with the philosophy of minimal government intervention, however, when concerning seat-belt use (or no use), law enforcement appears to be the best alternative to reduce traffic-related deaths.

Large amounts ($51.5 million in 1988, National Safety Council) have been spent on media campaigns in attempt to educate and increase self-reported use. No sustained effect from the education alone has been achieved.

Seat-belt use increases one's chance of survival in motor vehicle accidents by 50 percent (U.S. Department of Transportation). In January 1985, a New York law was passed mandating seat-belt use.

Within four months, seat-belt use increased from 16 percent to 57 percent with a reported decline in deaths of drivers and passengers of 27 percent (American Association for Automotive Medicine).

Mr. Goldberg was in error in his statement that "No one, to my knowledge, changed their safety habits because of it."

Those 27 or more states with mandated seat belt laws have found an increase in use.

Traffic-related deaths have an impact on society. One person's failure to wear a seat belt affects the pocketbooks of others. Who, in the long run, pays for Mrs. Watt's $100,000 medical bills? If it takes a law to reduce traffic-related deaths for those so unmotivated to buckle up, then so be it.

People more than a color

I advise Mr. Goldberg and those in agreement with him to spend an evening in the Emergency Room at University Hospital. There they can observe first-hand the effects of not wearing a seat belt, thus getting the "education" he so seeks.

Kathy Rosing is a nursing senior.

We understand how degrading and sorry (the "N word") is to describe a race of people who built this country.

How many caucasian's rights are violated by Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday? How many Anglo-Americans' rights are offended by the M.L. King Jr. Cultural Center? How many caucasians don't receive money because of African-American scholarships?

It seems to me that once African-Americans start achieving an equal status, the society that oppressed them for hundreds of years cannot recognize the difference between a right and an offense.

We, as a people, have the right to explore our past African culture. We have a right to organize and re-join in what we are. We have a right to complain against a university.

One that upholds bigotry and insincere advances toward recruitment and retention of African-American students. It is called the right of expression. And we aren't advocating militancy or violence and hate because those are offensive. But organizations, literature and history, that is our life.

To paraphrase Dr. Na'im Akbar, president of the National Association of Black Psychologists, there is nothing wrong with the Irish celebrating their Irishness. We like to dress up in green on St. Patrick's Day and celebrate with them. We are happy with them and that is good.

There is nothing wrong with the Chinese celebrating their Chinese New Year. And in New York, tall Chinese dragons decorate and madly dash down the streets of the city.

We all have fun seeing those sights and that is good. So, what is wrong with African-Americans wearing sweatshirts that read "Black By Popular Demand?" Or wearing black, red and green bands or bracelets or necklaces that is part of our ancestral heritage? What is wrong with celebrating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday? Or saying God loves you and me too? Nothing.

Nothing is wrong with that. That is what Anglo-America can't understand. If we don't want to grin at you anymore, we don't have to. If we don't want to duck our heads when you go by, we don't have to. If we don't want a job as a maid or janitor and God blesses us, we can do something else. That is known as glorious freedom.

If we want to be called black, we can. If we want to use the "N word" among ourselves in sarcasm or anger, we can. We understand how degrading and sorry that word is to describe a race of people who built this country.

America would have produced nothing from the plantation economy system if it wasn't for forced slave labor. So people can get some perspective on the world rights, we need to recognize the history for what it truly is.

We are not just black people and you are not just white people. I see English, French, Russian, Scottish and Jewish Americans calling themselves a color. I see African, Spanish and West Indies Americans calling themselves a color. It is really sad that we have reduced ourselves into nothing but black and white. We are all so much more.

Brenda Bunting is an English senior and the treasurer of the Black Campus Ministry.

Some UK faculty said Sutton's resignation was unavoidable. "It seemed to me inevitable," said Robert D. Guthrie, a member of the senate council. "I really don't know what he was guilty of and what he wasn't. I don't have any feeling whether he was guilty. Someone running a program has to take credit. It was to Sutton's credit that he resigned."

Sutton said at his press conference yesterday that he is not guilty of any wrong-doings.

"It seems to be of a logical sequence of events," said Charles Ambrose of the senate council. "It doesn't surprise me and that is all I can say."

"I think he should resign," said senate council member Donald Leigh.

Others, however, were surprised that Sutton decided to resign. Sutton said in a television interview Saturday that he had no plans to resign.

"I guess I'm surprised," said Peggy Meszaros, a faculty member of the athletics board.

freshman, said if Sutton had remained UK's coach, there would always be doubts about his involvement with the investigation. "I think it's good start new. With all the controversy, it's probably the best," Yount said.

"I just think that people are really missing out by getting rid of him, because he's a really good coach," said Diana Acosta, a political science sophomore. "UK can't find a better coach than Eddie Sutton to run the program," said Lucha Farah, an accounting sophomore. "I think it's awful because the guy has been mentioned in the allegations and he's coached for 30 years. He's not judged guilty until proven." "I just feel like he's gonna be sorely missed," said Carrie Cox, an undecided freshman. "He hasn't been given a fair trial. People just assume he's guilty."

Bat Cats split twin bill with Louisiana State

By KIP BOWMAR
Staff Writer

The UK Bat Cats split a doubleheader with the Louisiana State University Tigers yesterday at Shively Field.

UK's record is now 8-10 overall and 2-4 in the Southeastern Conference, while LSU's record is 22-3 overall and 7-2 in league play.

Things did not get off to a good start for the Bat Cats. In the first game LSU scored two runs in the first inning and followed with five more runs in the second, giving them an early 7-0 lead.

UK starter Michael Bolton lasted two outs into the fourth inning before he was yanked by UK coach Keith Madison. The Tigers' lead had ballooned to 11-0 and the Bat Cats never recovered.

UK tacked on three more runs and closed out the scoring in the seventh inning, capping a 15-inning game.

UK left fielder Mark Blythe saw his 15-game hitting streak come to an end in the first game with a 0-for-5 performance.

LSU pitcher Russel Springer blanked the Bat Cats for six innings and allowed only three hits.

In the second game, the Bat Cats jumped on LSU starter Paul Bird early when second baseman Roger Gum and right fielder Sam Taylor hit back-to-back singles in the first inning.

Blythe then drilled a double, scoring Gum and Taylor. Blythe moved to third on a wild pitch and was brought home on a sacrifice by designated hitter Rick Norton.

But UK's 3-0 lead quickly evaporated. In the second inning LSU first baseman Pete Bush hit a towering two-run home run over the right-center field wall of UK starter Larry Lubers.

LSU tied the game in the third inning when center fielder Ron Lim stole second and third base and then scored on a sacrifice.

UK responded with three runs in the bottom of the third, as Taylor, Norton and Conrad all crossed the plate to make the score 6-3.

LSU retaliated in the fourth when third baseman Phil Espinoza launched a rocket solo shot in the same spot as Bush's second-inning home run.

The momentum continued for LSU in the fifth inning. With the bases loaded, UK reliever Roy Bailey hit Osik with a pitch that brought in Grisham. Lim singled to bring in Bush and tie the score at 6-6. Espinoza then scored on a bloop single to center field.

UK finally got out of the inning when Bailey got LSU to strike out, ending the inning.

The Bat Cats responded in the bottom of the fifth with three runs. Keith Conrad doubled, moved to third on a fielder's choice and scored when LSU reliever Mark La Rosa uncorked a wild pitch.

UK shortstop Brandy Wilson was brought home on a single off the bat to center fielder Anthony Morrow. Morrow later scored on a Sam Taylor double to make the score 9-7.

UK added to its 2-run lead in the bottom of the sixth inning, when Mike Harris double scored Conrad and Norton. Harris scored from third on the fourth wild LSU pitch of the day.

Relief pitcher Roy Bailey earned the win for UK, raising his record to 2-1.

Georgetown escapes upset-minded Irish

Associated Press

This time, Hoya Paranoia had Georgetown running scared.

The second-ranked and top-seeded Hoyas survived another hair-raising upset bid Sunday in the NCAA tournament, beating Notre Dame 81-74 after trailing at halftime.

Charles Smith scored 25 of his 34 points in the second half for Georgetown, which squeaked past last-seeded Princeton 50-49 in an East Regional first-round game that Thompson said the Hoyas should have lost.

Now, Georgetown, 28-4, goes to the regional semifinals Friday night in East Rutherford, N.J., against 19th-ranked North Carolina State, which beat Iowa 102-96 in double overtime.

In other NCAA Tournament action yesterday:

No. 19 N.C. State 102, No. 14 Iowa 96, (COT): Rodney Monroe scored a career-high 40 points for N.C. State, including 11 in the second overtime, and hit baskets that tied the score at the end of regulation and the first overtime. Monroe gave Iowa the lead for good at 86-85 with a 3-pointer with 4:00 left in the second overtime. His three-point play made it 91-87 with 3:06 to play, and he hit another 3-pointer with 1:18 left for a 94-89 lead.

No. 10 Michigan 91, S. Alabama 82: Glen Rice scored 36 points, and he and Terry Mills helped the Wolverines overcome a 57-51 deficit with four minutes gone in the second half, ending South Alabama's 11-game winning streak. Mills had 24 points.

No. 6 Missouri 108, Texas 89: Doug Smith scored a career-high 32 points, and Missouri advanced to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1982. Missouri, 29-7, fell behind 25-20 but wore down the Longhorns physically, outrebounding Texas 41-30.

No. 11 Seton Hall 87, Evansville 73: Andrew Gaze hit a 3-pointer that gave Seton Hall a 77-73 lead, and Gerald Greene followed with a layup as the Pirates reached the regional semifinals for the first time. Evansville ran of 13 straight points to pull within 74-73 before Gaze and Greene retaliated for Seton Hall, 28-6.

No. 5 N. Carolina 88, UCLA 81:

Playing without the suspended J.R. Reid, North Carolina overcame a 10-point UCLA lead in the first half and advanced to its ninth straight Final 16. The Tar Heels, 29-7, trailed 51-41 late in the first half and took their first lead of the second half when Kevin Madden made two free throws to make the score 76-75 with five minutes left.

No. 7 Syracuse 65, Colorado St. 50: Missing only one of 11 field goal attempts, Stephen Thompson scored 21 points and led Syracuse over Colorado State. Syracuse, 29-7, led 38-28 on a basket by Herman Harried with 15:24 to play.

No. 8 Indiana 92, UTEP 69: Freshman Eric Anderson scored 24 points and Indiana, playing mostly reserves, romped over Texas-EI Paso.
