My dear Miss Helen:

This fine afternoon it is my privilege to write you and my mother. Your letter was just as sweet as I could wish, and believe me I enjoyed it, every word. I've read it over "several" times and each time it reads better.

Well if I afforded you any pleasure while you were here, it was my greatest pleasure to see you; and to see you happy. And my how nice it was, to have that feeling that you were within speaking and seeing distance every day. You see, having missed you for quite a long while, when you did come, the pleasure was all the greater. Now that I've gotten the appetite it seems insatiable.
