THE SALT SHAKER

By Billie Fischer

We don't know why people get so excited at the basketball games. We never do because we always know what the final score will be. Our Ouija board tells us everything. We have a sneaking suspicion that it's not always accurate, though. It told us that we'd make a B on our Botany test. Now we don't know what to throw the Ouija board away, or try to get Dr. MacFarland to see it this way.

That's the trouble with this school. People are so set in their ways. We see no reason why the administration shouldn't use our clever little grading system. It's very simple: The profs would continue to grade as they see fit, but the grades would have an entirely different meaning to the registrar, our parents, and us. A would mean awful, B would mean mad, C would mean charming, D would mean delectable, and E would mean excellent. Let's have some action on this!

We're having a bit of trouble with our room-mate again. The old girl won't tell us where she's hid our belongings until we perform tricks for her. The other night we had to fight matches on our feet before she would tell where she had put the book whether to throw the Ouija board away, or try to get Dr. MacFarland to see it this way.

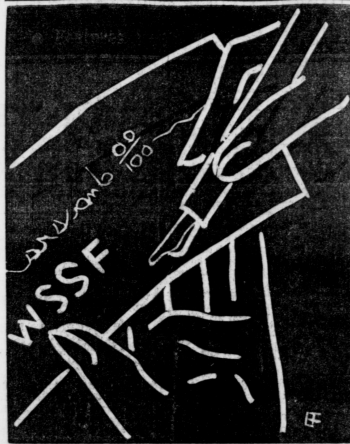

And she never sympathizes with us when we study all night and don't get any sleep for two or three days. If, after a siege of studying, we take a nap in the afternoon and she finds us asleep, she throws coke bottles at us and screams, "You fell through your morning classes, and then come home and faint from exhaustion!" She then follows it up with a stream of colorful Spanish words which Mrs. Ser- ver never taught her. It's time someone organized a "Let's Get Even With Nasty Roommates" club.

Who Threw Coke Bottles And Swear In Spanish When You're Too Tired To Answer Them? But Would Like To Toss Them Out The Window Club.

If some of you have felt a little more energetic than you usually do, we know why. Perhaps you people have laughed at Ogden Nash's poem, "The Ant."

The ant has made himself illustrious
Through constant industry industrious.
Would you be calm and placid
If you were full of formic acid?

You see, some of you may be full of formic acid. And we're really very sorry about it. The fact is: we found lots of little ants crawling around in the box it we've been serving to our visitors in the dorm. Well, never taught her. It's time someone organized a "Let's Get Even With Nasty Roommates" club.

Yup! We're All Rootin' Tootin' Feudin' Folks
Dear Editor,
You will probably recall that I am in the V-12 in Chicago. The majority of this unit is composed of boys from the north. There are a few southerners here to strengthen our ranks and uphold the name of the Confederacy, and especially that of Kentucky. Other than myself are: William A. Wade, SAE, H. P. Hawkins, brother of Lucy Hawkins, KKG, and Claude P. Buster, former engineer in the UK radio studio.

By indirect means, too numerous to be described here, I obtained a copy of The Kernel on January 26. Of particular interest was the column by Miss Mary Louise Patton, "What Do They Think of Kentucky?" Many of the opinions gathered by her correspond to the ones I hear nearly every day. Some are in jest, and others seem to be pretty serious questions. We are constantly being referred to as: (1) hill-billies, (2) ridge-runners, (3) rebels, (4) feudin' mount'n boys, and others.

It is the common opinion of those who have never been to this beautiful state that it is all hills, one fellow contending that it is a desolate, rocky, barren region. They believe that the Kentuckians are from the mountains and so naturally conduct themselves as such. They ask if we were shoes before we came into the Navy did we drink corn liquor, or feed every day? I get the greatest joy in telling the girls that the bluegrass is a royal blue, or some close shade.

Some of the boys are really interested and ask about the horses, farms, tobacco, and whiskey industries.

Just thought I would give you a little first hand info about "What They Think."

Sincerely,
Charles Pigue, AS USNR

Just A Book Or Two

Maybe you haven't ever wondered just how it would feel to be in a German or Japanese prison of war camp and have nothing to do hour after hour but sit and think—and maybe read over for the fiftieth time your small quota of mail. Maybe you have.

But the boys who had their University studies interrupted by the war and are getting a pretty good idea of what that feeling is, know the importance of having something to read. They're bored with the unnatural life of existing as prisoners, they have a fear of the "barbed wire disease," and need something to keep their minds from becoming stagnant with constant laxness.

For that reason the WSSF, World Student Service Fund, the organization which is operating primarily in the colleges, universities, preparatory schools, and theological seminaries of the United States and is helping raise money for the student war relief, was instigated.

The emergency program includes educational, cultural, and recreational services to these students who are among the 6,000,000 prisoners in war camps around the world; relief to the student refugees in Switzerland, Sweden, and the United States; participation in the relocating local West-coast Japanese-American students in American colleges and universities; and breaking the demoralizing monotony of captivity.

The greatest problem is morale. Men are immobilized for the duration, forgotten by their buddies, and it's no wonder that the spirit which starts as simple listlessness and ends with complete withdrawal from life usually results in the neurosis stage.

And our chance to help these boys, some of them friends that we used to school with, will come Monday morning when the campus campaign to raise $1,000 for the organization will begin and continue through Wednesday.

Each student on campus will be contacted personally. It is asking too much that a little bit be laid aside just for the boy who used to play em on the football team?

By Shirley Meister
Why must there be a mid-quarter? Everyone is going around in a frenzy over mid-quarter exams. In fact, the circles under students' eyes are as round as the ones developed during the week of finals. Maybe in the post war world when all the new and wonderful improvements are going to be invented, someone will discover a way to get rid of mid-term exams.

At last our childhood dream has come true. We always used to hope that the textbook publishers would have a fire or lose the manuscript of our class text. This wish was fulfilled the other day when Mr. Morris told us one of our classbooks was out of print. We knew that our professor had adequate copies of the book and we wouldn't be without one, but still it was a nice experience—something we had looked forward to for fourteen years.

If you are unhappy over your Valentines, console yourself with the thought that grandma had to put up with verses like this:
"Silver shines and so does tin,
The way I love you is a sin."
"Roses and sunshine,
Violets and dew,
There are so many pretty boys
But none like you."
"When you see a 'possum up a tree,
Pull his tail and think of me."

The Sultan got sore with his harem
And invented a way to scare 'em
He caught him a mouse,
Which he loosed in the house.

FLASH: Well, what do you know, Freda Wade is now wearing a Phi Delta pin, which she received from that Navy man we have seen her with lately. She knew both man and pin only a short time. The lucky people who will soon exchange un-matched bids for married bliss are: Andy Danks and Midshipman Howard Lay; Emogene Stokes and Robert Breeding. And also Mary Lou Monroe and Capt. Bill Stonehouse have been married since Dec. 2, and announced the fact last Sunday.

Look, Miss Haines, will you please slow down on your engagements. If you don't mind I am terribly sorry you have left out the engagement of Betty Haines to June Barnard last week, but the gal worked so fast that the presses could not keep up with her.

'Cats Journey To Athens To Tackle Ohio University

The 'Cats will journey to Athens, Ohio, Monday to tackle Ohio University. It will be the next to last game for the 'Cats, and will be one of their most difficult hurdles. Kentucky beat Ohio U. 59-46 earlier in the season, but the Ohio U. team has improved greatly since.

Kentucky has won 14 games and lost three. Coach Adolph Rupp will probably start Jack Tingle, Wilbur Schu, "Dutch" Campbell, Jack Parkinson and Bill Sturgill for Johnny Stough.

A strong team, Ohio university defeated Lockbourne Air Base 60-32, but lost 40-47 to the powerful Bowling Green, Ohio, quintet and by

ALONZO NELSON

Nelson Will Continue Play

The shadow of Selective Service has haunted Alonzo Nelson all year, but the Army promised this week to wait until mid-March to take him. And that means Coach Adolph Rupp will give the freshman forward more chance to perform.

Limited Play

Because coach Rupp suspected that Lonnie would be snatched from the team at any minute, he limited Nelson's playing as well as the team's dependence upon him. Otherwise, Nelson would have played continually at the forward post since he showed shooting skill and the sort of easy style that has always characterized Kentucky teams.

Likes Kentucky

A friend of Buddy Parker and singleton Years, Alonzo Nelson likes Kentucky and playing basketball for "a great coach." Back in the days when he played Madison high school's Purples in the state tournament in 1944, Alonzo played with Taylor (Doc) Ferrill, Wildcat grid star who is now overseas in the Navy. In the regional tourney that year he played opposite big Willie Allen from U-TI, who left the Wildcat team a few months ago for Army service.

That year, 1944, Richmond's Purples placed third in the state and Alonzo was named all-state forward, with an average scoring chart of 12 points per game, making a

'The Lowe-Down'

"Maul the Vols" and "Beat Tennessee" is the chant that is covering the campus like a plague or a fever that keeps spreading until it has grown into one momentous overtime. Since the 35-34 defeat at the hands of the Vols in Knoxville earlier in the season, there has been but one day on the calendar for the student body, the night of the return engagement of these two traditional rivals in Lexington. A great deal is at stake for both teams tomorrow night as each team has lost but one game in the Southeastern Conference, and this contest will decide the leader and will have possible bearings on the future of the two teams in the play-offs in the tournament.

No tickets have been available for the feature event as every ticket that could be sold was bought weeks ago, and if the fans pile into the stands as early as the rumor claims they will, the referee can blow the whistle at seven o'clock and the start of the game will be missed by very few. There seems to be an ugly rumor of an extra added attraction and everyone either wants a front seat or to be near the door in order to get out the door in a hurry.

The Wildcats have had a lay-off from competition for a week, are in excellent shape, and are raring to go. They have looked forward to this game with such anticipation that they have practiced like madmen and with body and soul they are determined to beat the Orange and White clad quintet from Knoxville. Coach Adolph Rupp is greatly impressed by their attitude and if the boys play with as much heart tomorrow night they will defeat Tennessee with points to spare.

Of course the team under the tutelage of Coach Johnny Mauer has the same opinion as to the outcome and therefore not until the smoke clears after the battle will the victor be known. The visitors boast a powerful aggregation of talent and will display them in force on the Kentucky court. Paul Walther, star from Covington, is the player the 'Cats will have to watch, who, along with Bob Kemper, has sparked the Vols to victory so far this season.

In a practice session Tuesday the regular team, those who will probably start the game, outscored the substitutes 77-44 with Tingle and Schu scoring 25 points apiece. With this kind of play they can't help but defeat the Vols. The two forwards should spark the team, and the more Schu contributes the bigger the score will be.

I am going out on a limb and someone will probably cut it off, but according to records and a personal feeling I have, the Kentucky quintet will be victorious over the Tennessee Volunteers and by a margin of 5 to 7 points. If the limb isn't too weak—Let's Say A 10-Point Victory And Make A Night Of It.—Amc.

total of well over 300 points in the 46-game season.

Wants Coaching Job

Daily practice with the Wildcat netters is hard work, but Alonzo manages to keep up with his arts and sciences courses, leading eventually to an industrial arts major and a coaching job.

He likes the University and the people here and he plans to come back to Lexington after the war. Will he play basketball? "Well," grins Nelson, "I will if Coach Rupp will let me."

Maybe He Is Right...

Approximately thirty per cent of the people on the campus have colds, said one of the medics at the University dispensary this week. Many of the brave just suffer them out, but those who are wise take their stuffy heads to the dispensary for treatment. Occasionally one of the wise who goes to the dispensary finds, much to his dismay, that the doctor thinks it wise that he spend a few days in the infirmary. Little does he know how lucky he is!

Easy Time Of It

Imagine, if you can, an excused absence from all classes. No Spanish, no botany, no political science class and no logic. You lie there in bed, eating breakfast, and watch all the poor unfortunates pass your window going to class. Ham and eggs never tasted better!

Romance, Too

Soon you discover that there is romance of a different sort in the infirmary. It just so happens that the girl of your dreams has a cold and is upstairs in the girls' section right over you. Any girl will do. You find that the infirmary provides you with a special letter carrying service direct to your dream. All you have to do is put the letter in the dumbwaiter and give the rope a jerk, and presto, she has the letter! The dumbwaiter is also used for exchanging cigarettes, candy, magazines and gossip.

Occasionally a girl comes around and holds your hand. You don't mind, it's only the nurse taking your pulse.

If you are one of those that have been wishing for a few days vacation but don't know just how to manage it, then take that cold to the doctor. You may be lucky enough to have that rest in the infirmary.

Only persons who now have tickets will be able to get into the gym. General admission tickets will not be sold on the night of the game.

Coach Johnny Mauer of the Volunteers will start Bob Kemper, Paul Walther, Ira Barnett, "Mule" O'Shields and Joe Gasparovic against the Wildcats. Six-foot, eight-inch Barnett was responsible for the defeat of Kentucky in the previous game, with 13 points to his credit.

Alumni gym is familiar ground to Coach Mauer, as he was head coach at Kentucky from 1934 to 1937. Mauer left Kentucky in 1937 to go to Miami university, where he coached for nine years. He went to Tennessee in 1938.

Kentucky, the Southeastern conference champions of 1944, will be playing their strongest contender to the title when they meet Tennessee. Tennessee won the conference championship in 1943, but did not have a team to defend their title in 1944.

All Napoleon needed was one spotter plane...

Napoleon was a hot shot artilleryman! His cannoneers had hairy ears...but better reconnaissance would have saved his bacon... and his empire!

One little "Spotter Plane" might have changed the face of Europe... and our destiny.

Every ingredient of the spotter plane that Napoleon needed was on earth then: The only reason the plane itself didn't exist was because men had not learned to "Imagine" the things they needed.

"Imagining" is a word we invented to describe the way Alcoa; and other great groups of technical men and women, go about the job of supplying the materials, methods and machines of modern life.

Remember this word "Imagining". It represents the union of imagination, man's oldest mental development, and engineering, his newest. Together they are the key to progress. Together they are the engineer's contribution to mankind.
