All-American

In Bethlehem Pa. yesterday, UK cross country runner Mark Nenow placed 17th in a field of over 200 runners in the NCAA Cross Country Championships.

It is the highest placing ever for a UK runner in the championships, and by finishing among the top 25, Nenow achieved All-American honors.

"It was one of those days when everything goes right for you" said the accounting senior from Arlington, Texas. "That time (29:36) really gives me a lot of confidence for track."

"Fantastic" was Coach Weber's reflection on his number one runner's performance, noting that "he ran with some of the best runners in the world."

Henry Rono of Washington State, world record holder in four different track events, won his third title, clocking a 28:20 to shatter the course record by over a minute. University of Texas El Paso edged Oregon in a close team battle, 103 to 106. UK finished 16th as a team with a score of 485.

Running next to Nenow is Bill McClesney from the University of Oregon.

Iranians free 10 hostages from embassy in Tehran

By The Associated Press

Ten more American hostages left the U.S. Embassy in Tehran early today for the airport, ABC-TV reported from the Iranian capital. A Swiss airliner was waiting there to fly them to West Germany to join three others released yesterday.

An ABC reporter in Tehran said the hostages — four women and six blacks — were driven out of the embassy gates in three cars. The students who had been holding them in the embassy since Nov. 4 put them on display at a news conference last night.

The list of 10 hostages being released did not include the names of Elizabeth Ann Swift, identified in Washington as a political officer, or Katherine Koob, who apparently still were being held despite the release of the other women. Earlier Monday, Katherine Gross, 22, of Cambridge Springs, Pa., a secretary in the economics section of the embassy, and Sgts. William E. Quarles of Washington, D.C., 23, and Ladell Maples, 23, of Earle, Ark., both black, were flown to Wiesbaden, West Germany, where they immediately called their families, U.S. officials said.

The State Department list identified the 10 as: Elizabeth Montague, Calumet City, Ill.; Terri Tedford (female), South San Francisco, Calif.; Joan Walsh, Ogden, Utah; Lillian Johnson, Elmont, N.Y.

David Walker, Waller, Texas; Lloyd Rollins, Alexandria, Va.; Wesley Williams, Albany, N.Y.; Neal Robinson, Houston, Texas; James Hughes, Langley AFB, Va.; and Joseph Vincent, New Orleans.

During the news conference at the embassy, which has been occupied since Nov. 4, the 10 hostages sat under a banner accusing President Carter of protecting "this national criminal," referring to the exiled shah, whom the militants want in exchange for the remaining 49 hostages.

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered the release of female and black hostages who "were not spies," and said Iran might put some of the remaining 49 hostages on trial for espionage if the United States did not return the ailing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from New York, where he is being treated for cancer.

In Washington, a White House statement said any such espionage trial of U.S. diplomats would be a "further flagrant violation" of international law.

The first three hostages freed flew by commercial airliner to Copenhagen, Denmark, where they appeared happy. They did not answer reporters' questions. They were transferred quickly to an American military plane and taken to a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden.

They bathed and rested, and State Department spokesman George Sherman said they all were in good health, "considering what they've been through."

The State Department said they would be questioned about the condition of the other hostages and debriefed, but Sherman said "the stay here will be very short and will only be a way-station on the way to their families."

UK's in-state tuition below SEC and national median

BOB COCHRANE
Staff Writer

It's not the stuff of which pep rallies are made, but UK finished second to Tennessee in the Southeastern Conference this year — second lowest in in-state tuition, that is.

A report compiled by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges shows UK's yearly tuition charge of $562 for in-state students is below the national median of $781, and below the Southeast median of $602.

When the cost of room and board is included, however, total cost of a year at UK is pushed to $2,312, just below the national median of $2,333.

The 7 percent rise in total charges at UK this year is lower than last year's 9.3 percent rate of inflation, but above the 5 percent increase maintained by the nation's public colleges. The survey did not include private institutions.

Member universities cited two main reasons for the higher charges — inflation and the need to maintain program quality. Other reasons included the need to raise faculty and staff salaries, the absence of alternate sources of revenue, and inadequate appropriations from state legislatures.

Most UK in-state students seem aware of the low tuition fees. "It's really cheap, compared to Maryland, where I come from," said Charles Czarsky, a graduate student in history. "That's why most people come here." A teaching assistantship allows him to avoid out-of-state tuition.

"I think tuition is very low here," said Katherine Malone, who is keenly aware of regional differences in education costs. She's studying at the Sorbonne, in France next semester.

Tuition for out-of-state students is another matter, however. UK is the most expensive school in the SEC for out-of-state students. Although, at $1,812, it is still below the national median of $1,877.

The yearly cost for an out-of-state student at UK went up almost 8 percent this year, totaling $3,562 with room and board.

There used to be a campus cliché that went something like, "I can come to UK and still pay less than I would have in my state as an in-state student." Today that statement holds true for only a few northeastern universities, such as Cornell, Temple, and the University of Vermont.

Okoro Boi, a graduate student from Nigeria, pays $956 a semester for tuition. "I transferred here from Pittsburgh, which was more expensive than UK. But I have friends from Nigeria at Hawaii, Oklahoma, and Texas, and they're all paying less than I am."

Only two institutions in the country managed to hold the line on inflation. Kansas State and Virginia State, at Petersburg, did not raise any charges for the 1979-80 year. Last year 24 campuses across the nation refused to raise total costs, 34 the year before that. That only two schools managed to hold the line indicates that the effects of inflation have become more difficult to escape, the report said.

Students in New England face the highest education expenses in the nation. Median tuition in New England is $1,011 for residents, $2,703 for non-residents. The Southeast is the least expensive region for college tuition.

The most expensive land-grant school in the country is Cornell University, where a resident of New York will pay $4,466 for tuition this year. Anyone looking for a bargain need not write to the University of Vermont, where a non-resident pays $6,199 a year.

Are there no bargains to be found? Alaska beckons out-of-state students with a total yearly charge of $1,557, including 19 meals each week. If the long nights in Fairbanks don't sound appealing, Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Mo., offers a year's education for $1,970 for tuition, room and board, which is still cheaper than a year at UK for a Kentucky resident.

Still too much? For the very rock bottom price, for higher education's final offer, the University of Texas at San Antonio charges only $83 per semester, with no facilities for room and board. Great tacos nearby.

SG announces position on the Iranian situation

By STEVE MASSEY
Campus Editor

In an effort to realize "a reconciliation and eventual mutual understanding between Americans and visiting foreign students," UK's Student Government passed a resolution supporting a return to a peaceful co-existence between the United States and Iran.

The resolution, the first statement issued by SG since the U.S. embassy employees were taken as hostages in Tehran, Iran, was originally designed as a bill calling for an assembly of UK students desiring peaceful co-existence between students of the two nations.

However, members of SG expressed concern over the possible ramifications of such direct action.

"It (an assembly) could cause more bad feelings than good feelings," said Brad Sturgeon, at-large senator, explaining that "it (the situation) may or may not calm down on campus."

At-large senator Mark Rock agreed. "I feel the resolution is better than an assembly at this point in time because an assembly could cause problems — specifically violence," he said.

Bob Clark, business and economics senator, explained the resolution allows SG to state its position without sponsoring action which could hurt student relations on campus.

"We cannot change what's going on — we can take a stand," Clark said.

At last night's meeting, SG also refused to consider a bill referring to the Homecoming Queen selection process. The bill, sponsored by senator Bob Bolin, said the recent election of the candidates was conducted in an undemocratic manner since students were not allowed to vote on all representatives from student organizations.

The bill also stated that because secret ballots and ballot boxes were not used, the "cherished American tradition" of a free election was violated.

Bolin said his bill was designed "to air an issue that obviously is an issue and to devise democratic procedures."

Bolin said the use of computer sheets in itself was evidence enough that the ballots were not secret. He also noted that the ballots were stacked on counters at the "voting booths" and not put in a box.

"It's stupid to conduct something in an undemocratic fashion," Bolin said. "This clearly is an issue for students on campus."

But Clark said the main reason SG didn't consider the bill was because of the implications it made about SG's authority over other student organizations.

"If SG entertained that bill the way it is worded, we would be entertaining the idea that we can censure other student organizations," Clark said.

THE KENTUCKY STATE RACING commission yesterday reversed itself and awarded 27 racing dates to Latonia Race Track beginning Nov. 27.

The action followed a ruling by Franklin Circuit Judge Squire Williams that the commission was not prohibited by state law from making the award.

At its regular meeting two weeks ago, the commission said it could not grant Latonia's request for December racing because it was made after a March 31 deadline.

THREE PERSONS WERE KILLED and four others were injured yesterday in Caneyville, Ky. when the bus they were riding went into a skid and slammed into a group of trees.

All but one of those aboard the Tri-State Bus were thrown from the vehicle, said Deputy Sheriff Ray Marzella. The bus was split in half by the impact.

He said the names of the dead are being held until the next-of-kin could be notified.

POLICE ARRESTED a 23-year-old man yesterday after a six-hour stalemate in which four hostages were held at gunpoint at his girlfriend's office.

Police said Joseph Blair of Clarksville, Ohio, took the four hostages at a shipping department of Levi Strauss Company's distribution center and demanded to see his girlfriend.

Two women employees escaped shortly after the incident began around 9 a.m. Two men were released as Blair came out of a small office when police agreed to several of his demands.

"The incident stemmed from a disagreement between two lovers," said Capt. Dale Fortner of the Kentucky State Police.

BULLITT COUNTY SCHOOL officials agreed yesterday to let school buses pick up pupils inside a mobile home park rather than have them wait at the site where two youngsters were killed last week.

"I'm satisfied, and I think the rest of the parents are," said Raymond Webb, spokesman for about 200 concerned parents. The group had formed a doren-car

LANE KIRKLAND, GEORGE MEANY'S bright and faithful student for three decades, succeeded his mentor as chief spokesman for organized labor yesterday with a call for united union ranks under the AFL-CIO.

Kirkland, 57, the labor federation's second-in-command for the past 10 years, was elected unanimously as the second president in AFL-CIO history. The position pays $110,000 a year.

His ascension to what many consider the most influential post outside of government had been expected because he long was known to be the personal favorite of the retiring Meany who stepped down after 24 years because of failing health.

ARNOLD MILLER, WHO STEPPED down last week as president of the United Mine Workers because of bad health, said yesterday he may run again for union president in 1982.

"If I take it real easy, I might be able to get my own health in good shape and come back and run for the presidency again," Miller said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed.

Miller, 56, was listed in satisfactory condition at Charleston Area Medical Center, where he is recuperating from a heart attack, his second. A hospital spokesman said Miller, who took office in 1972, could be released by this weekend.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS accused President Carter yesterday of leaving the country in an energy bind, unprepared for the Iranian crisis.

The administration's actions on a national energy policy, licensing of nuclear power plants and coal production all came under fire at the Republican Governor's Association annual meeting.

THE SOVIET UNION, whose atheistic rulers officially frown on religious holidays, is exporting Christmas cards for Western consumers in a controversial deal with a British company.

Although religious greeting cards are not normally sold in the Soviet Union, for the second season the Soviet Union is printing Christmas cards with Christian and traditional British designs for export to the United Kingdom.

British critics have attacked the deal on commercial and religious grounds, but importer Michael Henderson, owner of the European Greeting Card Ltd. defends his plans to buy $44 million Soviet-made Christmas cards this year.

PALESTINIAN GUERRILLAS in grim reminders of their opposition to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's Nov. 18, 1977 peace initiative, planted two bombs in Jerusalem yesterday and were rebuffed in a seaborne attack on the Israeli coast.

Police said 12 persons were wounded, most of them slightly, when the bombs exploded 15 minutes apart on two Israeli buses during the morning rush hour in Be'erat, the Palestinian Liberation Organization claimed its terrorists planted the bombs, but made no mention of the battle in the Mediterranean.

KINGS AND PRESIDENTS of the Arab world are likely to reject demands from a radical minority to wage economic war against the United States, an official said yesterday on the eve of a three-day summit.

Delegation sources said moderates in the Arab League formed an overwhelming majority determined to resist militant demands to punish the U.S. for supporting Israel and chastise Egypt for signing a peace treaty with the Israelis.

'Wonderful time of year'

UK priorities shouldn't put athletics above academics

It's a wonderful time of year for Kentucky sports fans.

The football team has exceeded all expectations. Fran Curci said before the season began that he would nominate himself for coach of the year if the team won five games. Not only has it done that, but this team, decimated by suspensions and injuries, has a chance to finish with a winning record. And, according to some press reports, an appearance in the Hall of Fame Bowl will be forthcoming with a victory over the University of Tennessee.

The basketball Wildcats, although they started the season with a loss to Duke, show the potential for greatness. Coach Joe Hall has a wealth of talent, including what is probably the best class of freshmen in the nation.

Contrary to what some think, there is a place for sports at UK. It is a singularly pleasurable experience to see young men and women perform to the best of their physical abilities — especially when those men and women are wearing the name of your school on their backs.

It is even conceivable that their efforts can spur some of the rest of us on to greater physical activity. And you can't ignore the appeal athletics hold for UK alumni. The old grads love to see their alma mater's name in print, as long as that print is in the "win" column. When the old grads are happy, they tend to give money.

This is a source of funds for the University that can be trivialized in this period of shrinking state support, declining enrollment and galloping inflation.

But sports has to be kept in its place. UK is above all else an academic institution. Our priorities should reflect this.

Finals should not be rescheduled to allow students to attend a basketball game. The suggestion doesn't deserve any further discussion.

There also should not be any serious discussion of adding 20,000 seats to Commonwealth Stadium while there are colleges whose programs are threatened by inadequate facilities. No matter that the stadium expansion would be paid for with private donations — the colleges of pharmacy and architecture could benefit from that money far more than the football program.

Every member of the basketball team must remember that classes come first. No matter how great your skills are, they are of no value to the team unless you are academically eligible to play.

Letters to the Editor

'Dirty' name

I found it totally disgusting that some irrational individuals had taken it upon themselves to openly display their opinions Nov. 12 by hanging senseless and immature banners from atop the parking structure on Rose Street between Clifton and Hilltop Avenues. I was not disgusted by the subject matter of these banners (dealing with the current political drama in Iran), but I found it scandalous to think that some students feel they have the right to make this campus look like a restroom wall.

I feel that if these individuals wish to express their opinions to the student body, they should do so through proper and legal means. Any person driving by on Rose Street might think that this campus is a sanctuary for mud-slinging hypocrites who have no respect for public property. Need I say that our University already has enough trash on it, all because we are too lazy to carry a piece of trash to the nearest waste receptacle. Yet how do we ever expect to clean up this University with such thoughtless merrings among us.

May I remind these individuals that their actions observed by the Lexington community directly reflect back to the University, and their senseless acts will only give the University a "dirty" name. In conclusion, all I can say to these people is clean up your act, and maybe the community will appreciate your comments and opinions more often.

Hooray!

In response to all the anti-greek letters, I would like to say "Hooray!!!" for the Greeks. It is not just the Greeks who wear the wild colored outfits, but their reputation for being preps usually constitutes placing the blame on the Greeks. I have to admit that some Greeks do wear some pretty ridiculous clothes. I know several people who are not Greeks and who wear some of those yellow and green sweaters and plaid pants, so please Mr. Moore keep your unsupported conclusions to yourself.

Also, I know more Greeks who support the University's athletics, than non-Greeks. Just because a few Greeks happen to get in your way once at a game doesn't mean that they are trying to take over.

I say let's give the Greeks a pat on the back for once. I know of several Greek organizations that have contributed to many of the organizations that need help (Red Cross, United Way, etc.) So please people, give the Greeks a break.

Jealous author

In regard to the recent attacks on Greek life, we debated for two days whether it's worth the effort and then decided that it was time stand and defend the Greek system. We are referring specifically to the column entitled "Nasty Schemes" by Gary T. Moore. The author of this article either 1) is jealous of the sororities and fraternities for some unknown or hidden reason, or 2) obviously lacks the knowledge of the system and is merely jumping on the bandwagon in attacking Greeks.

Granted we are a minority on campus, but it is obvious that we are a majority when it comes to Student Government, community service and other integral parts of university life.

It's pity someone who, because of either jealousy or lack of knowledge must attack us, "the Greeks," in such an indirect and stereotyped way, as by the clothes that some wear. Have you ever heard the old adage "You can't judge a book by its cover?"

As for your other comment, if laughing behind our backs (by yourself) helps you feel better keep laughing and take a look at yourself in the process.

Further more, if the Greek system is so degrading and unrepresentative, why do fraternities and sororities at this University and other major universities and colleges across the nation exist?

In our case Sigma Alpha Epsilon has flourished since 1856 and now approaches the 200,000 initiate mark nationwide. This seems to indicate that the fraternity in particular has done nothing but prosper in the past and will continue to prosper in the future.

In contrast to your article though, we have the "decency" to not include all the independents in our address but only those who have nothing better to do and feel it necessary to slander an old traditional organization like the "Greeks."

Same treatment

In reply to Mr. Saied Ghobadi's letter concerning the Shah killing people who opposed him, I want to ask a question. What happens to people in Iran who now oppose the Ayatollah? From what I have seen, they receive the same treatment from the Ayatollah that the Shah once imposed.

After the Ayatollah took control in Iran, I must admit I was happy for the Iranian people. I saw the Ayatollah as a person who could take control and become the leader of the Iranian people, not their persecutor. But as the weeks passed, I saw that the Ayatollah was carrying out the same "strong arm" tactics to get his policies across and against those who opposed him as the Shah once did. At first, I thought the Shah had returned to power, but to my amazement, I saw it was the Ayatollah. It looks as though the people of Iran traded one murderous leader for another.

So, Mr. Ghobadi, it seems somewhat contradictory for you to talk about bringing the murderous Shah to justice when you have a murderer for a leader. The situation you have, to coin an old phrase, is "the pot calling the kettle black."

Naval battles

Commonwealth Stadium, with its 58,000-person seating capacity, is the largest outdoor arena in Kentucky. Unfortunately, it will have been in use only five days this year, making it available to only 290,000 people. I believe that this facility could be in use year-round by introducing a new sport to the typical humdrum list of intramural activities offered here.

I propose that Commonwealth Stadium's football field should be torn up and then flooded in order to stage mock naval battles. The potential for this idea is unlimited.

If the sport ever became recognized by the NCAA, UK would have a head start, being able to field a navy of their intramural all-stars. And with a fine renamed facility such as Commonwealth Marina, Lexington would even be in line to host the NCAA Division I Championship.

Each Greek, dorm, or independent team would provide their own battleship. Of course, the Seaton Center would be stocked with several vessels to loan to individuals provided they have their student IDs.

With the lack of space a factor everywhere on campus, every facility should be put to maximum efficiency. This move would help the cause.

Greek philosophy

This letter is not a response to the Letters, opinions and commentaries must be typed and triple-spaced, and must include the writer's signature, address and phone number. UK students should include their year and major and University employees should list their position and department.

The Kernel may condense or reject contributions, and frequent writers may be limited. Editors reserve the right to edit for correct spelling, grammar and clarity, and may delete libelous statements. Contributions should be delivered to Room 114 Journalism, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. 40506.

For legal reasons, contributors must present a UK ID before the Kernel will be able to accept the material.

I should not have been surprised when I picked up Monday's Kernel. After four years of reading Kernel "journalism," I could have assumed that the article on the interview that I took part in over morning coffee would be filled with inaccuracies. And with true Kernel consistency, my premonitions were correct.

First, I would like to point out that I am not Iranian. I am a first-generation American, but my father is from the Dominican Republic, not Iran. I pointed this out to Ms. Gwinn several times during the interview, but I guess the photographs of my Iranian colleagues were not sufficiently inflammatory. I have been told I look like Fidel.

I would also like to know why I was mis-quoted. I did say that the outbreak of violence against the American embassy in Teheran was a logical consequence of a history of the presence of American imperialism in that country, but I pretended my remark with a condemnation of any violent action taken against these low-level functionaries. But then those kind of statements don't make good articles, I guess.

What actually transpired in Friday's two-hour "interview" was much different than what appeared in Monday's Kernel. An understanding of what has occurred in Iran over the past two weeks requires an examination of U.S.-Iranian relations over the past few years as well as an attempt to understand the nature of revolution, especially an Islamic revolution.

U.S. presence in Iran has followed much the same course over the past twenty years, as it has in other developing nations. As the U.S. did with Trujillo in the Dominican Republic, Somoza in Nicaragua, Batista in Cuba, the U.S. helped install the deposed Shah in the early 50s, at the height of the Cold War. After the success of U.S. covert operations in the coup that brought the former Shah to power, the U.S. soon began to export its industrial modernization as well as the commodities that help perpetuate the values that follow from western industrial capitalism. This was not a unique sort of policy, a look at U.S.-Latin American relations since reconstruction is a clear example.

response

Thus, U.S. imperialism (or hegemony, or any other name one would like to use) was fostered under the Shah. As the effects of capitalist modernization began to transform Iranian society, the Iranian people became more and more alienated; an alienation very similar to the one Franz Fanon describes in The Wretched of the Earth, a very respected analysis of the Algerian revolution against the French.

Now, maybe we can begin to see why the embassy take-over was a logical step, considering the past syntheses of history. The present conflict in Iran is not directed against the American people, but rather against the American government. I know that many Americans still believe in the myth of pluralism, but even a brief overview of history reveals that the American government represents interest groups, especially abroad. Look at Gulf-Western in the Dominican Republic, ITT in Chile, and one could go on almost ad infinitum.

The basic feeling during Friday's coffee, was that the American government should begin to represent the American people. If Great Britain requested the extradition of an IRA guerrilla, the Carter administration would oblige them. If West Germany demanded the extradition of a Nazi war criminal, the U.S. would react positively. Likewise, if Iran, a sovereign nation, wants the Shah, also a war criminal, the American government should honor that request. Are the Iranian Revolutionary Council's trials any different than those at Nuremberg?

I am not at all pleased with the actions of Ayatollah Khomeini, but he is, evidently, the legitimate ruler of Iran. Many would argue that the Shah should never have been admitted (to the U.S.) but hindsight is nothing more than a speculative pleasure. The Carter administration should take into mind the integrity of the American people as well as the lives of the remaining hostages, and many of the students' charges are believable. A review of McGeorge Bundy's and then Undersecretary Cyrus Vance's actions in the Dominican Republic near the end of that country's 1964 revolution, illustrates the American propensity for pursuing counter-revolutionary measures in nations undergoing social revolution.

In sum, the Iranian students are right on many points, but those remaining hostages' lives should not be endangered. The Shah should be extradited.

One final note. I should like to point out that others quoted in the article were misrepresented. It is unfortunate that such a blatant example of poor journalism be found in the state's largest student newspaper.

Michael Dawahare is a Political Science and Philosophy senior. This opinion appears in response to the lead story in Monday's Kernel by Nancy Gwinn. A correction regarding this story appears in this issue.

SG announces stance on Iran, defers action on Homecoming

In an effort to help the College of Communications determine its future, SG approved funding for one Kernel ad calling for the formation of a student advisory committee to give student input and feedback to the college.

A presidential committee, appointed by UK President Otis Singletary, is currently evaluating the college's organization structure. The college has recently experienced a substantial increase in enrollment.

"This will not be an unfavorable precedent for SG," Vincent Yeh, academic affairs committee chairman, said, "(because) this concerns whether a college will no longer exist."

In other action:
 ✓SG awarded a contract for next year's telephone directories to University Directories, Promotional Enterprises, which has published the directories for the past six years, lost out on the bid. SG reviewed the contracts of the two companies for the past two weeks.
 ✓SG passed a bill sponsoring two pre-legislative workshops for prospective lobbyists in order to get an idea of students' stands on issues confronting the state legislature when it meets next January. One bill that SG will be lobbying for is designed to get a student member on the state Council on Higher Education.

✓SG announced plans to have a women's legislation forum on Dec. 2 at 7 p.m. The meeting to feature "fireball speakers," will be held in the Recital Hall of UK's Center for the Arts.

Army denies link with PCP fumes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A letter from Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander says a chemical cloud that covered part of Madison County, Ky., in August was not linked to wood treated with a toxic preservative at the Lexington Bluegrass Army Depot.

The letter was written to Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., and released by Ford's office Monday.

Forty-six people were hospitalized because of the cloud, which resulted from the open burning of smokescreen canisters at the depot's facility near Richmond, according to an Army investigation.

A Richmond physician, Dr. William Grise, subsequently found that five leukemia victims in the area were linked by their exposure to wood treated with pentachlorophenol — PCP.

Dr. Roger Stakiak, an environmental health scientist at Eastern Kentucky University, said at least two of the cloud victims also showed symptoms of PCP exposure. He speculated that PCP treated wood may have been used as kindling by workers burning the canisters.

The wood, mostly from old ammunition crates, was for years sold to area residents as scrap.

Alexander's letter said PCP treated wood was no longer being released to the public because of a "supply and demand balance ... rather than because of PCP impregnation."

"Consistent with the state of Kentucky's ban on open burning, ammunition crates are presently being stored rather than being burned or disposed of in landfills," the letter added.

Alexander said the National Cancer Institute and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency were conducting different tests to determine whether PCP can cause cancer.

The NCI study, he said, involves laboratory mice while the EPA effort "is preliminary and is looking at Madison County to determine if clusters of cancer have occurred there and, if so, to identify possible causes... Assessments by the EPA reveal that there is no evidence at this time that PCP poses an imminent hazard to the general public.

"As the EPA and NCI studies unfold, if additional safety precautions are indicated, we will revise our procedures regarding PCP accordingly," Alexander said.

Ervin Nutter of Xenia, Ohio, and a 1943 UK graduate, was named chairman of the UK Development Council during the recent annual meeting of the council in Lexington.

The council is an organization of business and professional people concerned with the development of private support for the University.

Robert McCowan of Ashland, and a 1951 UK graduate, is the new vice chairman of the council and the chairman of the UK Fellows executive committee.

The first annual conference on problems associated with strip mine ground water, sediment in streams and revegetation of spoil banks will be conducted at the Lexington Civic Center, Dec. 4 through 7.

Sponsored by the UK College of Engineering's Office of Continuing Education, the conference will host engineers, government officials and educators from a dozen states and Canada.

Sen. Wendell Ford is the scheduled speaker at the first general session which begins at 9 a.m. Dec. 5. Registration opens Dec. 4 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel adjacent to the center.

Dr. Glen Stassen, associate professor of Christian Ethics for the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, will speak at the UK Baptist Center tonight on the matter of SALT II.

Dr. Maurice East of UK's School of Diplomacy will also speak. Following each speaker's presentation, there will be a question and answer session.

The Baptist Student Center is located at 429 Columbia Ave. The presentation will get under way at 7:30 p.m. in the Center's chapel. Admission is free.

A workshop on "Couple Abuse" designed for those who are in the helping professions or are involved in planning for services in the community, will be offered on Thursday at the Helen King Alumni House.

Sponsored by the College of Social Professions, the workshop will be held from 9:30 to 4:45 p.m., with registration between 9 and 9:30 a.m.

The registration fee is $25, or $20 each if three or more from one agency enroll. There is a special student rate. For more information, call 258-4741.

The Lexington Fayette Urban County

Division of Parks and Recreation will offer a ceramics class for adults beginning Thursday, Dec. 6.

The class will meet from 10 a.m. to noon at the Kenwick Community Center, 313 Owsley Ave.

The fee is $15. Senior citizens, however, may enroll free of charge. To register, call 255-0835 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 266-4405 from 3 to 9 p.m. The class will meet for 10 weeks.

"Parenting — Parroting" will be the focus of the December 6th program of the Mental Health Association of Central Kentucky at the Lexington Technical Institute at 7:30 p.m.

How adult habits are formed in childhood and how the "imprinting of suggestion" in our childhood shapes our adult personalities and behavior will be discussed by clinical social worker Jack Johnson of Paducah.

A local panel will include Vernon Wiehe Ph.D., assistant professor at the College of Social Professions, and David Sharard, Ph.D., professor of pastoral care, Lexington Theological Seminary.

Admission is free and the public is invited. Parking will be available behind I.TI.

The UK Percussion Ensemble, with David Davenport directing, will perform Monday at 8 p.m. at the Recital Hall, Center for the Arts.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Pianist Robert Chabora will perform at noon, Monday at the Great Hall, UK Student Center. The concert is free and the public is invited.

Professor Arthur Melnick, department of philosophy, University of Illinois, will lecture on "I. Kant: Space as a Form of Intuition" Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the President's Room, Student Center.

The UK faculty recital will be Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Recital Hall, Center for the Arts. Bruce Morrison and David Elliott will perform. The public is invited.

The UK Jazz Ensemble I, with Vince Dimartino directing, will perform Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the Concert Hall, Center for the Arts. The performance is free and open to the public.

Dr. Jan G. Reibenberg, chief political correspondent for the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, will speak on "A German Journalist's View of Contemporary America," at 8 p.m. Thursday in 214 Student Center. The public is invited.

Beam me up, Scotty

The famous Scottish brogue proclaims upcoming 'Trek' film as 'tremendous'

By WALTER PAGE
Staff Writer

Give me Warp 12, Scotty, and hurry.
But Cap'n, mah engines, they canna do it!
They've got to, Scotty, or the Enterprise is lost.
I'll see what I can do, Cap'n.

Of course, Chief Engineer Montgomery Scott always got what he wanted out of his pride and joy, the U.S.S. Starship Enterprise. After all, he's the best engineer in space, isn't he? Or so fans of the science fiction television show Star Trek, were told 10 years ago. Then, after three years of watching Scotty coax the impossible out of his ship, the Nielsen ratings said America had had enough.

"You can't get too much of Star Trek. Star Trek never died, it just went into drydock for awhile," said James Doohan, who played Scotty on the popular show until it was cancelled in 1969.

The interest in the show remained however, increasing yearly, until Paramount Studios finally decided to bring the Enterprise and her crew out of retirement for a major motion picture. Star Trek - The Motion Picture will premiere in theaters across the country on Dec. 7.

"Everybody is in the movie, all the regular cast members, most of them with promotions plus two new characters," Doohan said recently at Georgetown College where he was speaking at the invitation of the student body. Scotty was the recipient of one such promotion, he will be known as Commander Scott in the film.

The first thing one notices about Doohan is his age. It's been 10 years since he was last aboard the Enterprise. But, even with the added years,

"It has been such a long process. . .

but it is finally going to happen.

Oh, it's going to be tremendous"

Doohan is still Scotty. Not only does Doohan look like Scotty, but his voice, manner, and personality all conjure images of the Chief Engineer.

"Scotty was me, and I was Scotty. I created the character," Doohan said. "We're both pretty feisty. I was known as the craziest pilot in the Canadian Air Force."

"Once I know I'm right, and know what to do, I go out and get the job done. I don't mess around," he said, drawing the comparison to the television, and now, movie character.

In fact, Scotty was Doohan, from the start.

"My agent had me read for a part in which I used a very proper English accent. I didn't get the part, but ten days later, the agent called and wanted me to read for a new show, called Star Trek, with the same director I had read for earlier. I came in on a Saturday — they were pinched for time — and read with a number of my accents. Thankfully, they chose all the right qualities, but we always did on Star Trek.

Doohan was 45 when Star Trek started, 48 when it was cancelled, and he's now 59.

"It was the Nielsen ratings which took it off the air, which tells you a lot about them," he said sarcastically. Throughout the '70s, Star Trek fans, referred to as Trekkies, clamored for a renewal of the science-fiction show. Finally, with interest reaching a peak, Paramount decided to produce a movie based on the series.

After a number of miscues, false starts, and flying rumors, the actors reported to work August 1978 for six months of filming. From there, director and editor Robert Wise (an Oscar winner for The Sound of Music), began working on the editing, layouts, music, and special effects.

"It has been such a long process, getting Star Trek back to the public, but it is finally going to happen — and on such a grand scale. Oh, it's going to be tremendous," Doohan said with a broad grin.

"You see, there is a big difference between a TV episode and a big movie. In TV filming, you expect to get at least 12 minutes a day. For a movie, you are lucky to get one minute a day.

"Everything is going to be so much better than on TV. For example, nine people, each with a doctorate in design, worked on the new Enterprise. The new model is only four feet long, done with microscopes, so when you see it you will find no mistakes," Doohan explained.

"It has to look like a big ship. When you see it you will think it is enormous."

All the expected special effects do not come cheaply, however.

"It is the most expensive movie ever produced by Paramount. If somebody says we need another million dollars, Paramount opens the checkbook. That shows how much faith they have in us, which they haven't had over the past 10 years," Doohan said.

One of the major problems in renewing Star Trek was getting the crew to cooperate, getting them all on the set ready to work at the same time. Not so with Doohan.

"I couldn't possibly be out of the movie. What could I say to my children and grandchildren if I wasn't in the movie. None of my reasons could hold water with them — or with me."

"How often does a man get to be in a classic? he asked. "And this is a classic. If you can understand — it's very important for my own soul to be there."

In that thoughtful mood, Doohan spoke for a moment

Scotty sails again on the Enterprise

...on a number of related subjects, the philosophical side of Scotty showing, along with the emotional side.

"My philosophy, like that of both Scotty and Star Trek, is like that of Columbus and Balboa — you gotta find out. You gotta reach out, learn, explore..."

"I find that a lot of people are wasting their time. People play too much. Work is one of the greatest things you can possibly do for yourself. Find something you like and go at it full tilt," Doohan said.

Doohan is very impressed with the six months of work he and his colleagues put in on the movie. "About five weeks ago, I saw bits and pieces of the movie and was really knocked out by it. I can't wait to see the whole movie," he said.

"Robert Wise can tell a great story, on a grand scale. It's hard to believe, but it will all be there."

"You're going to see, in the movie, what you've never seen before — the Earth 300 years from now, San Francisco and its extraordinary subway system, most of the Enterprise, and much more more."

"The movie is so suspenseful that we don't even go into what happened during the lay-off, except to say that the Enterprise was being refurbished, supposedly a six-month process, that has to be completed in 18 hours because of some as yet unidentified threat to mankind and/or the universe."

Doohan refused to summarize the movie plot. "Why no, I'm not going to tell you that, I want to tantalize you, make you excited."

"It wouldn't make that much difference if I did tell you about it though," he added, "you'd still see it over and over, I'm damn well gonna see it over and over, at least 10 times, if not 20."

Doohan was more than happy though to continue with his role as "tantalizer," volunteering bits and pieces of information.

"The Klingons? They appear — and then disappear. They are a little different in appearance (from the television show). I put that down to their experiences with the Tribbles, loveable furry rascals they are."

"The Romulans? They don't appear. I can tell you that."

"Why the new characters? We had new characters in all the TV shows. They won't be there at the end of the movie. They won't be in the next one."

"The cast got along great."

"Yes, I will have my mustache in the movie."

"We run into a worm hole. You know what a black hole is. Well, if you presume it is like a big eddy, going round and round, a whirlpool, then off to the side of the black hole are smaller ripples, waves. These are worm holes. Special Effects does a great job with that scene."

"You would never believe how simple our equipment was on the TV series. Now we're working with real equipment. For example, on the bridge, when you press on a button, something happens. I don't have to worry about that though, I built it. I'm the Chief Engineer yee know," lapsing into Scotty's heavy accent.

"The movie cost $15 to $20 million more than Star Wars."

— And perhaps his most astounding thought: "I think the movie will gross about a half billion, that's my opinion, a half billion dollars."

Is it really that good? That appealing to the public? "Just wait'll you see the movie. You'll see it's worth it and that the interest is there and deserved."

With the expected interest and monetary return, will there be another?

"Most definitely, we will make another, as far as I can see. You can look on this movie as only one episode, enlarged somewhat. They saved all the important sets — the bridge, captain's quarters, sick bay, my engine room which is absolutely fabulous," Doohan said.

"Now we can do Warp 12," he added, and this time it was a proud Chief Engineer Scott speaking.

Doohan may be noticeably proud of his work with Star Trek, but he is prouder still to be involved with the movement surrounding the Star Trek phenomenon.

To that end, he proposed a Scottish toast, first in the mother tongue and then in English:

"Nobody is as good as we are, and if anybody is that good, they must be dead."
