Traveling musicians have more luggage than most tourists, when you include instruments. And when the UK Marching Wildcat Band left for Baton Rouge yesterday, there was enough baggage stashed in buses to outfit a desert caravan. Band member Sherree Hood, a biology freshman, searches for the most efficient position to stow things yesterday. The band will perform at the UK-Louisiana State University football game, and will arrive in Baton Rouge around noon today, Lexington time.

At Medical School Bill seeks in-state service

By NELL FIELDS
Kernel Staff Writer

"There is a severe shortage of doctors in Kentucky. We have to protect the people first," Sen. Tom Easterly, D-Franfort, said this is the reason he proposed a bill to the state legislature that will tighten the admissions to Kentucky medical schools.

Graduates would have to practice in Kentucky one year for each year of medical school or repay the state for the cost of their education. Any student failing to sign this agreement would be denied admission to UL or UK medical schools.

Easterly said, "The proof there is a shortage of doctors is the fact that one out of five newly licensed doctors in the US are from a foreign country. One out of three doctors in Kentucky is foreign."

Currently in Kentucky, there is a shortage of 444 primary care doctors according to a survey from the American Association of Family Physicians.

Easterly thinks the bill will alleviate the problem. "There is a critical problem. Out of the 108 students admitted to medical school, 60 per cent will leave (the state)." College of Medicine Dean Kay Clawson thinks differently. She said, "The attempts at legislating students, requiring them to stay in the state after receiving an education is not new. In the places it has been tried, it has not met with much success."

The reaction among the medical students was divided.

Eve Wiseman, a second year student, thinks "it is reasonable." "The state is pouring in money; maybe they have the right to say we would for them," she said.

Marty Klapheke, third year student, wants the freedom to go where he chooses. "Once we start dictating, we deprive people of their rights. We need another incentive in another sphere."

Sen. Easterly has suggested the state give medical students a $5000 scholarship if they practice in Kentucky after graduation. If the students leave, they will have to pay back the state three times as much. Although taxpayers pay $15,000 a year for a medical student, Easterly isn't concerned with the money the state is losing from the out-going students. He said, "You can't put a price tag on someone not getting medical care."

Other alternatives, such as increasing the number of medical students, has been discussed as a solution to the problem.

The cost of increasing the number of medical students by 50 per cent would be $25 million. The recurring cost would be $8 million a year.

Stearns coal miners plead strikers' case

By CHARLES MAIN
Kernel Staff Writer

The striking miners at the Justus mine in Stearns, Ky., are "stronger than when they started," said United Mine Workers organizer Jay Kolenz last night. "It's been a hard fought strike, but I believe they're going to fight this one through to the end."

Kolenz, who was accompanied by four of the miners and their wives, spoke before an audience of about 50 at the Student Center small Ballroom last night. He accused the Blue Diamond Coal Co., which owns the mine, of inviting the strike by refusing to observe safety laws in its mines.

Miner Carlos Taylor said it was a policy of the mine operators to ignore complaints about safety hazards.

"We would report something to the company and they would write notes to their mine supervisors," he said. "The supervisors would look at the notes and just tell each other to ignore them."

Taylor was one of 19 miners who were injured in the Justus mine when the engine on a mantrip that was transporting them to their section of the mine to work failed, sending them plunging down an underground slope in a brakless transport car.

"Those mantrips are supposed to have two engines and this one had been operating on one for a long time. We reported it several times. The mine inspectors even wrote up a citation for it one time, but the company never fixed it," he explained.

When the one functioning engine on the mantrip failed, there was no second engine to power it. The resulting mishap resulted in serious injuries to many of the miners, including one who was totally paralyzed.

The mine was operated by the Stearns Mining Company until December 1975, when it was purchased by Blue Diamond. At that time, the miners were represented by the McCreary County Miner's Union, which Taylor said "did almost nothing" to help improve the safety conditions of the mine.

In January 1976, Taylor and several other miners went to one of the UMW's organizers for help. On January 31, the miners voted 126-47 to have the UMW certified as their bargaining agent.

"We went to those people because we needed them," Taylor said. "We have to have better conditions in that mine."

Taylor and the other men who helped get the UMW organizers in touch with the miners have since been fired by the company. Kolenz said this is a common practice of coal companies.

"They dismiss the men when they find out that they helped get the union into a mine. They don't give them a reason, but the men know what it was for," he said.

"The miners were sitting on a powder keg down there," he added. "That mine was in disastrous shape. That's why they wanted the union brought in. They wanted a say in their own safety. They didn't want another Scotia."

(The Scotia mine in Owen Fork, Ky., also owned by Blue Diamond, was the scene of twin explosions in March, 1976 which killed 21 miners and five mine safety inspectors. Some of the safety violations cited in the Justus mine were similar to the conditions which resulted in the Scotia explosions.)

Negotiators for Blue Diamond have refused to accept demands from UMW negotiators that mine safety be supervised by a miner-led Safety Committee, similar to that at other UMW contracted mines.

Blue Diamond's negotiators claim that the stumbling block has been the UMW's refusal to accept a "no strike" clause in the contract.

The strike has been going on for 15 months, and sporadic outbreaks of violence. Blue Diamond has hired a team of armed security guards from the Storm Security Agency to guard the entrances to the mine. They initially carried submachine guns and automatic rifles.

A recent court injunction limits guards to carrying only shotguns and handguns. The same court injunction also limits the number of pickets at the mine to six at the elevator entrance and four at the tippie entrance. The pickets are not permitted to carry weapons.

Since the arrival of the armed guards on the strike lines, there have been several outbreaks of violence. Five guards have been shot in exchanges of gunfire, as well as two picketers.

At the question-and-answer session following last night's forum, several heated exchanges took place between the miners on the podium and hecklers in the audience.

UK PRESIDENT OTTIS SINGLETARY told the Washington Alumni Club on Wednesday that the state's action on UK's 1978-80 budget request will be crucial. UK is seeking a state allocation of $121.8 million for 1978-79—an increase of $28 million over the state's current allocation—and $140.5 in 1979-80. UK's total budget this year is $219.6 million.

FOUR MINERS ENTERED THE STRIKEBOUND Justus mine peacefully yesterday, but officials were uncertain about the possibility of future violence in Stearns. Six miners were on the picket line at the Stearns Coal Co. mine yesterday, everything was quiet,

"and we hope it stays that way," said State Police Lt. Bobby Walker.

On Wednesday, about 100 of the 150 strikers gathered at the main picket line to confront three miners who apparently decided they wanted to end their participation in the 15-month-old strike, Circuit Judge J.B. Johnson, Jr. and Etate Police said.

It's strikers were arraigned in Williamsburg on contempt of court charges six weeks after Johnson had issued an injunction at the mine. The strikers were accused of violating Johnson's restraining order, which limits to six the number of miners on the main picket line.

Graves urges better UK-Lexington ties

By NELL FIELDS
Kernel Staff Writer

"As mayor, I will use the power and influence of my office to strengthen the relationship between the University and Lexington, and to solve problems that unavoidably occur," said mayoral candidate Joe Graves at a question and answer session held here last night.

The meeting was cosponsored by Environmental Action Society and The Students for Joe Graves.

Graves was first asked about the lack of housing at UK. He said, "We can do something about this problem. UK is reluctant to build dorms because they are afraid the enrollment will go down. We can have an arrangement between UK and the city."

Graves insisted that "the students have a say-so about what the houses look like." Graves was also aware of the high cost of off-campus housing.

Bike paths and crosswalks is another issue directly involving UK. Graves said, "I want to do more than what we are doing." As for the crosswalks, Graves wants it to be known that the people have the right of way.

Graves was asked about the tactics used recently by Amato and his, and if those tactics were unfair or questionable. "I feel it is important to show my opponent's record," said Graves. "Amato is not independent and independence is an issue."

While he was a member of the state senate, Graves was involved with many environmental issues. He was one of the first elected public officials in Kentucky to support the Red River Gorge. Graves still plans to support environmental issues.

One issue is the air pollution problem in Lexington. "I don't have any specific plans as of now, but we will work on it," he said. "There is an awareness of the problem. It is said that cancer is caused by environmental problems."

At the end of the conference, Graves said, "I am sold on getting students involved in the government."

'Prime' interview Housewife to retire

By BETTY PETERSON

Mandatory retirement may eventually be phased out, according to Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., who is preparing such an amendment at this time. Already a bill has passed through the House of Representatives which extends the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 in private industry and removes it completely for federal employees. The bill is sponsored by Florida Democrat Claude Pepper.

after thoughts

A great many people whose jobs are unfulfilling actually look forward to retiring and choose to do so at the earliest possible date allowing them full retirement benefits.

But for those who find their work rewarding, and retirement a lethal dose of leisure, the Pepper bill may literally add years to their lives.

Reactions have been mixed as one might expect, but the most vehement responses seem to have come from those in the private industry of housewifery.

For those who didn't know women filing joint income tax returns with their husbands and writing "housewife" in the space provided for spouse's occupation, are subject to the mandatory retirement rule. The men are the ones complaining about the new bill.

Last week, in an effort to report on a typical reaction a housewife I interviewed a dominant male figure in the industry. Following is an excerpt from that interview:

Prime: So in other words, the Pepper bill has you sneezing. Dominant Male: Come now, I think it's the most asinine proposal since the ERA!

Prime: Do you consider your housewife to be typical of all housewives?

D.M.: The very stereotype. They fight retirement, all of them. And why not? They've got it made. What, a little housework? Then soaps all afternoon or a magazine. Got it made I tell you.

Prime: What are some of your main objections to the bill?

D.M.: Well, for one, an institution such as this needs an occasional infusion of young blood—someone eager to become the best housewife in the town, you know. Geritol or no, tired blow ceases to be innovative and then the whole patriarchy goes stale.

Prime: I see your point. Some have suggested that by catering to the wants of the old we're forgetting the rights of the young. Care to comment on this?

D.M.: Absolutely! Why, I already had a sweet young thing in mind to take over when my housewife retired, now she'll be left with a reputable position. If that isn't an infringement on her rights, I'm a turkey.

Prime: Yes...well, I have heard of men exerting subtle and not so subtle pressure on the old girls to force them into retirement. Have you tried this tactic?

D.M.: As a matter of fact, yes. At first I tried telling her how lucky she was to be retiring into that big wonderful world out there—no one to boss her around or make demands of her. But she just smiled kind of funny.

Then I began to leave her out of the intercourse of my daily affairs, but you know what they are, I think she was actually glad I didn't bother her anymore.

Prime: I suppose you're right. Looks like you may be stuck, doesn't it?

D.M.: Looks like. I even told her she was old and when she forgot to lay out my clothes or polish my shoes, I made a big thing of it and blamed her forgetfulness on her age. I told her she couldn't cook anymore and that she was leaving cobwebs in the corners and—excuse me, I think I heard my housewife call.

Prime: That didn't take long. Why, you're trembling. What happened?

D.M.: Well, I'll be... She's leaving. She's actually leaving.

Prime: You mean retiring?

D.M.: No just leaving. She said she wasn't going to waste the next five years on me. She's going to find a new position with someone else. Said something about applying as a homemaker this time.

OH, THE JOYS OF BEING A GOOD OL' BOY.

As the new South grows, some things change and some things don't. Good ol' boys keep what's good and change what's not. Their Rebel Yell is very, very good—definitely a keeper.

Folks in other parts have to play finders keepers for this fine bourbon is made and sold only beneath the Mason-Dixon line. Southerners drink to that. Drink to that with Rebel Yell, host bourbon of the South.

Even though peanuts have been around the South for a long time, they have been heavily publicized only recently.

Watermelon can preserve you in the summer or you can preserve it for the winter.

Catfish are among the more homely fish but are beautiful with hush puppies and Rebel Yell.

There's help for 'hip crisis'

By JOHN COOKE

Joining the ranks of Alcoholics Anonymous, Rape Crisis, Suicide Prevention and other "hot lines," Lexington has its own Hip Crisis Center.

Dr. William Puer, a social psychologist, set up this center which is funded entirely by HEW. Dr. Puer has been toying with this concept since he received his B.A. from Cumberland Gap College, but only recently did he secure any strong financial support.

"I have always held the adamant conviction that something like this is needed for aid and help to distressed people as well as individuals as they wander aimlessly without direction through the dense miasma that we call society with all its social problems," said Dr. Puer in a telephone interview. When asked if he could define a "hip crisis," the doctor launched into this uncertain monologue:

"A hip crisis is usually and most often a conflict between the individual and the understanding or misunderstanding or lack of understanding about the complex and intricate peer and social pressures and expectations." When asked if he could be more specific, he said that he really didn't want to bother with it because the grant had already come through, so he didn't want to push his luck.

The doctor stated that most of the callers were suffering from trend trauma, or were in desperate need of trend definition. Here, the doctor was willing to elaborate.

"Trend trauma is due to an individual's expectations not meeting up with actual reality. For instance, a fellow calls up really plastered out of his mind and says something like 'I got a Marantz stereo receiver with 125 watts per channel RMS, I got a BMW 320i, I got Brooks Bros. clothes and a down jacket and I still ain't getting laid!' or 'I've spent a small fortune in puka shells, what do I do now?' or 'I went to Mont's and no one noticed me!' or things like that.

"Trend definition is fairly obvious. You know the situation, the feeling that something you're about to do is basically hip, but you're just not quite sure. You could be a few months behind times or maybe just even a week. Could be that a TV show the night before has radically redefined the chic requirements and you are in the dark. "You've got to know these things if you expect to get laid. People call up with questions like, 'I'm going to a party as Son of Sam. Is that cool or should I go as someone more disgusting, like Ed Ames,' or 'I was bi-sexual before anyone else was, but is it cliché to confess that at my encounter session at the group, fraternity,' or 'Should I charge coke on my Visa,' or 'Which is funnier, Cleveland or Detroit,' or 'I write editorials for the school newspaper, but no one knows it. Should I advertise?' or 'I puke every time I smoke or drink. Can anything save me from a lonely, futile life?' or 'Is there anything wrong with double-knit handkerchiefs?' or 'Which is a more hip profession, journalism or crime?', or, well, you know what I mean."

When the doctor was asked for the specific remedy for each of these predicaments, he said that he would rather not give all his secrets away in one crummy article. He did, however, that puka shells were excellent as aquarium decorations. "Be sure to cut the strings," he called back later to add.

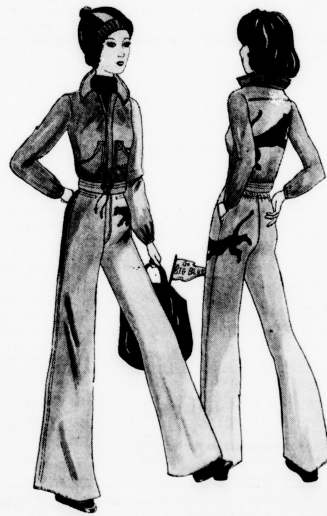

For anyone troubled by "Trend Trauma or Definition", the number to call, at any time, is 27

'We're gonna be ready'
LSU hosts UK in Tiger lair

By ED KENNERLY
Kernel Reporter

Take a defense that bends but doesn't break. Put it on the same field with an offense that averages 41 points a game and is led by a genuine Heisman Trophy candidate.

Throw in 68,000 screaming Southerners and a real-life roaring tiger (Mike IV) that would scare the loon cloth off Tarzan. Now, what have you got?

To find out, tune in at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow night when Kentucky meets LSU in Baton Rouge.

The Cats take a 4-1 record into the game and by now every worthy Big Blue fan knows that's the best record since the days of Bear Bryant. LSU comes into the game with a 3-1 record, which includes a 36-14 thumping of Florida and a 7-0 laughter over the Rice Owls.

The Tigers had to rally from a 15-0 third quarter deficit for a 28-15 win at Vandy last week. LSU swallowed its first loss 24-21 at Indiana. Coach Charles McClendon (Cholly Mac) seems to think LSU could win that game if it was played again.

"We were the worst football team in the world (at Bloomington, Ind.). It had been raining about 15 straight days down here and we hardly ever got outside to practice. We just weren't ready to play."

"But we're gonna be ready this week," Cholly Mac vowed.

LSU has rolled up all those points behind the running of Charles Alexander, the nation's top ground gainer with 156 yards per game. "I expect Kentucky will be looking to stop him," said Cholly Mac, who has a penchant for understatement.

"He's not any prima donna—he blocks just as effectively as he runs," McClendon added. Alexander scored three touchdowns last week and snared a two-point conversion pass to tie the game 15-15 in the fourth quarter. "That was just about as good a clutch play as you'll ever see," Mac said.

Steve Ensinger is not Bert Jones but he's good enough to give LSU the passing attack it needs for a complete offense. Carlos Carson is the Tigers' top receiver with six TD receptions, five of them against Rice's sleeping Owls.

LSU is solid defensively. The leaders are linebacker Steve Ripple and defensive end Lew Sibley. LSU takes pride in its specialty teams, and the "Wild Bunch" caused Vandy to fumble a second half kickoff that turned the game around.

"I'm anticipating a low scoring game because of Kentucky's defense," said McClendon. "I'm just hopin' we'll be able to move the football."

Defensively, Cholly Mac figures to keep an eye on UK quarterback Derrick Ramsey. "He's their big gun. I see he's the number one passer in the conference now. My gosh, he's a much better quarterback than he was last year."

Although Cholly Mac talks the "one game at a time" line, LSU is in a position to take the SEC crown and earn a trip to the Sugar Bowl. Its two toughest games are at home—this week against the Cats and three weeks after that when Bear Bryant's Crimson Tide comes to Bayou country.

Kentucky, of course, is ineligible for post-season play and consequently must content itself with the role of spoiler. Whether it will play that role as well as it did two weeks ago in State College, Pa. remains to be seen.

UK water polo news

Coach Wynn Paul has the Kentucky water polo team off to a 6-2 start as the bulk of the schedule lies ahead.

The team opened the season with an impressive second place finish in the 10-team Southern Illinois Invitational. After losing the opening match to first place finisher Loyola 13-8, the Cats came back to defeat Southern Illinois 18-2, Principia 14-4 and Missouri Rolla 12-3.

The following weekend UK hosted the first Mini-Tournament at the Memorial Coliseum pool. Great overall play allowed the Cats to go undefeated and win the tournament, defeating Cincinnati 13-8, Morris Harvey 21-2 and Wright State 18-10 in the process.

Last weekend, however, Kentucky was dealt a heart-breaking loss to a powerful Indiana team 14-11. The Cats lost two starters on fouls by halftime.

Led by Mack Gribble and Dave Pratt UK battled back and almost won the game. "I was proud to be the way some of the others filled in after we lost two of our starters," Paul said. "They came to Memorial Coliseum Oct. 28, and you can bet we will be waiting for them."

"Our best asset is that this team never quits; after we lost two of our starters, we still battled back. This team has been doing that all season."

"We have a young team, with only two seniors out of the starting seven players. But they just stay in the game and keep scrapping away."

This weekend the UK water polo team travels to Ohio State in the Ohio State Invitational Tournament.

Indian Jewel wins her fifth (AP)—Indian Jewel has scored her fifth victory of the year in capturing Keeneland's $15,000 Claiborne Purse.

The Russell L. Reineman filly, who ran coupled in the betting with French Broad, took the lead on the turn and finished a length in front of Karen Lattimore's General Partner in Thursday's Keeneland feature.

Indian Jewel ran the seven furlongs and 104 feet in 1:27.3-5 and gave jockey Bryan Fann his second win of the day and fifth of the meeting.

The winner returned $3.40, $3.20 and $2.20 as the favorite of the crowd of 6,620. General Partner offered $7.20 and $3.40 and Hope of Glory paid $2.80 to show.

Strikers argue case

One of the exchanges was concerning the presence of the UMW organizers at Stearns. One questioner accused the miners of helping them "force" their way into the mine.

"The union did not contact us first," said Mahan Vanover, one of the miners. "We called them because we felt they were our only hope. How would you like to go down into a mine every day not knowing whether you're going to see your family at the end of the day? The mine we were working in was a death trap."

Vanover was one of 39 miners who were arrested and jailed Wednesday night following an outbreak of violence at the picket lines. A group of strikebreakers from the old McCreary County Miners' Union, escorted by State Policemen, crossed the picket lines to go into the mines and work. When they came out, violence erupted and the cars in which they were riding were damaged.

One of the hecklers accused the picketers of causing the confrontation.

"What would you do," Taylor responded, "if you had been on the picket lines for 15 months for what you believed, and you saw some scab going onto your job site to take your job? We have families to support, and we are not going to stand by and let them do this to us."

Kolenz summed up for the miners:

"The company has complete control down there and now they want to own the people, too. I tell you, these men are not going to stand for it."

The forum was sponsored by the Student Center Board's Contemporary Affairs Committee, Walter Hixson, chairman.

Striking coal miners set up picket lines during the United Mine Workers' walkout this summer at the Blue Diamond Coal Co.'s Justus Mine in Stearns.

Runoff needed in Law election

By KEN KAGAN
Kernel Staff Writer

The UK Student Bar Association (SBA) at the Law School held elections for officers Wednesday, with the results still undecided for president.

A runoff between Michael Eubanks and Charles Williams has been scheduled for today from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Eubanks, running as the "Suggestion Box," received 96 of the 277 votes cast among the nine candidates, or 34 per cent. Williams received 68 votes, or 25 per cent. According to the provisions of the SBA constitution, a runoff must be held if no one receives at least 40 per cent of the vote. Cindy Cecil placed third with 63 votes.

Terrie Isaac was elected vice-president by a decisive margin with 146 votes, Amy Garon was nominated secretary with 123, and Pedro Miranda won as treasurer with 133.

SBA not only performs social functions, such as obtaining athletic tickets for law students, distributing lockers and setting up parties, but also selects students to serve on faculty committees.

Committees such as personnel, curriculum, placement and admissions have in most cases four or five faculty members and one student appointed by SBA. The student's vote is equal to the faculty vote.

SBA also sponsors a Wednesday-noon forum, presenting speakers in the law school courtroom. Last year SBA sponsored Happy Chandler and Attorney General Robert Stephens, among others.

To increase the number of students by 100 per cent, the state would have to pay $50 million. Subsequent costs would be $15 million.

The senator pointed out that since 1970, there have been only 108 students attending UK medical school per year. "There has been no effort made by UK to increase the number of students," Easterly said.

"UK has stated they don't have the money, but they haven't done anything about it," he said. UK thinks doctors write their own tickets.

Easterly is confident the plan will not fail. "There are so many students applying to medical schools that it won't matter to them," he said.

James Bond. The name invokes images of guns and girls, mystery and girls, fast cars and girls, technology and girls, and then of course, girls.

Agent 007, the number assigned to Bond after he received a license to kill from Britain's Secret Service. And now all the action and intrigue behind the James Bond phenomenon comes to the Student Center Theatre with their presentation of the entire series of films adapted from Ian Fleming's famous novels. From now until the end of this semester, the films will be shown on consecutive Mondays beginning October 17.

In the middle 1960's James Bond was so immensely popular worldwide that the books were selling at the rate of over five million a year, and the films were breaking box office records. During 1965, one New York theatre, showed Goldfinger around the clock to accommodate the masses, with only a few breaks to clean up the popcorn and trash, which had accumulated to a depth of several inches.

The Aston-Martin car Bond used in that movie was nearly ripped apart by over-enthusiastic fans trying to get souvenir accessories and handles as the car was on display in Milan, Italy.

Dr. No (to be show Monday night) was the first James Bond flick ever produced with Sean Connery being the first of the three Bonds. Connery was selected from a group of over 100 candidates in a survey conducted by United Artists.

In this first film, Bond discovers a plot to wreck the American aerospace program while he is in the Caribbean investigating the death of another British agent. This is the introduction to the worldwide criminal organization SPECTRE and its mastermind, Dr. No.

Establishing the trend for all the future flicks, Bond meets beautiful women, risks his life several times and eventually kills Dr. No, all of which keeps the viewers constantly happy.

In From Russia With Love (Oct. 24), SPECTRE attempts to avenge the death of Dr. No by luring Bond into securing a Soviet coding device, only to have him killed as soon as he crosses the border. Most of the excitement is a result of his trying to escape from SPECTRE.

Goldfinger (Oct. 31) was next in line. One of the most popular Bond films ever, even the soundtrack became famous as it made it to the top of the music charts. The plot centers around "Bad guy" Ernest Goldfinger attempts to rob Ft. Knox. This one premiered the famous Aston-Martin, a car for the man who has everything, complete with ejection seat.

Ernst Starvo Blofeld is introduced as the new evildoer, along with Emilio Largo in Thunderball (Nov. 7). Blofeld is characterized by ears with no lobes, and appears again in two later Bond films. In Thunderball, SPECTRE hijacks a NATO bomber and threatens to bomb a Western European city if its demands are not met. The highlight of this one is an exciting underwater fight between Bond, his soldiers, and SPECTRE.

You Only Live Twice (Nov. 14) involves a near world war. As Bond travels to Japan he discovers that SPECTRE and Blofeld are behind it, destroying aerospace vehicles. In this story Bond often gets advice from a friend named Tiger Tanaka, a Japanese agent. Twice is the ideal Bond flick—full of suspense, action and sexy women.

On Her Majesty's Secret Service (Nov. 21), in which Agent 007 role is taken over by George Lazenby, is the only film in which Bond gets married. He pops the Crisis solved

Controversial 'Oh! Calcutta!' to play Lexington

By THOMAS CLARK
Arts Editor

Critic Kenneth Tyson began his review of Oh! Calcutta! by recalling a sex manual he had read as a teenager.

The preface to the book, according to Tyson, began something like this: "You may, as you turn these pages, find your fingers beginning to tremble a bit—your heart start to race. Don't be worried about this, it is quite natural as the very subject of sex is apt to set the whole man aquiver."

Ever since Oh! Calcutta! first hit New York in 1969, it has been setting men, and women, aquiver. And since Lexington quivers over more things than most cities (with the possible exception of Cincinnati), Calcutta! threatened to set the town on its collective ear.

The sexual musical farce makes its first appearance in Lexington Saturday night in two shows at the Opera House.

Two weeks ago, members of the Urban County Council requested the Lexington Center Corporation (LCC) to reconsider their decision to lease the Opera House to Broadway Productions, Inc., producers of the Calcutta! road show.

But, according to LCC Executive Director Tom Minter, his hands were tied by the law.

"The bottom line is that the production of Oh! Calcutta! is permitted by law and the LCC is prohibited by law from keeping out such productions," Minter said at the time.

Broadway Productions has already fought, and won, several courtroom battles. In Cleveland, Ohio a permanent injunction was issued against Mayor Perk's attempt to deny use of the Cleveland Music Hall to the show and a similar battle had the same outcome in Erie, Pennsylvania.

The company is currently experiencing problems with the courts in Cincinnati, where city officials are seeking to keep the musical from playing in Music Hall.

Oh! Calcutta!, opened off-Broadway in June, 1969 and despite being universally panned by the critics, played for over three years—a total of 1,314 performances. This past spring, the show was revived on Broadway where it is still playing.

The musical, a series of skits satirizing attitudes toward sex, has enjoyed a great deal of success and caused a great deal of commotion because of the several nude scenes performed on stage. However, most critics have said that the only thing the scenes have added to the play was novelty.

A few tickets are still available for both the 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. showings at the Opera House.

question while hiding from Blofeld in a barn with his future bride. Blofeld attempts to wipe out a good portion of the world through germ warfare (believe it or not), but of course, Bond steps into save the day. The film, set in the mountains of Germany, ends abruptly and more sadly than most in the series, although 007 successfully attacks Blofeld's fortress.

One of 007's most thrilling car chases, involving the Las Vegas police, occurs in Diamonds Are Forever (Nov. 28). This is Connery's last role as James Bond, and he goes out in style. Through gambling, drinking and making love with Jill St. John, Bond, as always, gets

Complete Bond series coming to SC

Continued from page 3: his mission accomplished. That, by the way, is stopping the laser destruction of certain cities. All the elements that made the Bond series popular are present here, including the tongue-in-cheek comedy touch.

The Live and Let Die (Dec. 5) theme song is performed by Paul and Linda McCartney, only adding to the slickness of the film. Bond, now played by Roger Moore, discovers a plan to flood the American market with free heroin in an attempt to wipe out the competition. In his efforts to stop the scheme from progressing, Bond ends up in a spectacular speedboat chase through the Florida Everglades with his pursuer eventually crashing into a police car on land. It's another in the exciting series of 007 adventures, despite the slickness of the "obligatory" chases, the love-making and "timed excitement."

James Bond receives a gold bullet as a death warning from Scaramonga, an evil and very successful assassin in Man With the Golden Gun (Dec. 12). Bond decides to seek out Scaramonga in Hong Kong, and finds him on an island hideaway. They fight to the death, engaging the use of karate, judo and the like. Guess who wins? Golden Gun is the last of the Bond series to be shown at the Student Center.

The films are shown on Monday nights, all at 6 and 8:30, except for the first of the series, Dr. No which will be presented at 7 and 9. Tickets for all shows are available only on the day of the show, for $1 with a UK ID.
