PATS ON THE BACK

Paul Willis recently received the following note from Judith Lesnaw, of Biological Sciences:

I have just spent a most productive hour preparing a reference base for a manuscript and class lecture. The new on line medline has increased the efficiency and depth of this process by orders of magnitude. The new services you have provided will doubtless have an enormous impact on the quality of research and teaching at our institution in the coming years. I want to thank you personally.

WORKERS NEEDED FOR BOOKSALE!!

Workers are desperately needed to man posts at the annual booksale on Friday and Saturday, September 27 & 28. If you are interested in helping out - and Paula hopes you are - please sign up in Paula Pope's office or call her at 257-9401.

HAPPY TRAILS TO... ME!

The Green Bean will introduce its new editor with the next issue. Tom House has accepted the task of editing the newsletter and will shoulder the load starting with the October 4th issue. This editor wishes him the best of luck and turns over her clam shell for the Mac with -- it has to be admitted -- a certain amount of relief.

Before I ride into the sunset however, I'd like to thank everyone who contributed articles and information. Aside from knowing the difference between the Dewey Decimal and the Library of Congress systems, I was a total neophyte when it came to the workings of the library system. Your help, patience, and encouragement made my job much easier. Thank you all and good luck, Tom.

SEMINARS ANNOUNCED

The Center for Renaissance Studies at the Newberry Library in Chicago has announced four seminars to be held during the winter and spring of 1992.

Taught by consortium faculty at the Newberry Library, the seminars will cover the topics of: "The Exeter Book: A Tenth-Century Poetic Miscellany and Its Cultural Background," "Late Medieval Manuscripts and Early Printed Books: A Workshop,"

"Gender and Power in the Renaissance," and "Reformation and Counter-Reformation: A New Approach."

For further information concerning registration, funding, or the courses themselves, contact the Center for Renaissance Studies, 60 West Walton St., Chicago, Illinois 60610. Phone: (312) 943-9090.
