"Battle Of Philippines To Be Decisive"

By Mary Jane Dorsey

"The battle of the Philippines, a near-inevitability, since the recent Mariana Islands victories, will be the decisive war-ending campaign." Just when this will occur, students interviewed in the survey this week were reluctant to guess.

Even with the comparatively quick capture of Saipan, which places American forces within 1,260 miles from Tokyo, cautious University students maintain that the wresting of the Philippines will undoubtedly be the longest, bitterest struggle.

This conquest marks the first successful attempt of a beginning depletion of the enemy's supply lines,

"I think the fall of Saipan was a great Nip loss. They really put up a fight for it. I guess they hated to lose such an important base." In discussing this point, it will be well to mention that Naval commanders consider Saipan's airfield potentialities and usable harbors as the best of any island captured from the Japanese.

Another interviewee brought up an entirely new feature when she suggested that with the winning of this newest conflict, the Chinese were heartened because of the hope that our new Superfortresses would bomb Japan regularly. This would split Nipponese forces trying to attack Chinese bases on the Burma front.

but resistance was strong during the 25-day encounter, and as a result it was the most costly of the Central and Western Pacific battles.

"By gaining that strategic air-drome on Saipan, our new Superfortresses can keep bombs raining on the Philippines and the Japanese mainland," prophesied one student.

"Vanquishment of Saipan gives Nimitz amphibious thrust toward the Philippines, and once we get the Philippines, our foothold in the Pacific war is secure," said one soldier.

One student said she thought Guam would have to be taken before an attempt was made toward taking the Philippines.

UK Graduates Receive Radio Appointments

Advancement of two University of Kentucky journalism graduates in the field of radio was announced this week in a nationally known broadcasting magazine. They are Thomas L. Riley, 1931, and Gilbert W. Kingsbury, 1934.

Mr. Kingsbury, who has been assistant editor-in-chief of WLW-WSAI in Cincinnati since November 1942, has been named editor-in-chief of the stations. Before joining the staff of WLW-WSAI Mr. Kingsbury was a reporter and assistant city editor of the Cincinnati Post and later assistant dean and assistant professor at the University of Cincinnati where he is still a member of the evening college faculty, lecturing on journalism.

Foreign Linguists, This Is To You

The knowledge of foreign languages is a dangerous possession. In our worthy efforts to become a linguist, we picked up a few words of Hungarian, Polish, German, Latin and Italian, and slaved over a hot French text for three years. (Our French teacher always told us that we spoke French like a Spanish cow.) We've never found ourselves in any serious difficulties because of our great knowledge, but someday we will!

The only words that we can say in Polish are the translations of "Thank you," and "I love you." One night, not long ago, we had dinner with a soldier who had come from Poland in his early youth. We asked him to please pass the salt—which he did. Wishing to surprise him, we beamed at him and gurgled out our thanks in Polish. He was more than surprised. He was shocked! All he did was pass the salt. And I told him that I loved him!

The Fischer Bowl

By Billie Fischer

Congratulations to the two ASTP men—aces who have evolved an ingenious method of squeezing money out of unsuspecting victims. Their present plan is to form a protection insurance agency. If you take out a policy, one of them attacks you and the other protects you. If you refuse to buy their insurance, they both attack you. Anticipating next week's registration for new students, they have thought of several ways to skin innocent freshmen. They will sell everything from parking space on the campus, and passes for the elevators, to subscriptions to the Kernel. So, beware! If anyone approaches you in an attempt to sell you the Brooklyn Bridge, just laugh in his face. The Brooklyn Bridge isn't for sale. We bought it last week and we're going to keep it!

And while we're on the subject of soldiers, we'd like to mention the ghastly sight that we witnessed last week. Several men crawled up to us, gasping for each breath that they took, eyes glassy and wide with amazement, disbelief, and horror. They had just come from the cafeteria. No, it wasn't the food. . . . It was the new paint job. And who would blame them? Part of one wall (if you have been fortunate enough not to have seen it) is painted in rude, crude, and unattractive pink, yellow, and blue tones. Even Brother Dalí would revolt at the ungodly effect. We suggest that the painters be recalled and be made to lick off the paint.

Most profound thought of the week: If one of the local swimming pools were to be filled to the brim with Martinis, think of all the fun we'd have diving for olives!

If you notice anything slightly out of the usual going on around the campus, have no fear—all will soon resume normality. It's only the Sig Ep pledges doing their required tasks—and raising a lot of hell, too.

To those who are leaving our beloved campus at the end of this session, we give our fondest regards, a ticket to freedom, three tears, and sincere wishes for your return.

One of our non-drinking alums returned in his little soldier suit and went to the favorite campus hang-out for some refreshment. After he had received his bottle of coke, he asked the waitress for some H<sub>2</sub>O. In a few minutes the waitress returned with a bottle of Hudepohl—much to the soldier's horror.
