Buchwald raps 'Uptight Society'

By KATHI MILLIMET
Kernel Staff Writer

"You're wasting your time," (going to college) Art Buchwald told students in the Student Center Ballroom Wednesday night in the Student Center.

If anyone should know, Buchwald should. Buchwald, the famous humorist-columnist, started his career by quitting high school. He joined the Marines for four years, and decided he needed a college education. Without a high school diploma, Buchwald registered as a "special student" at the University of Southern California. He quit after three years.

Last year USC named Buchwald Alumnus of the Year.

"The name for this country should be the Uptight Society," Buchwald declared. "The white students want out, the black students want in, and the priests won't talk to the cardinal."

"And every uptight individual has an uptight organization to back him up."

Buchwald named the National Rifle Association the most uptight organization he knows of. "I'm for gun registration," he said. "My neighbor owns a gun, and he can't even water his lawn straight."

Buchwald cited other problems that "get people uptight" and his solution for them:

"Charter two 747 jets and load them with German and Japanese bankers and industrialists. Fly them to Hanoi and say, 'This is what happens when you lose a war to the United States.'"

Students taking over administration buildings. "I say instead of kicking them out, brick them in, and let them stay in a while."

Computers. "It's impossible to get out of the Book of the Month Club. I finally got so mad I bent, folded and mutilated their IBM card. They sent me a new card which said, 'The next time you do that, we're going to send you an entire set of the Encyclopedia Britannica.'"

Pornography. "I've always wanted to write a pornographic book, but I got so excited doing the research, I never got around to writing the book."

Buchwald did not spare national administrations, past or present.

He called Nixon a "barrel of mirth," while adding "Thank God for Spiro Agnew."

Buchwald also quipped, "As a humor columnist, I needed Johnson more than he needed me. Now I have Nixon and he makes it easier for me all the time."

Nixon has three White Houses, the columnist said. With "one foot in San Clemente and one foot in Key Biscayne. No wonder he feels a little strain around Mississippi."

Buchwald observed that Billy Graham trusted Nixon because "Nixon was honest when he played golf."

"This says more about Billy Graham than it does about Nixon," Buchwald charged. "What is Billy Graham doing checking Nixon's golf score?"

Buchwald answered his own question: "Billy Graham's job is saving souls—so he has to go where the business is."

Buchwald analyzed the 1968 Presidential race and compared Nixon, Hubert H. Humphrey and George Wallace: Nixon "looks like a guy you wouldn't buy a used car from," Humphrey "looks like the guy who bought one," and Wallace "looks like a guy who would steal one."

Speech study 'deceit' charged by student

By DALE MATTHEWS
Kernel Staff Writer

University Student Advisory Committee member Howell Hopson has charged that a study conducted earlier this semester by the Speech Department "deliberately deceived" students.

One part of the study was undertaken in the form of two questionnaires. One of the questionnaires was entitled "Personal Reaction Inventory."

The front page of the "inventory" explained that "as part of our Speech 181 program development, we are interested in some of the general traits and behaviors of students taking Speech 181 bring with them to the course. This interest is motivated by the hope of getting a better 'picture' of the students taking our course in order to better be able to tailor the course to fit the needs and expectations of the students taking the course."

The Personal Reaction Inventory contains over 80 true-false questions such as "I sometimes feel resentful when I don't get my way," "There have been times when I felt like rebelling against people in authority even though I knew they were right," "I have diarrhea once a month or more," and "There have been occasions when I felt like smashing things."

Those taking the survey were advised not to put their names on it. Hopson and at least one Speech 181 instructor, however, have alleged that the survey is coded in such a way that it can be correlated with the second questionnaire which contains the student's name.

The directions for the questionnaire which identifies the student claims that the "Speech Topic Interest Survey" being taken is to discover student evaluation of possible speech topics. The directions also state that "no individual person's responses will be singled out."

A third test administered some three weeks after these first two also asked for the student's names. According to Hopson, the instructions given to the Speech 181 instructors told them to advise the students that their names were necessary because there were several divisions of the test. Hopson and another source, however, claim that there were no divisions of those taking the test.

Hopson maintains that although there might not be any harm to the student inherent in the test questions themselves, there is harm and reason to be disturbed if the students were

Larger student role in USAC seen

By MIKE WINES
Assistant Managing Editor

Next year's increased student participation in the University Senate will also mean a bigger role for the University Student Advisory Committee, USAC chairman John Nelson said yesterday.

And to handle the larger work load, USAC committee members are searching for a 1971-72 chairman who can coordinate the group's activities. Any student is eligible to apply for the post by submitting an application to the Student Government office before 5 p.m. Monday.

Beginning next fall, USAC will serve as "the academic body of the Student Senate, in an advisory role to the senate and the Student Government executive," said Nelson. The organization will be one of four major committees advising the senate and SG executives next year.

The new advisory role represents a major change in USAC policy, according to Nelson. In the past the group has operated relatively independent of Student Government, which had its own academic affairs committee serving essentially the same function as USAC.

Under the new arrangement, USAC will absorb the SG committee's functions as well as those of other SG academic groups.

"It will spend most of its time coordinating the efforts of students working on problems...expediting their solutions," said Nelson. "It's quite a different role than what we formerly had."

Nelson said next year's USAC will probably be a small group, but will be completely open to students with complaints about the academic system.

"Next year USAC will try to open up Student Government. We'll try to get away from the idea that you have to be on 25 committees just to get in on the twenty-sixth," Nelson said.

Terry McCarty, another USAC

member, said that all students would, in effect, be "ex officio" members of the committee.

"We'll be very open to any student who wants to work on anything he's concerned with in the area of academic affairs," she said.

Miss McCarty said next year's USAC chairman would have to be "someone who is really interested in the area of academic affairs and who can coordinate student interests and efforts in academic areas."

"He's going to need insight into areas where students can be effective in creating academic reform," she said.

After the chairman is chosen, students will be eligible to apply for positions on the advisory board. New USAC members will be chosen by an SG "committee on committees" composed of the SG vice president and the chairman of the four Student Senate committees.

Correction

There was an error in the Monday, April 12, edition of the Kernel in the story concerning Dean of Students Jack Hall's proposed student code revisions. The story incorrectly stated that a student must be informed that he is in violation of section 6.1 of the code (dealing with interference and coercion) before he can be charged under that section. The story should have stated that a student must be notified he is in violation of section 6.1 only if he is not engaged in physical violence, destruction of property or a state of emergency has not been declared. The Kernel regrets the error.

On Earth Day?

Muskie raps FBI spying

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie broadened congressional criticism of the FBI Wednesday by accusing it of massive spying on 40 to 60 of last April's Earth Day antipollution observances. "If antipollution rallies are a subject of intelligence concern" the Maine Democrat said in a Senate speech, "is anything immune?"

He said "there is no justification for any part of the federal intelligence community surreptitiously observing and reporting on legitimate political events which do not affect our national security or which do not involve a potential crime."

Muskie, an unannounced candidate for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, accused the FBI of engaging in general political surveillance without any indication of a specific target. "It was a fishing expedition," he said.

Muskie said neither President Nixon nor Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell "will do anything to change this situation," adding that "The President, in the face of reports of investigations that should outrage the nation, remains silent."

No comment
Neither the FBI nor the Justice Department had any immediate comment on Muskie's speech.

FBI sources indicated that any surveillance of Earth Day activities might have stemmed from efforts to keep tabs on such groups as Students for a Democratic Society and Progressive Labor Party, which it describes as a pro-Communist Chinese organization.

Muskie's speech came just 10 days after House Democratic leader Hale Boggs accused the FBI of tapping congressional telephones, a charge the FBI denied.

Muskie commented that "a large percentage of congressmen believe their phones are tapped" and told reporters that while "I make no such assumptions, I do not refute them either."

Independent board
In his speech, Muskie proposed creation of a new independent board to oversee the FBI and other federal intelligence agencies. He released also what he said was an FBI report describing in detail activities in Washington during last year's Earth Week, including a rally at which he spoke on April 22, 1970.

Muskie repeated to newsmen his belief that J. Edgar Hoover, the 76-year-old FBI director, should resign but said he is more concerned with the basic issues involved in FBI surveillance.

Abernathy calls for total Viet withdrawal

DETROIT (AP)—The Southern Christian Leadership Conference called Wednesday for the total withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam, and freedom for "political prisoners."

The SCLC's program embracing nonviolent civil disobedience was announced by the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, who succeeded the late Dr. Martin Luther King as head of the organization.

Abernathy was in Detroit for a meeting of the SCLC's 54-member board of directors.

He said the organization was giving top priority to what he called "the war against repression."

He said the SCLC wants all American troops withdrawn by Aug. 28, the eighth anniversary of the march in Washington, D.C., in which King talked about his "dream of justice and brotherhood for all mankind."

"Equal administration of justice" is another demand, Abernathy said, adding that this means "the freeing of all political prisoners—not just the Bobby Seals and an Angela Davis but the countless number of others who are black and who are poor but whose names have not made the headlines at all."

Miss Davis is being held in California in connection with an abortive attempt by prisoners to escape custody which resulted in the death of a Superior Court judge in San Rafael. Seale is on trial in New Haven, Conn., in connection with the slaying of a Black Panther member who, according to testimony, was a police informer.

Abernathy outlined other demands, including quality education, and a guaranteed annual income of $6,500 for a family of four.

He said the demands would be underscored through "militant, massive, nonviolent demonstrations."

Deception of students demands immediate attention

A news story in today's Kernel acutely illustrates the blatant deception of UK students which is promoted by some selfish faculty members. The incident serves to underline the danger of a system which feeds on the deceived, mislead UK students.

The story involves the Speech 181's 500 or so students who were administered research questionnaires under the direction of Dr. John Baseheart. On each of two occasions Baseheart instructed the 181 faculty (consisting primarily of graduate teaching assistants although other faculty members were involved, including the department chairman) to inform the students that the 'secret' questionnaires would not be matched with other questionnaires which contained their names. In the second case, Baseheart even formulated a lie for the instructors to present their students as to why they were asked to give their names on one questionnaire and why the questionnaires were numbered. In both instances the questionnaires were actually matched, according to the Kernel reporter.

Although one of the questionnaires contained some personal information, it should be emphasized that the actual damage which might be incurred by the students is slight. However, it is the deception itself which warrants severe scrutiny.

In the words of Howell Hopson, who uncovered the information, this is merely the type of deception we should expect when the faculty is pressured to produce at any price and students' welfare is subordinated to the guinea pig level. Hopson only made the information public after he had approached the academic ombudsman and had been denied satisfactory action on the problem.

There is ample blame to be distributed in this fiasco, but that offers little improvement in the situation. The department chairman who approved the plan and administered it to his class must share responsibility with the teaching assistants who passively acquiesced to the deliberate deception and perpetuated it on their students.

When an institution operates under priorities as perverted as those at UK we should expect this type of action. Nevertheless, it's a bitter pill to swallow.

Kernel Soapbox Strike on April 21

By GATEWOOD GALBRAITH

Wednesday, April 21, has been set as the date for action by the students of this University, in the form of a general boycott of all classes. The Student Center Patio has been reserved, by those of us who wish to see a united effort on the part of the students here, for the purpose of allowing interested parties to express their views on any grievance which they feel this monster of institutionalization is perpetuating.

Speakers, including Wendelsdorf, Westerfield, James Williams, myself and others have agreed to speak on those subjects which have become near and dear to them. These issues include the Student Code, the hiring and firing policy, the Kernel conspiracy, the right of students to register to vote and permeating all of these, the political manipulation of this supposedly educational institution by King Louie, alias, Nonnonsense and his comrade in arms, ABC bored, the now defunct chicken baron.

Together, these two have used their political pull, i.e. money, persuasion, power and intelligence (sic) to their advantage on the Board of Trustees, both in order to enhance their political image in the state and to castrate the students of their rights in the state and to castrate the students of their rights in saying what is, to them, a relevant education.

The following points are, I hope, explanatory enough, to instigate in the students on this campus, a desire to come together as a power bloc. This unity should let Nunn, Chandler, and their political enunchs know that the time of students as niggers is gone.

1) Student Code: This, of course, effectively removes any and all rights that a student, as an individual, might have. Like a guillotine it can be used by the administration to remove a head from the campus for anything that he may have done or wish to do.

2) Hiring and Firing Policy: I believe that there should be only three votes allowed on the retention or dismissal of a faculty member. They should belong one each, to the chairman of that discipline, the faculty members of such and the Student Advisory Committee. Anyone outside of that department can only be swayed in their decision-making by political force or personal bias and this, historically has led to the dismissal of our finest and most relevant instructors.

3) Kernel controversy: A political move has taken place to hurry the demise of the Kentucky Kernel and effectively strangle its voice as a student publication. Are we as students going to allow the non-academically orientated Board to decide what we shall read and hear and what we shall not?

These are but three of the issues with which we are confronted. As stated earlier there are others, but right now, let me make one thing clear. These are not only words that make up a reason for a call to action. These issues are fact and affect us, each and every student, every day, in every classroom. Their ramifications and manifestations are many, but their one end result is clear; to deny us as students relevant education by the removal of our rights and our right to speak of and protest that removal. Boycott Classes April 21.

Kernel Forum: the readers write

An opinion poll

To the Editor of the Kernel:

Opinion polls are very much in vogue these days. Everybody is trying to find out everyone else's views on everything. And, we have polls that ask almost anything: 'Should Loyalty Oaths (genulflect) be required of all students and faculty?', 'Should UK students who participate in demonstrations, which may lead to mass destruction of property and lives (in that order), be dismissed from school?', 'Should funds to the Kernel be cut off retroactive as of January 1, 1968, with these collected proceeds going to the publication of Daniel Boone Fried Chicken's news sheet—Bummer Boone?', etc.

Not wanting our newspaper to be behind the times, I think it is only fitting and proper for the Kernel to start its own poll—"Pulse of the Nation." Once a week (Saturday's have proven best) certain earth shattering questions could be asked of the readers. Since no one is prevented from clipping out the form and voting, this poll should honestly reflect the nation's opinion on certain important issues.

This reasoning has lead us to the conclusion that the poll will not only reflect the pulse of the nation, but in fact, will mirror world views. (One rather pedantic quibbler has said that some peoples might not be able to read English. Even though we are sure that this is the silliest argument we have ever heard, we made a poll of our staff, asking the question: "Is this the silliest argument that we have ever heard?" The majority, 31.2 percent, overwhelmingly said "Yes". Only 74 percent said "No". 43 percent forgot the question.) Lastly, this poll would be ever bit as authoritative as the (da daa) standard of the world—"Your Prejudice Counts Around Here"—published locally in the Lexington Born-Loser and validated by the eminent statistician Free W. (Water) Works.

Before I forget what I'm doing, I would like to submit five questions for the poll's world premier:

- 1) Is the "Wildcat" the best high school or grade school paper?
- 2) Do we need a Board of Trustees?
- 3) Do the current members serve the best interests of the UK community?
- 4) Should we have an annual bop 'em in the face, "rassle" 'em at lunch, "murder not just manslaughter" non-violence award in honor of that fearless marshall, who with six-guns strapped on each hip, vowed to "help clean up this mess at UK"?
- 5) Is Lt. Calley eligible for nomination?

PATRICK SCHNEIDER
Senior, Topical Major

Thanks!

To the Editor of the Kernel:

This short note can in no way express the appreciation we feel but can only serve as a token measure of gratitude for everything you've done for us. As you are well aware, we started our campaign several months ago endeavoring to arouse interest in our Student Government. In the very brief time of active public campaigning we raised the issues which confronted us all as students, you supported our cause by your concern and your vote, and we, in turn, acquired new friends and lasting friendships.

Aspiring to the Presidency and Vice-presidency, we feel we could have accomplished much while involving many but now, in light of defeat, we must regroup and pool our resources into other channels and positions of campus responsibility. Our only hope now is that you remain concerned, that you attempt to work within the present Student Government structure, but always continue to raise questions about legitimate grievances that plague our University. Only through your voice can this University make the gains that were espoused during the campaign.

So, once again, thanks, and if we were able in any way to make you or someone on this campus a little more concerned, a little more aware, or a little more interested in this University, then our defeat was really a victory in disguise and we can claim to have made a significant contribution.

Call for help

To the Editor of the Kernel:

I don't know if this letter will help. It probably won't but by this time I've got nothing to lose. A little over eight weeks ago, my window in Haggin Hall was broken with a snowball. Since then my roommate and I have flooded every appropriate department in the University of Kentucky system with maintenance reports, phone calls, and visits.

We have covered the giant hole with everything imaginable but we have still been frozen, rained out, snowed in, and fed up. Fixing a window pane is really no major operation but it seems that in this system they prefer to wait until someone raises hell. Well, I'm raising it, so someone please stop and watch it rise.

Chinese-American relations 'thaw' analyzed

PEKING (AP)—Suddenly Chinese-American relations have taken a great leap forward. The question now is: can the momentum be maintained?

Premier Chou En-lai set the tone of the new look when he told 15 U.S. table tennis players and officials Wednesday that "a new page" in links between the two nations has been opened and that Americans soon may be streaming to the mainland.

The earnest of this promise is the presence in the People's Republic of the players and three U.S. correspondents permitted to cover their activities.

Until Chou's meeting with the team in the great Hall of the People, no one was quite sure how to measure the Chinese thaw. The warmth with which Chou greeted the Americans suggested that China's proffer of friendship at the human level is no passing fancy. The door has been opened more than a crack.

The Chinese have attached no visible conditions to their gesture toward a government they still regard as wrong-headed and willful in its policy toward Formosa and Vietnam.

I would be understanding a pragmatic, hard-headed group of leaders, however, to suppose that their campaign of smiles is based on a new-found affection for America. Possibly the affection for individual Americans always has been there, but it has not been judged useful or politic for nearly two decades to restore people-to-people contacts. In doing so now the Chinese recognize that the barriers have been up too long. But they apparently also count on some positive American responses at the government level.

What these are has not been spelled out, but that is likely to be apparent soon.

A first guess is that Peking hopes to see a change in U.S. opposition to this country's toward relaxation of the rules reached Peking in the middle of the night, and no reaction is yet evident.

Regardless of the practical rewards in prospect it seems fair to say that the Chinese already have reaped a harvest of good will not only among Americans but internationally.

In some way or another most people in the West believe that there can be no peace in Asia until the China question is resolved. In the past any small Chinese concessions were acclaimed. Now they seem to be pouring out.

The Ping-pong players chosen to be the catalysts for this transmutation of the base metal of hostility toward the purer alloy of good will were charmed by Chou's versatile performance at Wednesday's reception.

Once a star of the Peking opera, the handsome revolutionary fascinated, amused and captivated his audience. The Americans responded with lively questions and banter. One of the young players, long-haired Glen Cowan, asked Chou what he thought of the American hippie movement and got back a reasoned philosophical answer which, summed up, said: "Don't talk, act; and whatever you do be sure it's for the majority good."

Yet the Americans, being of the ordinary apple-pie type with a couple of erudite exceptions, were bewildered by the fact that entry into the United Nations when that issue comes to a vote this fall.

There also have been signs that Peking might be anticipating some more significant changes in the long-sustained American restrictions on Chinese trade-restrictions underlined in the Korean War 18 years ago. Word of the Nixon administration's new moves all around them they have seen slogans which picture U.S. "imperialists" in less than flattering terms.

They couldn't reconcile this with all the sweetness and light. The slogans represent the threat the Chinese say they have felt for years from the American military presence in Asia. That situation hasn't changed. And though Chou with superpoliteness refrained from an unkind word during his encounter with the Americans, he did not say anything laudatory about the Nixon administration.

So the slogans will remain where they are.

Thus, if a new springtime in U.S.-China relations seems around the corner, it could still be a long wait for summer.

Emanuel likes country, people, horses

Why does a high school football star choose UK?

Why would a high school All-American from football-rich Pennsylvania choose the University of Kentucky over several other major universities seeking his services?

According to Mike Emanuel, latest of a growing list of signees for the 1971 Wildcat freshman team, the reasons are many and varied, ranging from the friendliness of the people of Kentucky to the program being assembled by Wildcat Coach John Ray.

Emanuel, a 6-foot-1, 210 pound linebacker signed by Wildcat assistant Carroll Huntress, will bring to Kentucky a most impressive list of credentials.

In addition to being named an All-American by Scholastic Coach Magazine, he was a first team All-State selection in Pennsylvania and will participate in the "Big 33" game in August.

At Neshaminy High School in Langhorne, his athletic honors included the usual all-league, all-valley and all-county. He was also Bucks County Courier Times "Player of the Year" and a member of the Philadelphia All-Scholastic first team.

He is also a student government and student athletic representative and was elected outstanding student athlete and "Mr. Redskin" at Neshaminy.

Emanuel was a wrestler as a sophomore and was a catcher on a Babe Ruth team which won the state championship two years and was runner-up in the Babe Ruth World Series.

With such an impressive list of credentials, Emanuel naturally was sought by some of the nation's finest football programs.

"I visited Michigan, Ohio State, Wake Forest and Georgia," he told Stacy Briggs of Times. "I visited them all, but those people in Kentucky... I love them. I really like the country."

Impressed by a visit to a thoroughbred horse farm, Emanuel said, "And all the people, the neighbors, are the same good kind of people. They're all nice people."

He also liked the campus and was impressed by the University's expanding program in physical education, which will be his major.

"And then there's coach Ray," he said. "He saw my films and that's how it started. I really like the man."

Emanuel said he found the entire Kentucky coaching staff "easy to talk to. It doesn't take a long time to ask them something."

He asked Ray, "Are you going to stay at Kentucky?"

"I wouldn't have left Notre Dame if I hadn't felt that way," Ray replied.

In a final analysis, Emanuel said he was very happy about his choice: "I thought it over and considered all the people who would be involved and concerned. My folks are relieved. My mother is very happy. And they're what counts with me."

PRESS BOX

with Mike Tierney

Horses have stolen the headlines from humans on the sports pages now, especially in Lexington with the Keeneland spring meet in session.

Consequently, several people have inquired as to why we don't print racing results in this paper. After all, probably half of the 17,000 UK students attend the track at least once during the season, as evidenced by the empty classrooms in the afternoon.

Although I enjoy racing and I am an occasional bettor at the track (I have "donated" roughly $100 to the betterment of Keeneland), I have refrained from referring to racing on this page.

However, I journeyed to Keeneland Saturday with the possibility of a story in mind. The place was beautiful, and a record crowd was on hand. My pen was itching to describe the marvelous sport of horse racing.

Instead I have a tale of woe to relate.

The KERNEL had obtained a season press pass: from the gracious folk at Keeneland. So, just before the first race, I made my way into the press box.

Now I was, I think, dressed neatly. I hadn't dusted off my tuxedo to wear to the races, but my apparel was respectable—except for (God forbid!) an Army jacket.

As I entered the plush room containing about 20 people, a tall distinguished-looking gentleman approached me.

The man, who I believe is the director of public relations, appeared friendly. Little did I know that behind that smiling mask was a mind of evil.

"What are you doing here, boy?" he asked.

I flashed him my pass (we sports writers always "flash" things), but he reacted as if I had flashed him a peace sign.

"Who do you represent, anyway?" he responded roughly. "The Kentucky Kernel, sir," I replied.

"Well, look at you," he shot back. "You look like a slob. Look at him," he announced to the other writers and, seemingly, to the 18,000 racing fans.

So, I looked at myself. "So what?" I said.

"Do you actually have the nerve to come in here dressed like that?" he said. "Get out of here."

With that friendly salutation, he grabbed the pass from my hand and pointed his finger toward the door. Embarrassed, I left.

After several minutes of contemplation, I decided to return to the guy and find out exactly what had teed him off. I caught him leaving the press box before the second race.

"I'd like to apologize, sir," I said. "I didn't realize there was a dress code here."

"Well, of course there is," he answered. "What kind of place do you think this is?"

For the next 30 seconds, his eyes spanned me from head to toe, as if I had just landed from a foreign planet. I broke the silence.

"If you'll return the pass, sir, I'll be glad to wear a coat and tie next time."

Expecting a flat "yes" or "no" answer, I was shocked by his next remark.

"Did you serve in the army?" he asked, referring to my jacket.

I responded negatively. Very offended, he said, "Many, many fine men have served in our armed forces."

Oh, no kidding? I didn't know that.

"I realize that, sir," I said. "I'm not trying to mock them. It's just the style now at the university."

"You have no right to wear that jacket," he said. "Does your father approve of your appearance?"

Good old dad. "He tolerates it," I replied proudly.

He then proceeded to ask my name, my home town, my father's name, his occupation and our general financial status. Just as if I were applying for a job, I answered as politely as I could.

Eventually, I thought that I was beginning to communicate with him. He agreed that it was only his opinion that I looked like a "slob". My hopes for recovering the pass rose.

"Thank you for understanding, sir," I said.

"That's alright. When I spoke to you on the phone, I didn't realize what type of person I was dealing with." After leveling that low blow, he left—with the pass.

Now I'm not going to conclude that this slob, the first racing official I have ever had the pleasure of meeting, is representative of the entire sport. But if he is, I have written my last article on racing.

Incidentally, after losing at the track six straight times, I won $20.

Revenge is sweet.

Don Pratt faces fine, 5 years in prison

A physically unqualified Kentuckian who was honorably discharged in spring, 1967, as a 2nd Lieutenant in the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps was refused appeal last week by the Supreme Court and now looks ahead to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

In an eight to one decision on April 5, the Supreme Court denied certiorari in the case of Don B. Pratt, a 26-year-old resident of Lexington, who seems to be the first Kentuckian to resist the military draft in direct connection with the Vietnam War.

"I soon will become a prisoner of war in this country," says Pratt, who awaits arrest at his home, 720 Sunset Dr., Lexington.

Pratt, a tall, lanky man who suffers from spontaneous pneumothorax, a chronic disease of lung collapse, refused induction Jan. 26, 1968, by not reporting for a draft physical. Although he would have been physically deferred, Pratt contends that the Selective Service methods of deferment are "discriminatory" and that the Vietnam War is both "illegal and immoral."

"To escape into some 'out' or deferment position would be easy for me but definitely not easy for those not mentally, physically, economically, socially, politically, religiously or culturally able to escape," Pratt said in his Jan. 26, 1968, position statement.

Library plans music 'fling'

The Margaret I. King library will hold a "King Spring Fling" featuring a concert in the library's second floor reading room at noon Wednesday, April 21.

The music will be provided by the Collegium Music Recorder Consort. The students in the group—Helen Adkinson, Kris Gibbs, John Gibbs, Stewart Pickett and Loren Tice—will offer selections ranging from classical to jazz.

"It's going to be a nice informal thing for an hour or so at noon," said Stuart Forth, director of Library Services. Forth explained that the success of a Christmas party held at the end of last semester led to the idea of doing something special for spring.

"The keynote," Forth stressed, "will be informality and pleasure."

Asked why the concert wasn't being held outside, Forth explained that weather was unpredictable and that "musicians don't really like playing in the wind. Frolicing on the frisbee field afterwards is up to the students," Forth added with a grin.

"We just want to let people know that librarians are humans, too," Forth said. "And you can quote me on that."

"But the personal question should be secondary to the moral question of responsibility to all our fellowmen," he continues.

Pratt contends that the government of the United States is engaged in "a war of aggression against the nation and peoples of Vietnam."

"I'm opposed to all war, all organized violence against people and their environment."

Judge James F. Gordon of the 6th District Federal Court in Louisville on April 8, 1968, sentenced Pratt to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine, the maximum sentence for refusal of induction into the armed forces.

Judge Gordon affixed Pratt's bond at $12,000. Lacking funds to pay the bond, Pratt was forced to serve 42 days in the Jefferson County jail while Robert A. Sedler, his lawyer, appealed the bond to the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. That court found the bond to be excessive and reduced bond to $2,000 which was immediately placed by Pratt's parents who live in Lexington.

The sentence was appealed to the Supreme Court which denied certiorari on April 5, in an eight to one decision. Pratt has not received notice on whether he is to turn himself in or is to wait to be arrested, but he expects to be in prison within two weeks.

The three year wait for the court's decision has caused many problems in his life, Pratt says. Although he married two years ago, he hasn't found a long term job. During the last three years, Pratt has taught elementary school and worked on two research projects at the University of Kentucky.

In 1965, after participating in a ROTC summer training camp in Indiantown, Penn., Don attended a United Christian Movement (UCM) national conference in Chicago.

"The UCM conference dealt with war, draft and racism and then," Pratt recalls, "I read two books, Why We Can't Wait by Martin Luther King and Vietnam Reader by Bernard Fall and Marcus Raskin."

"I became active in anti-war activities—peace vigils and marches," says Pratt. "By mutual agreement the Army honorably discharged me because I could not uphold all the obligations and duties of an Army officer in direct connection with the Vietnam War."

Pratt says his wife, parents, two brothers and sister have been "supportive" of his stand. "They've begun to agree with my point of view of the war and the draft," he says.

His younger brother, Bob, is a private in the Army serving in Germany. "Bob was put into the Army cook school because of his attempt to file for conscientious objector status," Don Pratt says.

According to the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors (CCCO) office in Philadelphia, Penn., about 500 men currently are serving time in prison for military draft resistance. The CCCO estimates several hundred more men are on probation due to their resistance efforts.

In connection with Pratt's case, the Lexington Peace Council is sponsoring a letter writing campaign "to gain release of men who have refused to participate in the Vietnam War."

deliberately deceived. "This is a prime example of the emphasis and concern for students" in the Speech Department, Hopson said.

Hopson told a Kernel reporter that when he became aware of the situation he took the matter to Academic Ombudsman Garrett Flickinger. Hopson said he was later told that the testing conducted was permissible if the students were notified concerning the results of the test.

So far, Speech 181 instructors do not know anything of the purpose and results of the study. One of these instructors, who wishes to remain anonymous, said Tuesday, "I never knew what it (the study) was for. I still don't know if it's for personal research or what."

Flickinger was asked about the study and refused to comment on situation because of his position as Ombudsman. A question was "legitimate institutional research" such as is carried out routinely.

Bostrom maintained that the Speech Topic Interest Survey and the Personal Reaction Inventory could not be matched, but that the STIS could be matched with the later survey.

Bostrom claimed it is necessary to deceive the students taking the test in order to get objective responses to the questions asked. He also said this deception is a common practice and selected a social-psychology journal from a shelf to prove his point. The first four studies described in the journal began with a description of how the subjects were duped in order to get the desired results.

Bostrom also maintained that the instructors had been informed of the purpose of the test and were told to tell their students, "but most of them are just graduate students and they are so busy they probably just forgot," he said.

In addition, Bostrom alleges that "you can raise a stink about anything" and that someone is "causing trouble for someone in my department, and I want to find out who it is."

Radio evangelist sued

COLLINGSWOOD, N.J. (AP)—Dr. Carl McIntire, a fundamentalist radio preacher who has been charged in a suit of misappropriating funds of the American Council of Churches that he helped found in 1941, denied Wednesday any wrongdoing.

He said the plaintiffs engaged in an ideological dispute criticizing his politics.

The suit filed in state Superior Court in Camden Tuesday demands an accounting of any funds McIntire may have received in response to solicitations in his radio broadcasts.

"The allegation of misappropriation of funds is sad and ridiculous," he said in a statement issued by his office. "All the funds have been frozen by the bank involved."

He said he made several attempts to settle the dispute, which was initiated by the council.

"Repeated efforts on our part to obtain meetings with these brethren to resolve and settle the matter in accordance with the holy scriptures were rejected," he said. "Instead they went to law against a brother. Nothing was stolen or misused."

McIntire, who has attracted national attention with his Marches for Victory in Vietnam, staged in Washington, said:

"The real problem is the ideological difference in which their group opposes the militant confrontations which have been our practice. They released a statement repudiating the marches for victory in which most of our people participate."

Art Buchwald raps 'uptight society'

He gave examples of graffiti he has seen and made up. "Drink Canada dry—visit Montreal," "Reelect LBJ—he kept us out of Laos and Cambodia," and "Sen. Fulbright reads Margaret Mitchell's interviews underneath the bedcovers."

On a more serious side, Buchwald commented on the Calley trial. "I have to accept the fact that they found this man guilty... If you have a court of law, you have to let them decide, not telegrams and letters."

The columnist charged "paranoia all over the country" is caused by the mass media. The public is being "slugged so hard by communications—we know too much." Buchwald said people are worrying about pollution, wars, overpopulation and the economy, and there's really nothing they can do.

In a question and answer session with the audience, Buchwald gave his opinion regarding phones allegedly being bugged in the nation's capital. "The danger lies not in your phone being bugged, but in thinking your phone is bugged."

Buchwald is also in favor of the draft. "The only way to keep the Army honest is to have thousands and thousands of men in it who hate it."
