Parking in Clifton Circle area closes Sunday

Action upsets some students

By Jacob Clabes
Staff Writer
and Stephen Trimble
Executive Editor

University officials announced yesterday that Clifton Circle and several E-lot parking areas will be closed indefinitely beginning Sunday evening.

Dall Clark, a UK project manager, said the lots, including 266 parking spaces for staff, faculty and students, will close so engineers can complete construction preparation for the proposed $58 million Central and Life Sciences Library.

The announcement was met with disappointed reactions from several students and staff who use the free parking around Clifton Circle every day.

"Parking is so expensive, and we should have alternatives," undeclared sophomore David Stewart said.

"Some students who live off campus don't have enough hours to get C (lot) ... stickers, and K (lot) is too inconvenient when you have to go back and forth to work during the day," he said.

"The University should be making Clifton Circle into a parking garage instead of a library."

The area that will be closed includes most of Clifton Circle and the gravel lots along Columbia and Hilltop avenues, said Joe Burch, vice president for University Relations.

"Basically, what's inside the (construction) fences will be closed," he said.

The road connecting Columbia and Rose Avenues that winds through the bottom part of Clifton Circle will stay open for traffic and parking, Burch said.

Utility lines from above and below the library site will be relocated as preparation is completed, Clark said.

Office and construction trailers also will be moved within the fences of the Clifton Circle area so construction can begin on Dec. 1, Clark said.

Clark added that he is making the announcement without the final approval of the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Council. Because UK is closing a city street, it must have the council's permission.

On Thursday, council members will decide whether to issue $41 million in bonds to pay for the library and whether to allow UK to close Clifton Circle.

Clark said he is "99.99 percent sure" that the council will approve the measures, and UK's plans will proceed on track. The council already endorsed the bond proposal at a work session on Sept. 6.

But the promise of a new library comes as little comfort for students who will miss Clifton Circle's parking convenience.

Craig Johnson, a finance junior, said University officials would not close the parking areas if they truly had students' interests at heart.

"I think this is just another sign that the University doesn't take consideration for its students," he said.

"They have reduced the number of free spaces and raised the prices on all parking passes."

The rising cost of UK parking passes also has become a concern for students who won't be able to use the area's free parking anymore.

"It is the only parking where you don't have to pay $40," undeclared freshman Tony Duncan said.

"It is ridiculous that we should have to pay so much for something so inconvenient as K lot."

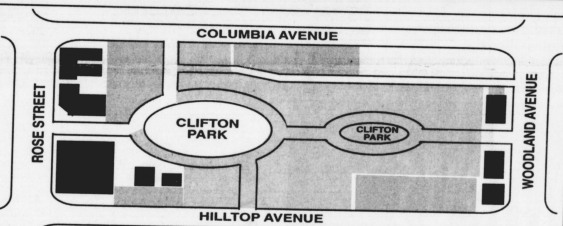

Some students said they think the construction of the library should be held up until the University is assured it will have the money to build it.

"I think it is ridiculous that they are going to start blasting when they don't even have the money," said Troy Peake, a political science senior.

Other students say they will miss being able to use the area for recreational purposes.

"It is a shame," said physical therapy freshman Jeff Riccardi, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity.

"It was a good place for us to play ball or catch."

Jones vows to fight mismanagement charges

By Stephen Trimble
Executive Editor

T.A. Jones' "New Spirit" campaign last year asked students to get involved in student government.

Now, under the pressure of an audit and allegations that he neglected a budget rule in Student Government Association's Constitution, the student body leader says he will stay put unless ordered otherwise by those who answered his campaign's call.

"I'm not going to stop working for the students, and that's the bottom line," Jones said, adding he would leave his post only if the required two-thirds of the Senate voted for his impeachment.

Regarding claims from Senator at Large Julie Wright and Business and Economics Senator Greg T. Watkins that he failed to designate money in the SGA budget to buy more than $3,000 of T-shirts, he said simply there is "speculation, but no fact."

"Everything I've done I've done in good conscience and with the students in mind," Jones said.

Senator at Large Beverly Coleman said she believes the claims against Jones are true, and she said she will help Wright and Watkins present their case to the Supreme Court on Monday night.

If the Supreme Court rules in her favor and Jones still refuses to step down, she said she would support his impeachment.

"If we need to, I guess that's the course we would take," she said. Coleman also predicted the Senate would lean toward impeachment if the allegations are true.

"If we present the facts and the Senate sees it, I have no doubt they'll vote for (impeachment)," she said.

However, Senate Pro Tempore Heather Hennes said if the Supreme Court decides Jones is guilty of only forgetting the Constitutional requirements, the matter is too petty for impeachment.

SGA faculty adviser J.W. Patterson said if Jones violated the Constitution or mishandled funds, the student body leader should step down, "as did (President) Richard Nixon."

"I hope we don't have to go that far," he said. "But if the allegations were true, I would hope we would have (Jones resign)."

High schoolers learn about UK

By Brenna Reilly
Staff Writer

The Student Center Grand Ballroom was filled with central Kentucky high school students and parents last night, all getting their first chance to see what UK has to offer.

"UK Preview Night presents an outstanding opportunity to learn about UK in a short time," said Randy Mills, senior associate director of admissions.

Tables were set up around the ballroom with representatives from each college and a number of student and University groups, including residence life and food services.

Mills said the preview night provides better information for students than a college fair because each academic college within UK is represented.

"(The preview night) is an example of people giving of their time to help students," he said.

Mills estimated the attendance at about 500 people and called the night "a tremendous success."

Business senior Barth Holohan, a student ambassador, said the night "enabled students and parents to

Activist to discuss Army incinerator

By Amy Barnes
Staff Writer

The director of an area group that deals with problems surrounding chemical weapons will visit campus tonight to tell students why he plans to fight the Army's plan to install a nerve gas incinerator in Richmond, Ky.

"The Army plans to erect a $761 million facility in Richmond, operate for 16 months and never use it again," said Craig Williams, director of the Chemical Weapons Working Group. "How do you fight a giant bureaucracy like the Army to admit that the program is flawed?"

Amy Solner, president of Students Against Violation of the Environment, said she invited Williams to speak because she thinks his topic is a "local issue

NATION Storms force thousands from homes

HOUSTON — A firefighter's coat draped over her shoulders, Oma McCalister clutched her metal cane and a few other possessions yesterday as she was lifted in a rescue boat from floodwaters that had reached doorknob level.

She and thousands more across southeast Texas were driven out of their homes by three days of rain that have swollen rivers and other waterways.

The floods were blamed for at least seven deaths. About 10,000 people were out of their homes and 30 counties were threatened by floods. The Red Cross opened at least 30 shelters for the homeless.

The storm that hit Sunday brought as much as 30 inches of rain to some areas.

Simpson judge says book threatens trial

LOS ANGELES — An explosive new book threatens O.J. Simpson's right to a fair trial, a judge said yesterday as he abruptly suspended jury selection and ordered prospective jurors to avoid newspapers and TV — and to stay out of bookstores.

Earlier, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito handled the prosecution a major victory in refusing to throw out DNA tests on a bloody glove and other key evidence.

King: Banned books 'just what you need'

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Stephen King says young people shouldn't be scared to read what they want just because some adult says no.

The horror story writer, at a benefit for the Children's Literacy Center, urged youngsters to read

"If the school board tells you you can't read it, it's probably just what you need," he said.

preview night) informed me on the admissions policy and gave me an atmosphere of the University." Henry Clay High School senior Wes Dickerson said the night was a big help. "It told me everything I needed to know." Some of the high school students had already decided to attend UK. Betsy Jo Comei, a senior at Woodford County High School, said she already mailed her application. "I want to come for a visit now, to see which residence hall I want to live in," she said. A slide show of campus narrated by students followed the speeches. Following the slide show, Mills opened a question and answer session to the audience. Sara Stopher, also a senior at Woodford County said, "I really didn't know much before tonight," she said, "I need to get on track with housing and scholarship stuff." Shane Carlin, an admissions intern and an agricultural communications senior, said the night was a chance for "high school students to investigate what UK has to offer. Students can learn about organizations, colleges and residence halls." UK holds the 11 preview nights around the state each year.

that directly affects Lexington." "We need to find a viable and acceptable approach to solve the problem," Williams said. The Army plans to build eight incineration sites in the United States to exterminate the nerve gas rockets. If the incineration of the gas is not successful, its components, which are thought to be carcinogens, could be released into the atmosphere. Since the nerve gas corrodes every container it is stored in, it will have to be disposed of soon or the United States will have to purchase additional containers to transfer the gas for storing until a solution to the problem is reached. Williams said he believes there are alternative methods for safe disposal of the 32,000 tons of nerve gas. He will discuss his ideas tonight at 7 in 309 Old Student Center.

Cranberries served up for second helping

Band dishes out sophomore CD

By Ty Halpin
Assistant Managing Editor

The dreamy, Irish-clad sound of Dolores O'Riordan is soothing and pleasurable, if taken in moderation.

O'Riordan, the lead singer and songwriter of the cranberries, has a unique quality — no doubt about it.

But, on the cranberries' latest release, No Need To Argue, her voice becomes rather monotonous and annoying. She often uses an upward slide at the end of a phrase that (after a few songs) nags worse than a week-long cold sore.

On the positive side, this album is an achievement musically for the Limerick, Ireland band. Guitarist Noel Hogan and bassist Mike Hogan are to be commended.

After the quartet's debut release, Everybody Else Is Doing It, So Why Can't We?, I had some questions for their sophomore effort.

Songwriting and instrumentation pulled this album from poor to mediocre. A few diverse styles break ground for the band.

"Zombie," the first single off the album, is also the best song. It offers something new from the Cranberries —fast-paced, grinding rock. While MTV will most likely kill this one quickly, it shows the band was no fluke.

Another track, "I Can't Be With You," proves the contrast between the band musically and lyrically.

The music is superb. The lyrics are crap. O'Riordan's voice is raw, but she constantly reverts back to her (annoying) trademark slide.

CRANBERRY SAUCE The Cranberries, having come off of the success of their smash debut Linger, recently released their sophomore effort, No Need to Argue, which will determine if the band is fantastic or a fluke.

Rock concerts should not be painful

Attending rock concerts is a big part of many people's lives. These exciting events bring happiness and fun to millions of people every night.

I remember my first concert very well. I was a freshman in high school, and I slyly skipped basketball practice in order to make it on time.

In one night, I was going to see two six-string legends, Jeff Beck and the late, great Steve Ray Vaughn. My dad and I had looked forward to this moment for weeks, and we weren't disappointed. The music was obviously above-average, and everyone had a good time. The music was the focus, and everyone kept to themselves, minding their own business and grooving to the tunes. Unfortunately, all shows aren't like this.

Last year, I caught a few shows. Although the music was good, there was a factor that kept me from having an entirely good time.

When I saw Nirvana, the Boredoms and the Meat Puppets in Dayton I couldn't even stand up due to the violent nature of the crowd. I'm a fairly big guy, too.

Also I saw Smashing Pumpkins. Once again, the music was great, but it was hard to enjoy it when I had to worry about defending myself.

Why does it have to be like this? Why do bone-headed muscle-men feel the need to pound each other to have a good time?

When I'm attending shows like these, I simply try to hold my ground. I don't set my sights on guys who I want to knock down or vulnerable girls who don't know who it was that touched them "there." It's really quite ridiculous. A concert is a musical performance, not a rugby match. Some of these dorks with their shirts off and who carry the "two men enter, one man leave" philosophy shouldn't be allowed to attend.

This leads me to my last few shows. I recently saw Widespread Panic (twice) and Phish.

What was different about these shows? For one thing, I could enjoy the music without having to look over my shoulder. The incredibly inspired performances took everyone captive. The whole crowd was locked into the music. No elbows to the chin or boots to the face.

Almost everyone in attendance was friendly. The power of the beautiful music was enough to keep everyone peaceful. I knew that I could lose myself in the music without having to worry about getting blindsided by a former all-state linebacker who liked the "Today" video.

Concerts are a gathering in the name of music, not violence. I don't see why you can't get into the music without bashing the person next to you. If these testosterone-pumped Charles Bronsons would channel their rage in a more productive manner, I'm sure Bill Curry would welcome them with open arms.

GOAL WOE The UK soccer team, which plays host to Ohio State today, has scored just one goal in its past four games.

OSU invades Cage

By Jason Dattilo
Assistant Sports Editor

After losing two games in its own invitational tournament last weekend, the UK men's soccer team will attempt to rebound this afternoon at 3 p.m. against Ohio State.

The Buckeyes invade Cage Field with a 7-6-1 overall record and 2-2 mark in Big Ten play.

OSU features a physical, up-tempo style of soccer, said UK head coach Ian Collins.

"(Ohio State) plays a fairly direct style of soccer," Collins said yesterday. "They love to send people down the field and get people free."

Striker Matt Schroeder is one player Buckeye head coach Gary Avedikian hopes will be running free down the field. Schroeder has scored nine goals and dished out four assists on the '94 campaign.

Two Buckeye goalies have seen action this season. Avedikian has given both Todd McCandlish (32 saves, two shutouts) and Chad Abend (31 saves, three shutouts) significant time in the goal box.

Despite Ohio State's mediocre record, the team posted an impressive 2-0 shutout of the Wisconsin Badgers on Oct. 2.

The Badgers were the nation's 10th-ranked squad when they fell to the Buckeyes in Columbus.

OSU beat UK 3-1 last season.

The Wildcats endured two consecutive shutouts in last weekend's tourney, and Collins said his team's problem continues to be its lack of execution.

The Cats lost to Hofstra and Butler by scores of 3-0 and 1-0 respectively during the weekend tournament.

"I was disappointed in the results but not in the way we played," Collins said. "We dominated both games except for one thing, and that's putting the ball in the back of the net."

In fact, UK has scored only one goal in its past four games.

Striker Toby McComas, who scored the only goal in UK's shutout of Louisville last week, was the last Wildcat to put a shot past an enemy goalkeeper.

"We're just having a real tough time around the goal," Collins said. "We are having trouble getting that initial breakthrough...."

"The only thing I can fault is our finishing."

The UK defense limited Hofstra to four shots on goal while Butler managed only two.

But of the six shots taken by opponents over the weekend, four turned into goals.

Collins said UK goalkeeper Chris West was the victim of some well-placed balls over the weekend.

Including last weekend's play, West has now given up 15 goals on the '94 season.

Hot Hilltoppers to face UK

WKU on a roll

By Doc Purcell
Senior Staff Writer

The UK volleyball team will take a reprieve from its tumultuous Southeastern Conference schedule today.

But that doesn't mean things will get any easier for the Wildcats.

The squad faces intrastate rival Western Kentucky at 7 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

The Hilltoppers travel to Lexington boasting an impressive 15-6 record overall and a 1-2 mark in Sunbelt Conference meetings, and they are expected to provide an SEC-like test for the Cats.

The Cats also are entering the matchup on something of a roll. Despite a shaky 7-12 standing overall this season, the squad has been relatively impressive throughout its string of SEC meetings.

The team is coming off a two-game road trip this past weekend, in which it defeated Ole Miss in Oxford Friday night, but lost to Mississippi State in Starkville Sunday afternoon.

Despite Sunday's loss, the Wildcats enter their meeting with the Hilltoppers stacked with fire power and boasting a confidence level that seems to rise with each match.

In the past several weeks, the Cats' outside hitters have been the major source of both firepower and confidence for the team.

Junior Molly Dreisbach has had little trouble living up to her billing as one of the league's elite in nearly every match she's played this season.

In Friday's come-from-behind victory over the Rebels, she collected a career-high 36 kills.

Senior Melody Sobczak has been almost as impressive. She garnered 27 digs against the Rebels and has contributed 106 kills and a team-high 112 digs since the beginning of conference play. The Hilltoppers have been led this season by Amber Simons who has collected 334 kills and 230 digs on the year.

The Wildcats currently hold a

HOME AGAIN The UK volleyball team returns home for the first time in 10 days when it entertains Western Kentucky at 7 p.m. 6-1 record overall in the series, including a 3-0 victory a year ago. The Cats will return to SEC play this weekend, as they conclude a three game homestand facing Alabama on Friday night and Auburn on Sunday afternoon.

ViewPOINT

Fathering instinct easily stifled after look at real world

Every once in a while, I get a touch of insanity in the seemingly harmless guise of paternal yearnings. In other words, about twice in a blue moon, I begin to think that it would be a pretty neat thing to have a kid some day.

Kevin Cullen
Kernel Columnist

I guess this is just another sign that I'm growing old and leaving behind my wild, unencumbered youth. That's me — no longer very wild, and increasingly encumbered with financial obligations.

But about this kid thing: Maybe it would actually be cool to have one, but all I have to do is think about it for a while, and the yearning crawls back under the moldy rock it came from. A trip to the grocery store at 10 on a Saturday morning is a good way to remind me of the harsh reality of child-rearing.

I went to Kroger on such a morning recently, and what did I see? Middle-class white kids (which is probably what I would have, though not necessarily by choice) were raising Cain.

There was one kid like something out of that old movie "A Christmas Story" with the guy that was in the Messy Marvin commercials. The little punk was at least 5 years old, and too big to be sitting in the front of a grocery cart, but he was.

I watched him screaming and moaning, wearing a goofy cowboy outfit that was complete with chaps and a vest. (Just out of curiosity, is a cowboy outfit politically correct these days? Should we be making our kids dress up like little Native Americans? Or would that be exploitative?)

The part of the scene that got to me most was the way his mother was just standing there looking for all the world as if she was meditating peacefully.

Perhaps she had a bit of "mother's little helper" in her, but I just tend to think that raising a brat like that must take something out of a person.

I can't stand the thought of ending up indifferent to the wailing of a miserable child, even if the kid is being silly. Not that it would be constructive, but I'd probably be making jokes like, "Sure you can get out of the cart, but then you'll have to pay for the food while I bitch and moan," or "Shut yer mouth, cowpoke, or I'll tie you to the bumper by yer chaps and drag ya home."

When I begin to think about what life was like when I was a kid, I just remember how cruel children can be. I didn't get picked on much, since I was the quiet kid that sat back and watched everyone else, but I remember the playground taunting that went on.

There was a boy named Tim at my school I went to, and he was obsessed with horses.

The other kids would stand around him on the playground taunting him with a song they made up. It went something like, "Tim likes horses, Tim likes horses, Tim likes glue, let's make glue, dog food, dog food, yum yum yum."

Many a recess was whiled away by making the tears run from his eyes.

When I was in third grade, a girl named Tamara Bell used to get all of the grief from the class.

Everyone, including me, used to tease her mercilessly.

We didn't tag people and say, "You've got cooties." We used to say, "You've got Tamara Bell germs." Imagine what that kind of treatment must have done to an 8-year-old kid's mind.

I think she disappeared after that year, and I often wonder if we drove her to drink at an early age.

I found out a couple of years later that she used to wet her pants nearly every day when stuffy like that happened.

I have to admit that I feel guilty about that to this day.

In spite of all this, I could still be kinda nifty to have a kid. (I am getting old, after all.)

I could take my daughter to the park and teach her to play soccer. I say daughter because then she wouldn't have to worry about getting raked up the first day of soccer practice like I did."

If we saw any goofy looking kids playing baseball with their parents, we could have a grand old time making fun of them. Baseball is a sport for geeky whiners anyway — just look at the Major League Baseball strike.

Maybe the scariest thing about kids is just that they're too much like adults. In other words, they can be hateful, whining, selfish brats.

In that case, I'll never be had if I find out that I'm sterile from that wayward soccer ball 18 years ago.

The recent uproar over the Student Activities Board's refusal to bring conservative speaker Pat Buchanan to campus has prompted some students to call for the board's members to be elected, rather than appointed.

All that attitude does is promote political posturing over proven ability.

SAB has been one of the most effective student organizations at UK for years, and one incident should not be grounds for changing a system that isn't broken to begin with.

Chairmen and chairwomen currently are chosen by a selection board, made up of several campus leaders and SAB members. The SAB members provide knowledge about the responsibilities of involved with running the organization, and the other student leaders offer outsiders' views on choosing SGA leaders.

Some would claim this is cronyism and only those insiders who fit the criteria set by the selection board will be chosen. The problem with claim is that it doesn't take into account the way the board runs.

Unlike Student Government Association,

the leaders of SAB deal mainly with entertainment with promotions and less with policy issues. Therefore, someone who wants an SAB position should know the responsibilities and how to execute them before he or she applies.

In an election, anyone could promise to bring a group like Pearl Jam to campus and get a lot of votes, but getting that accomplished would be virtually impossible.

The best advice for those who are upset with SAB is to simply get involved in the board. SAB is held accountable in one giant respect: Anyone can get on a committee in the future. If you hate the groups that play at campus, go to the concert committee and voice your opinion.

If you want Pat Buchanan to speak at campus, get involved with the Contemporary Affairs Committee and get a plan that will work.

This is the best way to hold SAB accountable. By holding elections, all you do is muck up a system that is proven to work and bring petty politics into a board that does their best to shy away from political decisions.

God intolerant of homosexuality

To the editor:

I am getting sick and tired of people telling me that God tolerates homosexuality.

Did He not destroy Sodom and Gomorrah because of sin? And what was that sin? Homosexuality!

Preaching the Bible should be the obvious reason to go to church.

Instead, many pastors preach on the pros and cons of society. My advice: Read the Bible! You need not read very long. The story of Sodom and Gomorrah is within the 20 chapters of the first book.

Furthermore God does not hate homosexuals. He hates the sin of homosexuality.

Argue about gay rights all you want, but please do not use God in the context that He is passive on homosexuality.

Letter promotes stereotypes and has few facts

To the editor:

After reading Staff Columnist Holly Terry's column on black stereotypes in the Oct. 12 issue of the Kentucky Kernel, I imagined it would provoke some letters. However, I thought the responses would be more cogitative than Corbin Anderson's.

Apparently, Anderson's main point is that Terry is promoting stereotypes.

While he doesn't explicitly state how she is promoting stereotypes, he implies she is doing so by expressing her opinion, which is not statistical fact.

This is blatant hypocrisy. He refutes her definition of "most people's ideal of beauty" by saying his opinion wasn't taken.

Where are the facts Anderson? You have done the very act you criticize, unless you have motivation other than criticizing Terry's use of generalizations.

Library design deserves praise

To the editor:

In reference to Stephen Trimble's article about the design of the Central and Life Sciences Library, I would remind his readers of several libraries of earlier architecture.

The "Rotunda," the first library at the University of Virginia was designed by Thomas Jefferson based on the architecture of the Pantheon in Rome.

Dartmouth's Library, "built some 65 years ago also shows signs of early architecture.

I would remind all of us, as we approach this new building, "The library is inside."

Affirmative action should not penalize achievement

Racially based quotas hurt those who have superior qualifications

A fire storm of controversy was set off recently when State Sen. John Preston notified 11 caucasian students that the scholarships they would have received under previous program guidelines had gone to minority applicants who scored below other higher ranking applicants who were awarded scholarships.

The condemnation of this action was as quick as it was severe. But Preston's critics never questioned his assertions, only the way in which he aired them.

Sen. Gerald Neal, the sponsor of the law, which requires that the percentage of minorities who receive scholarships must be equal to the percentage of minorities who applied for the scholarships, called Preston's action "irresponsible" and "reckless," and said it would "fan the flames of racism."

Sen. Joe Meyer said that the way Preston went about this was a violation of Senate etiquette. It is wrong to "involve members of the public" in a situation such as this, Meyer said.

Sen. David Karen accused Preston of manipulating "impressionable teenagers." Sen. Eck Rose described the Preston letter as "uncalled for."

A bit distrustful of democracy aren't we, senators? Don't the people have a right to know about how their government is conducting the people's business?

The reason that these Democratic senators do not want this kind of program discussed is that they know that for the sake of their party's electoral success, they want to stifle any public discussion of this issue.

If I were a Democratic supporter of this kind of program, I would not want the voters to hear about it either.

Todd Gaggary
Contributing Columnist

The unfairness of programs like this one results in equity being sacrificed in the pursuit of the laudable goal of diversity.

In this case, the top 267 ranking students, including three minority applicants, received scholarships. Additionally, according to the Courier-Journal in Louisville, Ky., 11 other minority applicants (ranging from 311 to 440), also were awarded scholarships.

between the students who narrowly missed receiving a scholarship and the applicant who ranked 440 and yet did receive one.

Instead of the current system which can reward one in spite of mediocrity, we should be asking why the shortage of greater quantities of highly qualified minority applicants exists. The root cause, and not the most obvious manifestation, of the problem needs to be identified and then corrected.

To do otherwise is to punish the innocent by taking away a benefit that an individual has fairly earned and give it to one who is, although still qualified, not as qualified as the one who is being bumped from the "winner's" list.

The acceptance of any standard short of excellence will, in the long run, be of no benefit to anyone. Any solution to numerical disparities must never fail to put a premium on achievement.
