Harriet Henders To Be Soloist At Opening Musicale Sunday

Reception In Union For Soprano To Follow Concert

Harriet Henders, young American soprano of New York city, will be featured soloist on the first Sunday afternoon musicale of the 1941-1942 season at 4 p.m., November 16 in Memorial hall.

The young singer will be accompanied at the piano by Walter Tausig.

Singing the part of Sophie in Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," Miss Henders made her debut in New York at the Metropolitan Opera house.

She had preceded her New York debut with seven years of achievement abroad during which she sang 57 leading roles in as many operas in Vienna, Leipzig, Prague, Hamburg, Graz, and Budapest.

Toscanini chose her for the part of Marcelline in "Fidelio," which she directed at the 1937 Salzburg festival. Miss Henders has been soloist with leading symphony orchestras of this country and has just completed her second engagement with the famous Worcester festival.

In honor of Miss Henders, the music committee of the Union and Phi Mu Alpha, men's music honor, will hold a joint reception in the Great Hall of the Union building following the concert. All students and faculty members are invited.

Sue Fan Gooding, Lexington, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Josephine Baldauf, Molly Clayton, Jane McConnell, George Dudley, and George Gilbert. The tea table and hall will be decorated with candles and chrysanthemums.

SUNDAY MUSICALS SERIES OPENS
with a program by Harriet Henders, brilliant young soprano acclaimed by both the Metropolitan opera and Arturo Toscanini.

The following students have been asked to assist: Dorothy Vaughn, Hattie Chandler, Barbara Rehm, Betty Pugh, Betty Rose, Betty Arent, Mary Gabbard, Louise Ewan, Ann McMullen, Virginia Haynes, Josephine Baldauf, Ida Schoene, Doris Reichenbach, Rita Sue Lassie, Mary Rison, Emily Ogan, and Mable Warneke.

In the receiving line will be Miss Henders and Tausig, president and Mrs. Herman L. Donovan, Dean W. E. Freeman, Dr. Alexander Capuzzo, Charlotte Sale, Jack Thomson, and Ben Lamson. Miss Mildred Lewis, Mrs. Alexander Capuzzo, and Mrs. Donald All are also present.

Sanders To Open Class On Modern Cultural Lag

Sociologist To Hold Third Lecture In Vagabond Series

Dr. Irwin T. Sanders, associate professor of sociology, will inaugurate the third "open class" in the series sponsored by the arts and sciences college at the third hour today in room 124, Frazer hall.

An authority on social conditions in Europe following his six years teaching in Bulgaria, Dr. Sanders will lecture on "Ancient Myths in the Modern World: A Consideration of the Cultural Lag."

About 50 extra persons can be accommodated in the open class, which will be part of Dr. Sanders' regular sociology course at this hour.

BALKAN UNITY
"If the Balkan nations would unite they could fight Europe successfully," Dr. Sanders told the Kernel yesterday in recounting some of his experiences while teaching in Bulgaria.

Bulgarian students worked harder at their subjects than American students, the professor said. There is no on the classic educational theory.

Through the French language and the general medium of thought in Bulgaria, English is spreading most and more over all the Balkan nations, he added.

FIRST TRIP
Dr. Sanders went to Bulgaria in 1929, following his graduation from Washington and Lee university. He taught first in Sofia, Bulgarian capital.

Organized on the campus in 1929, the group has as its purpose to advance the spirit of service and fellowship among university women, to maintain high standards of scholarship, and to recognize and encourage leadership.

This threefold purpose is carried out by the organization through varied projects during the school year. In the fall, in order to become acquainted with freshman women, a picture show party is given in Memorial hall. Further encouragement, along the line of scholarship, is given to freshmen women in the spring when the honor-

MORTAR BOARD SELLS FLOWERS TO PROMOTE CAMPUS PROJECTS
By CELIA BEIDERMAN
Members of the Mortar Board will sell mums before tomorrow's game in front of the Phoenix and Dunn's drug stores, at the hotel headquarters of the Southwestern team and at the game. Orders for flowers will also be taken at the information desk of the Union building.

The senior women's honorary, which has been selling mums and corsages for all home games and dances this semester, plans to use the proceeds from the sales to finance their many projects during the year.

ary presents cups to those making all-A standings. To encourage leadership among sophomore women, names of those who have been outstanding leaders are invited to a "Smarty Party" in the spring of their junior year. The new Mortar Board group is chosen from these junior women on the basis of scholarship, leadership, service, and character. Pledges are tapped in an impressive service at the annual women's banquet.

The organization's aim of service and fellowship is carried out by a forum on parliamentary procedure which, it sponsors each spring and which is open to all students interested in learning correct procedure. Mortar Board also awards a pair of bookends to the freshman girl with the nearest room in Patterson Hall.

Previously to 1929 the campus senior women's honorary was known as Staff and Crown. In that year the organization joined the national YWCA chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta, which now has about 75 chapters in the United States.

The local chapter of Mortar Board was the first established in the south, and plans are being made to establish an alumni chapter in Lexington.

These four students were selected to the national men's scholarship honorary on the basis of scholarship and campus service. John Clarke, president, said.

They will be tapped in the traditional ODK initiation ceremony which is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. today in the first year room of the law building.

No Holiday Extension To Be Had This Year, UK Administration Says

SAE AGAIN LEADS IN STANDINGS OF FRATERNITIES

Six Greek Men Make All A's, Report Reveals

Six fraternity men achieved perfect scholastic standings last semester as Sigma Alpha Epsilon topped the 18 organizations for the second consecutive time, according to statistics from the dean of men's office.

Those with straight A's were B. J. Butler and Robert Ruedi, Alpha Gamma Rho; Ralph Osborne, Alpha Tau Omega; Bernard Stall, Delta Tau Delta; John Gaines, Phi Delta Theta; and Robert Rogan, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, although still leading the list, went down .025 of a point from a previous semester. With but five exceptions the rankings of the various fraternities went up. Kappa Sigma showed the greatest improvement, .251.

Judging activities only, the Alpha Gamma Rho pushed out the Gamma Tau Alpha for first place with an average of 1.68. Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Triangle, Phi Delta Theta and Phi Sigma Kappa followed in rank.

Considering academic achievements, Sigma Alpha Epsilon had the select group of pledges of last semester. After the Kappa Sigma pledges came Delta Tau Delta and Phi Delta Theta in order.

During the first semester of 1940-41 the fraternity men in the education college ranked first with 1.38; agriculture next with 1.20; engineering and commerce with 1.18, and last of all arts and sciences and law with 1.05.

The complete standings are:

Fraternity	Rank	Rank Standing
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	1	1.485
Alpha Gamma Rho	2	1.481
Phi Delta Theta	3	1.465
Phi Sigma Kappa	4	1.353
Delta Tau Delta	5	1.328
Delta Chi	7	1.279
Kappa Sigma	11	1.187
Pi Kappa Alpha	12	1.184
Pi Tau Omega	16	1.117
Alpha Alpha	17	1.114
Kappa Alpha	18	1.110
Phi Kappa Phi	19	1.101
Alpha Sigma Phi	15	1.071

Studies Go International
The University radio studios extended their range to another nation when the Mutual Broadcasting system arranged recently to send its programs over the Canadian Broadcasting system.

Penick, now president of the Student Union board, is the Kernel's music critic; former member of Lanes, junior men's honorary; and has been outstanding in foreign and social service. His home is in Lebanon.

Popenoe To Speak Wednesday To Two Groups

Dr. Paul Popenoe, convocation speaker for Wednesday, will speak on "How Do You Know It's Love?" at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Music room of the Union. The program is sponsored by the Campus Service group of the YWCA.

At 5 p.m. the same day, Dr. Popenoe will address the mothers and housemothers on "Growing Up Emotionally." The talk, held in the Music room of the Union, was arranged by Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, dean of women.

1942 KENTUCKIAN SALES CAMPAIGN WILL BEGIN

Yearbooks To Sell For $4 Each November 17-29

Sales campaign for the 1942 Kentuckian will be opened officially Monday and continue through the date of the annual Kentuckian dance November 29. George Molik, business manager of the annual, announced yesterday.

During the advance sale, price of the yearbook is $4. Nisbet said, but after November 29 annuals will be on sale until next spring, when the price will be higher. A dollar deposit is required on each Kentuckian.

Claximizing the annual campaign will be the traditional Kentuckian ball and crowning of "Miss Kentuckian," the year book beauty queen. Reigning with the queen will be the campus' most popular man, and independent groups upon a sales basis, one candidate being permitted for each 15 sales.

The first meeting of the Kentuckian sales staff will be held at 3:30 p.m. today in the Kentuckian office, Betty Howard, sales manager, announced yesterday. Tentative salesmen for the fraternity, sororities, and dormitories will be appointed at this time.

All organizations desiring a page in this year's annual should come to the Kentuckian office before 5 p.m. today, the sales manager added.

TRADITION
Another view of the situation would be the deviation from a tradition that has been practiced as long as the University of Tennessee have played a Thanksgiving football game for the coveted berke. On the years the Wildcats go to Knoxville, the student goes to Knoxville for the game. When the game is played on Stoll field, one Thanksgiving day is declared a holiday.

Four years ago, when the game was here, the University administration granted an extension of the holiday. Two years ago, no extension was given.

"We will be glad to take under consideration any holidays in the future that may be presented, with the understanding that can be worked out on a long-term basis," President Donavan said.

"It is necessary to be systematic about the school program, and to get the consent of the council in time," he added.

NEXT FIVE YEARS
"For the next five years the Tennessee game will be played on the day, and the faculty will be glad to arrange the holiday on a long term basis in a manner that will still play the greatest number of students," Dr. Henry H. Hill, Dean of the University, said.

Spring vacation has already been scheduled to include Easter, a request made by the students through the Student Government association, Dr. Hill added.

COUNCIL MUST APPROVE CHANGE

Future Holidays Will Be Considered President Says

No extension of the one-day Thanksgiving holiday will be granted, it was decided by the University faculty at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

In an exclusive interview with The Kernel, President Herman L. Donavan, who received the students' petition after his return from Chicago Wednesday, set forth the reasons for refusing to grant the holiday extension.

In the first place, the Council on Public Higher Education of Kentucky approves the calendars of the University and the teachers colleges. Those calendars must be submitted a year in advance, and, once approved, are not to be changed without consent of the Council," President Donavan said.

The council will meet today in Frankfort.

1936 SIGNATURES
The petition, which was put into circulation by the Student Bar association, was signed by at least 1200 of the 3000 students in the University. The Student Government association submitted a resolution to President Donavan giving complete endorsement to the proposed vacation.

"We hate to refuse the petition, but we hardly think it fair to students, faculty members, and organizations that have already made plans for the week-end. Schedules, social programs and other engagements would have to be completely disrupted," President Donavan said, speaking for the faculty.

Omicron Delta Kappa would certainly suffer if the extension is granted, since they have already made plans for a dance on November 22, and have engaged an out-of-town orchestra," he added. "This would certainly not be fair to the boys."

Literary Society Names Deadline For Papers

A week remains before the deadline for Patterson Literary Society papers, John Long, president, announced yesterday.

These papers—of moderate length and on any subject which lends itself to philosophic or literary treatment—should be turned in to the office of Prof. Marshall Ketchum in White Hall, or to Long before noon, Friday, November 21.

New members of the society will be chosen from those submitting the best papers on or making a 15-minute talk on the subject of the paper.

ONE OF THESE WILL BE PERSHING RIFLES SPONSOR

Sponsor Will Be Named At Ball

Presentation of Company C-1's 1941-42 sponsor will highlight the annual Pershing Rifles ball to be held from 9 to 12 Saturday night in the ballroom of the Union building.

This year's sponsor will be elected from 22 candidates, two from each sorority except Alpha Delta Pi, which nominated only one, and five independents, at an election to be held at 5 p.m. today in Euclid armory. Each girl will march before the company with Capt. A. J. Spare, and will be voted upon by the officers and active members.

The candidates, who were named by sororities and a committee of officers in the military department, are Louellen Pen and Pauline MacDonald, Kappa Delta; Julia Jackson and Edith Palmer, Delta Delta Delta; Virginia Henderson and Geneva House, Alpha Xi Delta; Sara Ewing and Sue Fan Gooding, Kappa Gamma; Sarah Lee Snyder, Sarah and Caroline Conant, Chi Omega; Patsy Horcan, Alpha Delta Pi; Wilayah Graves and Anne Viox, Delta Zeta; Almee Murray and Gene Ray Crawford, Alpha Gamma Delta; Letha Hicks and Laveria Warner, Zeta Tau Alpha; Katie Lee Snyder, Maureen Arthur, Helen Clout, Betty Lebus, and Harriet Ford, independents.

Contrary to the procedure of former years whereby the sponsor was known for several weeks prior to the dance, her identity this year will be known only to the company officers. Chaperons for the dance will be President and Mrs. Herman L. Don-

III. What Can Be Done About It

The What-The-Hell Generation

(This is the third installment of a three-part editorial on the "don't-give-a-damnness" of the present generation of college students. In preceding ones, the attitude was described as a mixture of confusion and unconcern, and it was suggested that it was a result of students' loss of faith in the future. Today's will offer some suggestions as to what can be done about it.)

If they ever expect America to become more than a lumbering, fog-headed, self-suspicious dwarf of a giant;

If they ever look for a world where freedom and democracy can live without paying for the privilege with the best lives of every other generation;

If they ever hope for more than a cigarette, a pack of cards, and a Coca-Cola, the college students of America have to wake up to one thing: dodging the questions all around them is utterly futile.

The problems springing up are like weeds: the more you ignore them, the more they grow. Moping in a corner can result only in the development of more things to mope over; laughing them off can end only in more and more until there are too many to laugh off.

Certainly it would be pleasant if college students didn't have to concern themselves with what is going on in the world, but the fact remains that they do. If college students, with their opportunity for extra training, fall down, the place will be open for a platitude-spouting, long-armed demagogue to step in.

If college students continue to play the loaves-eaters, if they keep up their shallow, superficial, pseudo-sophisticated attitude of unconcern, if they continue to defer consideration of the war and the after-war, the time will come when they are called upon to help determine the policy of their country, and they will have to answer. Not prepared.

It is not only desirable, but it is imperative that American university undergraduates begin immediately to prepare for what is ahead. With a little effort by their parents, direction by the universities, and a new outlook on the part of the students themselves, we believe they can do it.

What The Students Can Do

When students realize their own importance in the world of tomorrow, when they become aware of the fact that there is no other George but themselves to Do It, when they see that after the war, win or lose, boom or depression, there will be a tremendous shortage of trained, sensible leadership—then half the job is done.

Then they would realize that the University is no Country Club, no four-year vacation before they begin living, but that it is, and has to be, the training ground of the leaders of the future, and that it is not their privilege but their duty either to make the most of that training or to get out and quit wasting the state's money.

They would see that it is not "smarter" but foolhardy, selfish, and criminal to fritter away their time, to refuse to consider the problems ahead of them, and to laugh at those who do not.

We pointed out last Tuesday that the pessimistic, destructive, protesting spirit of recent literature and thought have had considerable influence on the defeatist attitude of the undergraduate generation; but because of this we certainly would not suggest the discontinuance of study of contemporary works. We would rather point out that the adoption of a defeatist, skipping attitude from these works is a result of exempting the surface alone; for implicit or expressed in the most violent protest is usually the suggestion of a solution, in every criticism of democracy is the seed of a cure. Students must not lose heart and stop at the first stages, but must continue until they see the whole. What they need is not less education, but more.

That is why it would be of immense value in the future for University courses, where possible, to be planned, seminars organized, or at least some work done in study of post-war conditions. If American educators wait until the war is over to start training for the reconstruction and the peace, it will be too late.

Sociologists must begin to study post-war sociological conditions, psychologists to lay plans for restoring the war-broken citizenry, economists to seek ways to ease the impact of a disrupted war economy. In almost every field which contributes to the direction and government of the country work should be done now to make this peace a better one.

Students should be helped, not babied; directed, not indoctrinated. They are wise to the World War propaganda techniques, and it is about time the older people woke up to the fact. You can't feed today's students on gauze and vague promises. If they are going to fight any war, they want to be certain what is going to come out of it.

So, that's what students today need, and that is what can be done about it. They need a realization of their own position, and that can only come from themselves; they need a hope of the future, and that can only come from the men now in power; they need the training for the future and that can come only from the universities.

If that is forthcoming, if all these people are willing to look into the future and forget the paltry little satisfactions to be won today at the expense of tomorrow—then the What-The-Hell Generation may eventually be the one to set a stumbling world back on its feet.

The students of America are not willing to fight for another system of one-sided world domination, even if it is by the British Empire and the United States, because such a world is not in their hearts. And as yet, the leaders of this country and of England have given no assurance of any sort of peace settlement to work toward, and students can only suspect that caught in the inevitable wave of post-war reaction, they will be led to another vindictive, over-balanced, retaliatory peace.

The parents and leaders of 1911 must quit bumbling around, trying to justify a peace treaty which the test of time has proven a flop. England and France dictated the last peace; America should dictate this one. Separated as this country is from the age-old squabbles of the Continent, enlightened as it must be by the example of Versailles, it should begin today to formulate sensible peace plans, and to insist upon their agreement before one more bullet, one more airplane is sent to Britain.

Unless this is done, America can not count on the whole-hearted support of the student group.

Another point of disillusionment for young people has been the haggling, profiteering, and nickel-grabbing of Big Business, labor, and the government itself in connection with defense spending. Knowing as they do that this placing of personal interest above community interest, even at the danger to the very life of the community, was the main cause of the fall of France, they can only view such actions with foreboding.

We believe that if the government itself takes the lead by untangling its own messy defense organization and stopping the scragging over jurisdiction, supervision, and control of defense funds by government agencies, Big Business and labor will sooner be inclined to lay down the ax until the emergency is over.

It is not through selfishness that we suggest the next move the government can make: stop drafting college students. Indications have been made by some army officers that the army has more men than it can train properly right now; and the complexity of the war, with its emphasis on naval and air strength, seems to make an over-large army inadvisable.

In view of the fact that the ten years of adjustment after the war will probably be just as important for the long-range good of the country, the snapping off of education of future leaders seems to be a short sighted move.

What The University Can Do

Because they are closest to the students, the universities of America will necessarily be the most important factors in the reshaping of the What-The-Hell Generation.

Previously we pointed out the necessity for more intelligent discussions by present day students, but, of course, we don't expect everyone to sit around their lunch tables with long, blood-houndish faces mulling the weighty problems of the world, and we don't expect the denizens of the grill to spend all their time in deep contemplation of the great issues, but there certainly should be more opportunity for serious consideration and discussion of them. This is the University and its agencies can provide.

A series of forums where students can meet with faculty members would help immensely. We understand that a few organizations, such as the Philosophy club, Patterson Literary Society, and groups of the YM and YWCA are doing that now, and we say that's fine. But it isn't nearly enough.

Another thing the University can do is to get over the idea that the only thing necessary now is to win the war. No matter who wins, for a long time after the war, this is going to be a sick world, and it will continue to be sick until there are trained and sensible college graduates ready to help cure it.

That is why it would be of immense value in the future for University courses, where possible, to be planned, seminars organized, or at least some work done in study of post-war conditions.

If American educators wait until the war is over to start training for the reconstruction and the peace, it will be too late. American Language Takes A Beating

In the Princeton Alumni Weekly of October 10, there appeared a dissertation on "Our Mother Tongue" purported to portray the manner of speech of Princeton men. It was written by two young scholars, Robert Bordley and H. L. Austin, who called themselves Mr. Physterics. These self-styled authorities on campus talk credited the Tigers with colorful phrase-making such as this—"Bears got his stiff card, hopped the bound for B-more today to show at the Cadwaller for a bit soft-soling and a quick lode. Dorm Resident Complains About Service In Infirmary

To the Editor of The Kernel: Residents of the girls' dormitories must get sick when the staff wants them to get sick; otherwise they can just go ahead and die. An infirmary is maintained by fees paid by the students and the rule book plainly says, "All cases of illness must be reported at once to the resident nurse." But what happens when you do report an illness? Well, as often as not absolutely nothing happens. If you are lucky enough to find one of the nurses, she might, just might, condescend to give you a couple of aspirin and tell you to go swallow them. On the other hand, she might tell you to go away and leave her alone because she doesn't happen to want to be bothered just then. Today I had a very, very sore throat. Following the directions in my rule book, I went to the infirmary. There sat two nurses and one of the staff members. I told them my troubles and expected to get a little attention. Instead I was told to go home and wait until office hours. Then they said they would see what they could do for me. I have never seen or heard of a good nurse who will deliberately stand by and see someone suffer merely because it was not office hours. If I had been seriously ill, it would have been the same. This is not the only complaint about the infirmary service. Ask any dormitory girl about the conditions there and she will cite ample after example to illustrate the poor service we receive. And if we call an outside doctor, we are scolded severely. Isn't there something that can

UK Students Are Too Short On Seriousness, Writer Says

To the Editor of The Kernel: The "letter of 'Upperclassman' seems to have created a great deal of indignation among UK students. However, the manifestations of this indignation appearing in The Kernel are little more than sarcastic generalizations, and sarcasm is a poor method of combating criticism. Let us be factual. If we were effective. Most of us, if we are honest, will admit that we are not getting as much from our college experience as we should. We cram for an examination, pass it, and proceed to forget. We study with an "A" as a goal and we miss the thrill of learning something purely for its own sake. The University of Kentucky is popularly known as the 'Country Club of the South.' I have heard many people comment on the lack of intellectual atmosphere among the students but you do not need to base conclusions on this. Listen in on a few grill conversations for definite proof. When we finish college we are going to face a reality that is far from bright. We must now prepare ourselves to clean away the mess made by the mistakes of another generation. I believe the best preparation for this is through education. We need to forget about standings or credits and do some constructive studying. If we do less cheating and doing and more clear thinking, perhaps we will be bothered with less criticism from persons who come here from other colleges. JUST A STUDENT

The Party Line

BY MARGARET CANTRILL

Dear me! The news is coming in fast and furiously now. Think I'll call Pat today... Hello, is Pat there? Let me speak to her please... Jim doesn't buy me pretty flowers... da da da... gee, I wish I could get that silly song out of my mind... Oh hello Pat. Got lots to tell you today. Things are really happening around here this weekend—open houses, slumber parties, buffet suppers, stag smokers, PR dance, and numerous other things. I'll back track a bit to Wednesday, because there were two parties on that day that I don't think I said anything about. The Alpha Xi Deltas had a buffet supper Wednesday night in honor of a group of rushees. The Kappas had another one of their bi-weekly buffet suppers Wednesday night and Mrs. Newman, the housemother, gave a very interesting talk about her recent tour of Mexico.

Today there are several open houses on the calendar. The Kappa Delta members will have as guests active and pledges of Alpha Tau Omega. The Alpha Gammas are honoring the Delta Tau Delta members at their open house. After the party at the sorority house, the Deltas will have a buffet supper for the AGD actives and pledges. The Kappas Kappas Gammas plan to have the Sigma Xas for open house. Mary K. Scott is in charge of plans for that party. Gus Petro is making plans for a buffet supper which the Sigma Xas will have for the Kappas after the open house.

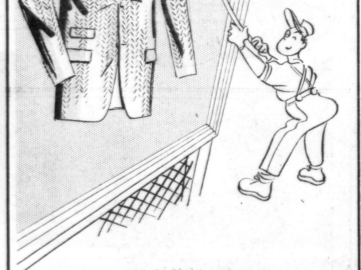

The Delta Zetas have two parties planned for today. Tonight the actives are going to have a slumber party for the pledges of the sorority. The party will be at the chapter house and along about midnight they are going to have a bite to eat. This afternoon they will honor the Sigma Phi Epsilons at an open house. Wilbur Graves is planning both of these functions.

Tonight the Delta Chi actives will entertain the new pledges of the fraternity with a stag smoker. The party will be at the chapter house and Howard Price, social chairman, has charge of plans.

The members of Alpha Gamma Rho plan to have an open house after the football game Saturday. Guests will be the dates of the AGD members, the actives and pledges of Tri-angel, and the Tri-angles' dates.

The Alpha Xis are going to show their pledges a good time Saturday—first a buffet supper for the pledges and their dates, and later a slumber party for the pledges. Sounds like fun, doesn't it?

I suppose you will be donning your prettiest formal for the PR dance that will be given Saturday night in the Eluegrass room of the Union. I'm anxious to hear who'll be the new PR sponsor, aren't you? Goodbye.

Varsity-Town's "DARTMOUTH"

Our artist thinks of the darndest things... Here we are, with a new model and a hippositer... and no words to put them together. Well, the model is original if we're not, and how original it is! See that longer jacket... the low spacing of the pockets... the extra change pocket... the slightly narrower shoulders... the chest expression... well, you're looking at a 1942 style leader. Just to post you further, it has been modeled in Varsity-Town's own original check-ots and sheitlands.

Two Well-Dressed Women-- And Their Success Secrets

By TONI

Consider the case of the two Marys. Both are well dressed women—well dressed not only because they dress to their own particular beauty and structural characteristics.

Mary Joy Shubert, education senior, represents the case of the tiny girl, being all of 4 feet 10 inches short, and 90 pounds light. Mary Ann Parbach, Kappas Kappas Gammas, arts and sciences junior, upholds the case of tall girls with model proportions reading 5 feet 10 inches at 126 pounds. Both girls have similar blonde coloring with blue-gray eyes, and prefer dark makeup sparingly used. Physical resemblances end here.

TINY WOMAN
Because of their inch-giving qualities, Mary Joy loves high heels and wears them whenever occasion warrants. Mary Joy always wears them when she "practices teaches" in Training school, where some of her sixth-grade pupils surpass her in height and weight. On campus, however, she wears lower heels.

She attends classes in trim sweaters and skirts—no super-long, baggy sweaters to make her look lost—and one-piece woollen dresses. In sweaters, she prefers a cardigan worn with a white shirt. A boxy camel's hair coat goes happily over her campus clothes continuing the illusion of straight, unbroken lines.

For afternoon wear, Mary Joy chooses simple feminine fashions relying on accessories to provide color contrast and relieve monotony rather than on the dress itself. Dubonnet and blue are effectively used in this manner in an outfit selected for fall wear. A dubonnet velvetreen dress, worn with shoes of the same color, is accented with a light blue profile hat and purse. With it, she wears a black princess coat with a silver fox middie collar.

FORMALS
Mary Joy has balanced her formal wardrobe with sleek evening gowns as well as the shuffy type. For example, she has a black velvet sheath cut on princess lines, its heart-shaped neckline accented with a rhinestone clip on either side. In the decollete formal boasting a white fluffy category is a white chiffon paillette dusted bodice and a flaring skirt. For a wrap, this petite coed wears a simple black velvet princess coat to give the illusion of height.

To further this illusion, she wears her hair upswep with her back locks parted and dressed into two French braids over which she wears flowers.

Mary Joy, who loves to acquire matching shoes and purses, smiled. "The only things I'm lucky about in buying clothes is shoes. I wear 4-8 which is a sample size."

TALL WOMAN
Mary Ann Parbach is a sweater and skirt addict, being a member of the long-sleeved slipover and tweed skirt clan. To complete the outfit she wears a white blouse beneath the sweater, a string of pearls, anklets, and saddle shoes. Her faithful go-to-class coat is Harris tweed in a box model.

I can't help lauding Mary Ann for giving up fluffy and frilly fashions without tattering an eyelash. Even lace collars are out for her, she tells us. Instead, she takes sophistication in her afternoon and evening clothes, and tailored casualness in her campus and sport outfits.

Another interesting item is her view on the much discussed subject of tall women and low shoes. "The majority of tall girls have large feet," she said. "Since low shoes make feet appear larger, high heels look better in spite of the extra inch they add."

One of the intriguing factors evidenced in this girl's clothes personality is the realization that she can wear modes that are impossible for shorter girls, and that she does wear them to excellent advantage.

Mary Ann's favorite dinner gown is a long-torso creation of grayed-blue and medium-blue crepe. The grayed-blue top with V neck and draped sleeves is shirred to fit snugly at the hipline, where the medium-blue circular skirt begins.

Outrich plumes edge the square neck of her new formal, which flaunts a Kelly-green bodice and four skirts of tulle in alternate layers of green and gold. Flowers, if they come, should be worn in the hair, according to Mary Ann. "I'd rather have one gardenia for my hair than two for my shoulder," she said.

Extension Staff Will Entertain
The Home Economics Extension staff of the University will entertain with a theater party in Transylvania's Little theatre, at 8 p.m. Sunday, honoring the state home demonstration agents. The stagecrafters of Transylvania college, under the directorship of Joseph Salek, will stage "Family Portrait."

Miss Stacie Erikson will pour at coffee between acts. Receiving with Miss Myrtle Walden and Miss Virian Curmuff of the Extension staff will be President and Mrs. McLean; Dean and Mrs. Thomas Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. Thomson Bryant; and Mr. Salek.
