To Fight With Half Credit

By NORMA WEATHERSPOON

Guest Editor

On the floor of the University post office lies a long tan envelope. It has been ripped open hurriedly. In the upper left corner are the words "War Department."

Another University student is on his way to war.

But, just in case he should come back to school after he's slayed the Japs and nabbed the Nazis, he takes time to stop by the registrar's office and see about his credits.

Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain explains the situation to him thus, "According to the plan adopted by the University a year ago, a student who leaves school and enters military service within ten days receives credit for the work he has completed. If he withdraws after finishing half the quarter, which ended on February 17 this time, he is given half credit on all subjects in which he is making a passing grade. If he leaves after completing two-thirds of the quarter, March 5 that is, he receives full credit."

"All very well and good," thinks the future fighter. But then he ponders the question a little more and begins to wonder. What good will half of the quarter's credits do him when he gets back to UK? Most of the subjects he's taking are required and the University wants a man to have all of his requirements—not just half.

Suppose that our departing friend is a journalism major. Every morning he gets up and dashes over to Spanish class; when he gets the four credits for this quarter he'll be through with his language requirements. From Miller hall he goes over to McVay for his course in feature writing—three hours a quarter for two quarters required. His English class isn't on the required list but it's a good elective. After noon he must rush in to copyreading and typography lab for two hours. When he comes back and starts planning his graduation requirements he'll find that he has to repeat every subject except his English. What good, then, will his credits do him? They can't count as electives because they're not on the list of subjects which may be elected. They can't count as requirements because he won't be able to take an odd number of credits to go with them. Frankly, he'll be slightly messed up.

Naturally, to the student who plugs along in school for a whole quarter it doesn't seem quite fair to give equal credit to someone who remains in school for only half that long. Often the man who is going into service isn't even required to pass an examination on his courses.

But wouldn't it be fairer to everyone to give the fighting men full credit provided they attend school for half the quarter and pass an exam over the portion of their courses that have been covered before they leave? That way they'd be getting credits that could apply to their graduation requirements when they return.

Maybe this would encourage more students to come back to school after the war. Maybe it would cause some to register for another quarter who might otherwise drop out and stay at home until they are called.

At least it would show the men that their University is doing its part to help them through the struggle and that it will be awaiting their return.

The PR Incident Is Explained

Pershing Rifles, military honorarium, has been ordered to return the trophy won in April, 1942, in the annual drill competition of the Fifth Corps Area. This has caused more than one student to scratch his head and mutter, "What goes on here?"

And the student body is due some explanation of the matter.

The drill team of PR certainly deserves to win any competition it enters if hard work is to receive its reward. It has been pointed out that this is perhaps the only team which gives so much time to preparation for one competitive event which lasts only nine minutes.

Another factor which makes the record of the organization something to which it may point with pride is the rate of turnover of personnel. Unlike players on athletic teams, the members of Pershing Rifles are allowed to compete as members of the drill squad only during the two years they serve as basic ROTC students.

Now for that explanation. Here are the facts of the entire situation as far as we have been able to determine them. Take them and interpret them as you will.

Kentucky was declared the winner of the meet by the judges who were present, and a special committee of Ohio students examined the score sheets and accepted the judges' decision.

The next day, however, Ohio declared that a mistake had been made and that Kentucky had omitted some movement from the drill. The

In Which We Pat Some Backs

Congratulations to those men of the band who were recently awarded the gold and silver UK band keys for faithful and outstanding service.

Although the "Best Band in Dixie" was handicapped this year as to quantity, it undoubtedly was not handicapped as to quality.

From the beginning of the football season and the home games when the band upholds the tradition of colorful entertainment during the half to the end of the basketball season, the landmen have kept their unblemished record.

Probably the greatest thrill to a UK student or fan is at the beginning of the game when you hear a lone trumpet beginning the sweet notes of "On, On, U. of K." It's then that the crowd begins to warm up, to come forth with some of that much-needed school spirit.

So, it's to the band that much of the credit is due. They've led our pep parades before the big games, our victory parades afterward. So now we can conclude that Kentucky wasn't really handicapped when the band was forced to decrease in size. They were strengthened by the knowledge that they should still be tops in the South for fine music.

We dare anyone to deny that this year's band, any UK band, is not the "Best Band in Dixie."

It's encouraging now to know that we can follow our schedule books and not worry too much about whether the course will be offered or not.

"Business as Usual" will be carried on by the University during the spring quarter.

Although we know that some changes will have to be made, we may be sure that no department will be abolished unless absolutely necessary.

That means that all of us who are privileged to remain in school, and try to carry on, will still have the opportunity to take what we wish. There'll be little time for anything but work next quarter, so let's face it now. Let's take advantage of our opportunities.—A.W.

Off They Go...

You Can Sit On A Mountain But Not On A Little Tack

You know, some campus citizens look on this campus, as well as in every other place, as cooperative and considerate. It is the self-proclaimed "big show" who is too busy for anything but his own interests.

We want to report things as accurately as possible, therefore, we ask a few minutes time for occasional interviews. We do not strive to take up as much of a person's time as possible. Our business is timed first.

Readers expect to find correct stories about their university in their paper. The reporters naturally submit what information they can obtain that comprehends accuracy.

Gathering this material sometimes requires questions of people who are supposed to know something about the subject in question. When these sources turn indifferent ears to the reporter's quest, the basis for an accurate story collapses.

It is deplorable that these citizens conduct themselves as well-known members of the horse family at times of the reporter's inquiry.

Edward Price Bell, writing in the Chicago Daily News, said, "The major interview is a carefully constructed transmitting device, a medium, a mirror. It is a mirror held up to a remarkable personality."

We might add that the reflection is had when the mirror is cracked. It is notable that the more important citizens of our University community are infamously available to reporters at all times. These are people who have information at hand, out of whose information stories emerge correctly. These are people who realize that there is an element of timeliness to most news that requires its immediate presentation.

Then to you to whom we speak, be this thought: conclude. You may repose on the crest of the mightiest mountain but not the smallest tack. In other words, you may assume a very high position, but you cannot sit on a very small character with impunity. . . . and there's a point to that!

Editor's note: This editorial was taken from The Knoxville, student publication of Tennessee State University, but it might well have been written in our own Kernel office. It is a true picture of the conditions under which

The Whirlwind

By ED BARNES

• SALUTE TO "POP" A. H. THIELE • PERSONALITY: SPENCER MERWIN • IT'S A GIRL'S CARNIVAL NOW

Hot air, it is said, is a wonderful polisher. I hear Ammons and Dixon are now accepting orders for shoes and silverware . . . cheap too . . . unlimited air supply. In fact, the negroes want to make them members of their Apple Polishing Union. And who was it that said the Delts don't stink together?

Seriously, though, as far as a big name hand is concerned for the Junior-Senior prom, it's out. That doesn't mean the prom won't be good, nor does it mean the band won't be good. It simply means that once again the students who wanted to help the University were not fortunate enough to do so.

If you think for once that Mr. Peterson was the obstacle, you're wrong. He, himself, said that the social committee's money is a base on which to build for a good dance. The cause for its failure was twofold: the first being Uncle Sam's unexpected calling for the air corps, and the other was an office in the Student Union building whose head I shall not mention.

As for me, I have every reason in the world to be mad, but I'm not. Long ago I became immune to false accusations and malicious remarks; however, they did hurt others. I will think the SGA committee deserves credit in their attempt to charge $2 and give the school the best hand in the land. Yet, the man who did the most work and will receive the least credit is "POP" THIELE of the Student Union building.

"POP" worked night and day trying to bring a nation's favorite to our campus . . . he even spent money from his own pocket. He believes as do countless others that his big hands are like Robert's Rules of Order; if they weren't successful, they wouldn't be used at colleges all over the nation.

Campus Personality

Here's a little sketch placed under my door during the recent electric storm. It may not be good but to the subject it carries a definite shock.

SPENCER "SPINNEY" MERWIN, a sophomore from Frankfort, who spends most of his time courting, eating, courting, jibberjugging, and courting is at the present in a great dilemma. He can't decide between T-bone steaks at the cottage and a certain brunette in Bowd hall. The steaks are rationed but so is the Bowd hall sugar. He'll probably need his ration tickets for shoe leather in his merry chase.

He is famous for saying nothing in more words than has Webster's unabridged. After a long struggle, he pushed aside his high school romances to settle down with his Bowd hall Juliet . . . as much as she will let him, which "ain't" much.

He hates studying, competition, of which he is receiving plenty, and listening to a certain columnist (local) talk about the Kernel's censored cooperation with the Pershing Rifles story.

He is majoring in Grillage with Romance as his field of concentration, but he hopes to get in the Paratroops soon so he can start at the top in his career. Oh, that fateful day in March!

No Carnival This Year

At a combined meeting last week of LANCES, ODK, LAMP AND CROSS and SUKY it was deemed that any attempt to hold a carnival this quarter would be futile. It was perhaps the first time such a mass meeting was ever held. Since the Carnival sponsored by LANCES and SUKY was such a great success last spring, the LANCES members hated not to give it this year. And of course SUKY (perhaps second to none in getting things done) was right there backing them up. Moreover, strength glory was added when ODK and LAMP AND CROSS volunteered to help.

With power like that most any sensible plan would survive. But that's the point. It just wasn't plausible. The fact that it could be held only on March 6 made it impossible. There just wasn't enough time left to work on it. . . . besides that, there was no suitable place to hold it.

The spirit and coordination was there but gasoline and time are rationed to the point where the dark horse carnival would have become a night mare. Thanks to such "go getters" as Professor W. S. Ward, Bob Hillenmeyer, Gerald Schaffer, Jim Crowley, Bill Caywood, Givens Dixon, Ralph Eschhorn, Andre Meyer, Bob Hutton, Lewis Sawin, Jerry Macke, and many others for their unrestrained efforts. It's up to the girls now.

Little Bits

FABLE: Barnes and Ammons walked across the campus accompanied by Norma Weatherspoon and Jim Collier. . . . no subtle comments were made.

There's one thing about studying in a fraternity house . . . there's always enough noise to keep one awake.

Thanks a lot to MARY ANN MAGKE, and others. I sincerely appreciate it.

And then there was the AGR who asked me how my toe was feeling . . . he heard I had ptomaine poisoning.

Class Of '49--The Same Old Joes

1945 . . . Finally finished off the Japs. . . . Didn't like the idea of a lifetime in the Army. . . . On our way home decided to take a tour of the old campus. . . . What kind of a kid will show us through the new field house? . . . Wonder what they're like over at the house. . . .

Well, when peacetime gives American youth another chance to graze the pastures of intellect without worrying about the draft board, you'll find that Joe College won't have changed much. He'll be coming to college for the same thing.

Even if he's been through the campaigns in North Africa and France, the ideas and opinions which he has absorbed from our economic system since he was only a few years old will have stuck with him, making him a victim of the same old misguided ambition-ambition which tells him that he's got to be a lawyer or doctor or banker to be anybody. White collar or disgrace.

This intolerance of anything but the executive and the professional is characteristic of today's college student. It'll be the same in 1945, because the present high school student has the same idea, according to a survey recently published in Fortune magazine. Take a look at the results of this survey. See if Harry Highschool's unacademic ideas are any different from yours.

First, the white collar again. Fortune's survey shows that 35.8 per cent of the ten million high schoolers want a professional income: 21 per cent more want executive business positions, and only about 12 per cent indicated that they would be satisfied in the factory or on the farm. When asked if they would take factory work provided the income were equal to that from professional positions, over half of them said "no." "Too monotonous." High school students think that they should have an income of about $50 a week. Children from the better-fitted families expect considerably more.

Too bad. Too bad, unless you feel that the drug of ambition is worth the hang-over of disappointment. And a lot of us besides the high school kids will be disappointed because things just won't fit. It's probably too late to do anything for us, but it's up to our educators to help the next students that wear freshman caps. Somebody tell them that there isn't just in the already crowded white collar ranks for even half the number that wants in. Show them that it's just as much fun and just as much of a contribution to society to turn out a perfect axle as it is to turn out a short story. Show them the facts about their chances of being a successful lawyer or executive. You may be able to do some good if you start right away because the high incomes of defense factories and the experiences of some youths in the service have laid a fine foundation.

The typical high school student's economic ambition was mentioned first because, if the end determines the means, it will dominate his personality habits. Second most important finding in the survey conducted by Fortune was what the high school student considered fun. This, too, will tell you a lot about the Class of '49.

The significant point is that all the high schoolers like the same kind of entertainment—dancing, movies, sports—there were practically no cases of a student naming an individual or official form of recreation. Dancing, movies, sports are named in that order of popularity. Necking is well understood, but is evidently not considered entertainment. Over half of the boys think that 80 to 100 per cent of the high schoolers like their girls. Only a very few show any liking for whiskey. So it looks like the post-war Joe will be doing about the same things for entertainment.

The remainder of the survey included the following facts: About half of the high schoolers think our present governmental organization is perfect and needs no change. Two-thirds of all income classes believe the country would be worse off if there were no rich people. Negroes are the most unpopular of the minorities. Only 15 per cent think there is no use in formulating idealistic peace plans for the post-war years. Practically all of the students say they get along well with their parents.

Well, the place hasn't changed much. . . . It'll take another twenty years. . . . Guess I'll go back home.

Co-ed Corner

By SCOTTY McCULLOUGH

What with the hurry and flurry of campus activities, military balls and open houses, it's a wonder that the coeds of old U. K. have time to dress carefully or to make sure they are looking good at all times. Some of them though, manage to keep up their good looks and get to all the functions without throwing in the towel.

Among the ever so smooth ones was Neva Cooper. Alpha Gam, who came strolling into the grill the other morn, dressed in a snappy suede vest of aqua and red, long sleeved red saddle stitched silk blouse, and wearing a beige skirt that completed a terrific outfit. Something to look at and something to copy.

If you want a complete outfit that strikes the right note on any sports occasion, just your glances on Patsy Pruitt. Independent, who looks right at the games in a chocolate brown wool suit and matching calfskin shoes. A suit is always the right thing and it's one of the essentials in a college girl's wardrobe. This one is a fondled Jean Crean true.

Red-head Jean Elliott, ADPI, goes to classes in the classic sweater and skirt, but puts a striking touch to it with various coats of necklaces or pearls. The old gray flannel skirt and yellow sweater are fine, but sometimes your morale is lifted and your disposition much improved by a hint of color. Try flowers in your hair, artificial or otherwise, if you can get the "softy" look.

Betty Pugh, Alpha Xi, adorns simplicity and follows her convictions with a gray flannel jumper and white blouse that keep her looking neat and neat. The girls in the job printing office, Koko Kocher, Ind., and Betty McClanahan, ADPI, come to work in slacks, for comfort and practicality. And the whole campus turns out in slacks in the cold weather for those same reasons, comfort and practicality.

Wanda Austin keeps smart in a gabardine top coat. Just heavy enough to preserve warmth and light enough for these soft days that look like maybe spring is coming.

Chi Omega Makes Real Gift By Offering Veronica Mimosa

By BETTY JANE PUGH
Kernel News Editor

A real contribution to campus culture was made by Lambda Alpha of Chi Omega in bringing Veronica Mimosa, 16-year-old pianist, to the University for a concert Sunday night in Memorial hall.

Playing with all the fire and vigor and imagination of her youth, the child prodigy exhibited the confidence and intensity of a great artist. Forcefulness and directness characterized her performance as she played "O minor Fantasia and Pastorale" by Johannes Sebastian Bach, "Mystery of fingering technique was at once evidenced in her handling of the difficult fugue.

Dr. Perrine To Discuss Speech And Sound Effects

Dr. J. O. Perrine, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, will give a lecture on "The Electrical Synthesis of Speech" at 7:45 p. m. on Thursday at Memorial Hall. Essentially the apparatus, sometimes called the "Voder," which he will demonstrate, is an electrical arrangement which corresponds to the human speech mechanism in its production of speech and in the completeness of control thereof. It was designed in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, and is built entirely, except for its keys, of apparatus used in everyday telephone service.

It is manipulated by a girl operator from a console which resembles a little old-fashioned organ with a small keyboard and pedal. The operation of the keys and pedal is, in accordance with a definite system, variable speech to be synthesized.

In his talk, Dr. Perrine will discuss speech sounds and their basic elements. The girl operator at the console will perform some very interesting speech demonstrations to illustrate the points brought out. He will also have been studied their recreation by proper combinations of acoustic frequencies becomes an easier task.

The "Voder" which was the main attraction of the Bell Telephone Company exhibit at the two recent world fairs in New York and San Francisco, will be made to announce the letters of the alphabet, the numbers from one to ten, "Mary Had a Little Lamb," and various interesting multiple syllable words. It will be manipulated in such a way that it will speak in a very hoarse, gruff, or a high pitched voice, the shaky voice of an old man, and will laugh and sing.

It is hoped that out of studies of this kind and further developments, instruments and facilities may be provided for carrying on direct telephone conversations over existing lines without interference of one with any other.

The lecture touches also on the significance of the "Voder" as a step in serious telephone research. With the means of direct telephone speech at hand, one may speculate on the possibility of doing so at a distant point, according to Dr. Perrine. It is possible that some day the words spoken into a telephone may be converted into radio waves, a frequency simulating telegraph signals which, in turn, at the distant end of the line, will control electrical currents to re-create the words.

Pawky DePaul Paws Kentucky 53-44 Before 16,000 Windy City Fans

Great Lakes Takes A 60-56 Victory Over Notre Dame

With their six foot, eight inch center, George Mikan, knocking Kentucky shots away from the basket, DePaul's Demons built up a first-half lead and coasted to a 53-44 win over Kentucky's Wildcats in Chicago stadium Saturday night. Some 16,000 fans watching the Windy City lads take the visiting 'Cats in the first tilt of a twin bill before Great Lakes, Kentucky's foe in Louisville March 6, scored an overtime 60-56 victory over Notre Dame.

The Kentuckians, apparently off form after running over Southeastern Conference big-wigs, were able to count only one field goal in the first six minutes, while the local hoopsters were scorching the net with six and a free throw. A tight and linear defense kept the Bluegrass boys from working the ball in under the basket.

After awhile the Ruppmen began to move, pulled to a 20-16 edge at half-time. The damage had already been done, however, and the Demons rolled to a nine-point success. Marvin Akers and Mill Tico's long efforts went for naught as the huge Mikan baited them away from the hoop into the waiting arms of a teammate.

At times the visitors staged spurts that looked as if they might overtake the Demons, but all of these fell short, and Kentucky suffered its third non-conference loss of the season.

If Kentucky had matched its second-half performance before intermission, the outcome might have been different, but 'twas mostly DePaul in the first 20 minutes, and the late 'Tucky rally was in vain.

The game was Kentucky's last scheduled contest before the conference tourney in Louisville this week. The 1943 finale will be played against the Great Lakes quintet.

Mikan led the DePaul point-guards with 18, Tico garnered 13 for the 'Cats.

'CAT FENCERS DROP DECISION TO GEORGIA TECH

Season's Record Stands At One Win, One Loss

Kentucky's fencers dropped a 19-4-1 decision to Georgia Tech Saturday night at Atlanta to make their record stand at one win and one loss. Dr. Charles M. Knapp's charges defeated the University of Cincinnati earlier in the season.

Only in the epee division did the Wildcats beat the efforts of the Techmen, beating them 2 1/2 to 1 1/2. The Yellow Jackets outthrew the Kentuckians in saber work, taking all four of the matches. In foil, the 'Cats took four and lost five. Swift was best for Kentucky in foil, and Pudding started in epee work.

The next opponents of the Kentucky fencers will be the bladesmen of the University of Cincinnati, when the Wildcats journey to the Queen City. The parriers from Ohio State will probably participate, making the meet a triangular affair, it has been announced.

Paul Noel, midway freshman, has been converted into a center by Coach Adolph Rupp in a last-minute effort to plug the center hole on his cage team.

Lanky Brewer will not practice prior to the Southeastern Conference tourney in Louisville Thursday, Friday and Saturday. His arm is now strapped, will probably keep him from seeing too much action at the meet. "We won't use him unless necessary," the Baron says.

Brewer hurt totaled three pivot-men now on the ineligible list for the tourney. Ed Lander is out for the season with a broken leg. Carl Althaus will be inducted into the Air Corps tomorrow.

INTRAMURALS ARE POSTPONED UNTIL MARCH 2

SEC Tourney Is Cause For Game Delay

Intramural basketball tournament competition is scheduled to enter the second round tonight when Independent and Fraternity league quintets battle for a berth in the final scheduled for March 4. Fraternity League A went into action Thursday night as four contests were registered.

Because of the Southeastern Conference tournament at Louisville, all tournament games scheduled for the remainder of this week will be postponed until March 2. An admission charge of ten cents will be collected at all tournament games to be played in Alumni Gym and in the Gym Annex.

The boys in the University bowling league really 'got on the ball' last week as six of the keglers qualified for the "Two Century or Better Club" in single games.

Red Stanton, SX pinman, rolled a high 222 game, closely followed by AGR Irvin Overall with 221. Jimmy Leet, AGR, rolled 208; Mitchell Yowell, AGR, 208; Gabby Grutewald, B19A, 200; and Gus Green, PKT, 211.

Instead of the usual one-day-a-week session, the U League bowlers now use the Colonial lanes every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

The standings:

B19A	12	9
AGR	11	4
SX	9	6
Triangle	8	7
Sigma Nu	7	5
Kappa Alpha	6	6
PKT	6	9
DTD	6	9
ATD	4	8
PTD	4	11
PTD	2	13

The afternoon's final showing will find Kentucky pouncing out a win over Georgia Tech, but not as easily as the Feb. 15 success in Alumni gym. The Yellow Jackets will have some ideas of their own on Saturday's meet.

KERNEL SPORTS The Sporting Way

Like a leader of a neighborhood gang, Kentucky returns to the Southeastern Conference tourney in Louisville this week with a good chance of having the last say-so. Being the top man on the SEC totem pole is nothing new for the 'Cat net squad; it's become more than a habit, it's darn high an obsession.

Since Baron Adolph Rupp came to Alumni gym, Wildcat quintets have toted off more league titles than the other schools like to recall. The plowman-coach has piloted six fives to loop diadems, has sent several others to the final.

With a cautious glance at those "I-told-you-so-guys," we'll take a precarious position on that well-known limb and opine things to come this week. We realize that this promises to be one of the closest meets ever, but still—

Auburn and Louisiana State get the tourney under way at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. With not even a funny feeling, we take the Bengals in this fray, since they should find the Plainsmen as gentle as their name.

The night session's first tilt presents something of a problem, but we'll take Mississippi over Georgia, since the Peaches haven't ripened all this season. Apparently the Bulldogs are still riding on Rose Bowl grid laurus, while Ole Miss tucked thoughts of gridiron activities away with their football togs.

Now the Kentucky-Tulane fiasco. The Baron shouldn't have to travel over a couple of miles on that well-known brown nut, and Irish Paul McBrayer probably won't offer more than one frown as the 'Cats top the Greenies by a substantial margin.

With Friday's rounds come a more serious perusal of the team records. At 2 o'clock 'Bama goes against L. S. U., if our first-day pick proves o. k. Here we give the nod to the Red Elephants, since the Tide is a tourney tyrod. Last year's meet is offered as Exhibit A in our evidence.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt take the floor at 3:30 in a home-state clash. It's not too hard to conjure a Vol win, but Dick Mehen and his associates can't take their victory over the Commodores in Nashville last Saturday night too seriously.

Tech Is Threat To Kentucky In Lower Bracket

Minus one loop member, but with a better-balanced makeup than in previous years, the Southeastern Conference's second was-time tourney gets under way in Louisville's Jefferson county Armory at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon with Auburn and Louisiana State meeting in the first game. Florida will be the missing quintet, having dropped out at the last moment.

Coach Roy Mundorf's best edition ever of Georgia Tech Engineers (here we quote the Baron) shouldn't have too much trouble with Mississippi State in the night's opening attraction. The Ramblin' Wreck apparently has too much for Coach Dick Hitt's boys.

Kentucky's Wildcats are odds-on favorites to send a partisan crowd home happy with at least a 10-point win over Mississippi in the day's finale.

When upsets are mentioned, last year's meet is brought to mind, when Kentucky and Tennessee were expected to march to the finals with not an extra amount of trouble. Alabama rose up to halt the Vol jaunt, while the Wildcats received the scare of their lives before Jim King peaced a late-game rally to edge out lightly-regarded Auburn.

Falls in the upper region of the cotton kingdom are anxious to see Louisiana State's hardwood representatives, who have brought the Bengals out of the net wilderness in his first year, pro-

One thing is certain—the DePaul conquest Saturday night will be an incentive to Coach Adolph Rupp's lads. After having run over the Southland's top teams by overwhelming margins, the Bluegrass basketekers lacked some of the o'zing in the Chicago melee.

Falls in the upper region of the cotton kingdom are anxious to see Louisiana State's hardwood representatives, who have brought the Bengals out of the net wilderness in his first year, pro-

chips are down among Southeastern members, and each year finds additional upsets to enter the record. It isn't too hard to imagine a Tennessee-Kentucky final, but anything can happen in Tucky's three-game route to the big event, and the Vols could strike a snag in their two-tilt bill.

The 'Cat entourage will probably leave late Wednesday for the Falls City, Bernie Shively, athletic director and meet manager, has announced. Students will receive 25-cent reductions on general admission tickets, S. A. "Daddy" Boles, ticket manager, has disclosed.

Bowser Chest and Dan Teshart, both familiar to University fans, will facilitate the tourney, with another referee yet to be selected. Teshart has officiated at several home-games this season. Chest referee is the order of the day when there are no other referees.

BARON NAMED AMONG GREATS IN CAGE WORLD

Eight Kentucky Players Are Also Named

Coach Adolph Rupp and eight Kentucky basketekers were honored in the Collegiate Basketball Record published by the Helms Athletic Foundation in Los Angeles, Calif. The Baron was named as one of the greatest net mentors of all time, his 1923 team was described as national collegiate champion, and the eight players were listed as All-Americans.

Two of the performers, Aggie Sale, former coach at Harrodsburg high but now in the Army, and LeRoy Edwards, were designated as "players of the year." Sale, lanky center, was named for the 1923 season, while Edwards, also a high-scoring pivot-man, gained the same honor in 1925. Paul McBrayer, current right-hand man of Rupp, was an All-American in 1926.

Good pickings, we say. The Baron certainly deserves a place in basketball's Hall of Fame, while the players mentioned have carved themselves a niche in basketball annals.
