ABBAY OF GETHSEMANI
TRAPPIST, KENTUCKY

Aug 11, 1962

Dear Carolyn:

You have already sent me the book from Columbia. It is the edition of Cassiodorus's "Divine and Human Readings" by Jones. In fact you sent two copies, of which I returned one. I am glad to know of the two dissertations however, but there is no immediate need for them. I will keep them in mind. Many thanks.

Victor had mentioned the 23rd as a possible day, and I thought I would put in a Thursday for a change, but if you want to come on the 25th that is even better. Whatever you like. Drop me a line and tell me whether to expect you on the 23rd or the 25th. I will be equally ready, in fact the 25th is the Feast of St Louis.

Could you have someone list for me the works of Erasmus you have there in Latin? I can't get to him right now, but will want to eventually. Also, what do you have of Cusanus now in Latin?

And finally could you let me know what you have about Lucretius, just the more recent and important studies if any. If it is not too much trouble.

This poem was wr tten about a child's drawing of a house. I thought you and Victor might like to see it.

All best wishes and blessings always,

Cordially in Christ,

Tom.
