Many colleges willing to pay high salaries for faculty

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. -IALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Wil-liam Glenn, an expert in high-definition television, finds that uni-versities covet him like they would a golden-e-med quarterback or a 7-footer with a silky-smooth jump shot.

"I'm constantly getting job offers
— one every two months, it seems," said Glenn, one of the superstar professors suddenly benefiting from a brain boom on college ing from a soun-campuses. Even little-known universities are willing to pay up to $150,000 to academics who will set up na-tionally recognized programs.

Finals week does not have to be stressful

Finals often are a stressful period for many college students, but by taking a few measures stress can be reduced or eliminated, according to Mike Nichols, director and staff psychologist at UK's Counseling and Testing Center.

Nichols said that stress, which is a physiological response to a demand from one's environment, can be allevitated from most college student's life.

"With the reduction of stress in your life, you'll live longer, have happier marriages and reduce head-aches, backaches and the risk of heart problems," Nichols said.

There are two kinds of stress - helpful and harmful, Nichols said.

Stress that helps to meet physical challenges, solve problems and reach goals is helpful.

When there is no outlet for stress, and it causes headaches, and it causes headaches, backaches, loss of appetite, faigue, and depression, then it is harmful, Nichols said.

One way to reduce stress is to recognize its source, he said.

One way to reduce stress is to recognize its source, he said.

Leaving home for the first time, managing finances, living with a roommate and handling personal problems are the main sources of stress for most college students.

To better handle and climinate stressful situations, Nichols suggested the following approaches:

A physical examination:
"It's definitely worth the time and the effort," Nichols said. "It's something to do just for peace of mind—something you do for yourself."

mind — something you do for yourself."

-Exercise 45 minutes a day, five days a week: Three non-stressful exercises are walking, swimming and bicycling.

-Relaxation: Develop ways to relax and cope with stressful situations.

•Recognize "Type A be-

*Recognize "Type A be-havior": The feeling you bring to a task such as anger, irritation, ag-itation and impatience is typical of Type A behavior, Nichols said. Some people with this behavior don't want to give it up because it may have helped them achieve aca-demic goals. But because of the risk of heart attacks, Type A behav-ior should be avoided, Nichols said.

"A lot of students who coasted through high school got very Type A in college and got straight A's," Nichols said. "Now they are terri-fied to give it up for fear of fail-ing."

•Humor: "The more you can laugh about an embarrassing situa-tion in the shorter time after, the run Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. The university agreed to pay him $114,550 to head a high-definition TV research team. That means Glenn will pull down three times the average of his FAU teaching colleagues.

"It seems like a dream offer—the warm climate, the university was aggressive about beefing up its declerical engineering program, and read aggressive about carring up rogram, and they had bright graduate students to work with," he said.

The demand for well-known professors, who typically teach business or science, is growing as the pool of academics in those fields ceclines.

The professors can bring such prestige to a school that they demand and receive generous salaries, lighter teaching loads and state-of-the-art laboratories.

"What it does when you get one of these superstars is it creates instant success in your research programs," said Kenneth Klieuer, dean of Purdue University's school of science. "You move up almost overnight into the big leagues."

"The competition for superstars is so fierce because schools are trying to go after the same big talent," said Robert Rosenzweig, president of the Association of American Universities, representing about 60 ellie research-oriented schools. College administrators are recruiting top talent by offering "packages" that can cost a university more than $500,000. And sometimes a lot more. It might include a salary of $150,000, extra travel money to conduct research, guaranteed summer employment, plans to beef up a science laboratory, a promise to assign graduate assistants to help, access to computers and secretarial access to computers and secretarial access to computers and secretarial assistance.

Roselles scheduled to meet Delaware organizations today cials about the presidency at that school.

Today is Roselle's second visit to Delaware, according to UK spokesman Bernie Vonderheide.

The Roselles' itinerary today includes visits with student groups, faculty, administration, trustees and university organizations.

"That (the trip) shouldn't indicate he's made a decision at all. If he's offered the job at the University of Delaware, he'll make his decision them," Vonderheide said. "The president decided he would go up and visit because he made a commitment to go to Delaware. It was a difficult decision because of all the response he's received all over the state."

"The thing that touched him most deeply was the rally held by the students," Vonderheide said. Vonderheide said that a meeting Roselle had a few minutes before Thursday's rally with four students especially moved him.

Student Activities Board President Mike Bowling , who was one of the students who met with Roselle, said there is a lot of emotion surrounding the issue.

"Some of the students who went in to see him are his biggest supporters." Bowling said. "It was pretty emotional as far as we were all concerned, and we want to let him know how important he is to us and the University."

Members of the University of Delaware presidential search committee visued UK Friday to get character references about Roselle. "They were interested in how students viewed Dr. Roselle and how he interacts with the students," said Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs James Kuder.

Kuder said he he spoke with a member of the search committee it was.

"We stated, both of us, that the world leaves one epoch of Cold War and enters another epoch," Gorbachev said at an unprecedented joint news conference that marked the end of two days of storm-tossed talks held aboard a Soviet Luxury liner. "We are just at the very beginning of our long road to a long-lasting peaceful period."

Said Bush after his first summit as president: "I am optimistic that as president: "I am optimistic that the Soviet Union, we can realize a lasting peace and transforms the East-West relationship into one of enduring cooperation."

Even so, neither man sought to gloss over differences on two topics, the Soviet's call for cuts in navial forces and American anger at the continued flow of Soviet weapons to leftist rebels in El Salvador. Gorbachev departed Malta for Moscow, where he was convening a meeting of virtually an entirely new lineup of Warsaw Pact leaders to discuss the summit. Bush went immediately to Bel-gium to meet with NATO leaders

Arriving in Brussels, he noted the "thunderous events" taking place in the Eastern bloc, and said: "Tonight we stand at the crossroads of history on a way to Europe, whole and free. ... And that simple truth brought Mikhail Gorbachev and me together in a windswert and me together in a windswept harbor off Malta."

Windswept it was. Bush and Sec-retary of State James Baker, who spent the night aboard ship in the harbor, sported penny-size patches behind their ears to guard against seasickness.

The joint news conference in Malta was held aboard the Soviet luxury liner Maxim Gorky, which was pressed into service as the site for the two days of talks after bad weather forced cancellation of plans to use U.S. and Soviet warships anchored offshore. An afternoon session and a dinner on Saturday were cancelled because of the rough weather.

UK goes cold, Pitino theory still unproven

Second half shooting slump spoils Wildcats' upset bid

INDIANAPOLIS — UK coach Rick Pitino has a theory — make 38 percent of your shots and make 35 deflections and you will win 95 percent of your games. Pitimo's theory came to light Saturday at the Big Four Classic when his

And just as it was in last Tuesday's game with Ohio University, the second half was the downfall for the Cats (1-1). UK shot just 29.7 percent from the field in the second half as Indiana (3-0) outscored them 39.33

"We just took some bad shots in the second half," Pitino said. "It wasn't a matter of us getting fa-tigued, we just had a little mental letdown."

wrong in a film, but for the second game of the the season, I was very, very proud of them," he said. "I was very happy in the way that they played yesterday."
With every basket UK scored and with every turnover Indiana committed, IU coach Bob Knight seemed to get more upset. Although Indiana's starting lineup included three freshmen and a pair of sophomores, Knight was livid with his team's play.

sophomores, Knight was livid with his team's play.

"They really exposed our weaknesses with their press," said IU assistant coach Joby Wright, who spoke to media in Knight's place. "Kentucky really brought it to us.". We really had to suck it in and come back and win this game." In the second half, UK built its lead to 48-47 when forward John Pelphrey hit a pair of free throws with 16-12 remaining. But little did everyone know that the Hoosiers would score the next 16 points to take a 53-48 lead when freshman Lawrence Funderburke hit a lay-up with 12-10 remaining.

"With our style of play, there are going to be runs both good and bad," Pitino said. "We just have to keep our heads up and realize that."

Cats hope winning ways resume against Miss. St.

After two games, UK coach Rick Pitino said his team has yet to play the type of tempo he would like. But it looks like that will change when UK (1-1) plays Mississippi State University (3-0) at 7:30 tonight at Rupp Arena. "I think that we haven't been able to play the tempo that I would like because of the teams we were playing," Pitino said. "I think it's going to be a much more up-and-down game." Mississippi State coach Richard Williams said last night that his team will not try to slow the tempo of the game. If anything, he said his team might try to increase it a little.

"I'll be honest with you, we are going to get up and down the floor," Williams said. "We are not going to be shy about shooting the basketball. ... We will look for the shot as soon as we throw the ball inbounds."

into as soon as we inrow the bail inhounds."

Two years ago in the game at Lexington, Eddie Sutton's UK team pressed an inexperienced State team for almost the entire first half and caused many turnovers to lead 55-17 at halftime. And UK's press has Williams worried again.

"We better be able to handle their press because they are going to press us for 40 minutes tomorrow night," Williams said. "If we don't handle their press, then it's going to be another one of those nights.

"But we a lot more experienced now than we were two years ago. We played almost entirely freshmen in that game."

Williams is expected to start four

Williams is expected to start four juniors and one sophomore tonight. Leading that group is 6-7 junior forward Cameron Burns, who is averaging 22 points and 7.3 rebounds eraging 22 points and 7.3 recounts-per game.

"Cameron Burns is a load," UK senior guard Derrick Miller said.
"We are going to have to keep him off the boards, if we want to win.
... We have to keep him from get-ting the ball with his back to the basket. If we don't, then its either give him the points or foul him."

"Cameron Burns is an excellent post-up player," Pitino said.
"We've got to keep him from get-ting the ball and block him off the boards."

After getting out-rebounded 51-33 against Ohio University, UK improved and was only out-rebounded 37-33 Saturday against Indiana University. But Pitino said he is worried about State's rebounding ability.

"They are a much better rebounding team than Indiana," Pitino said. "They rely more on athletic ability than the Indiana players. They can all jump. ... I mean Cameron Burns has a 43-inch vertical leap."

Although the Buildogs are entering tonight's game undefeated and the favorite, Williams said he and his team are not overconfident.

"The last time I came to Lexington thinking we hard a good chance of winning, we were down 55-17 at the half, so we are not taking this game lightly at all," Williams said. UK and Mississippi State are meeting early in the season because of an SEC mandate that says each school must play one conference game before Christmas to free-up a weekend for a possible television game in January or February.

"It really doesn't matter to me when we come to Lexington," Williams said. "We just play who we are supposed to."

Tonight's game also will be the first in which two new rules will posed to."

Tonight's game also will be the first in which two new rules will be used. The SEC is experimenting with a six-foul rule and three free throws on a foul on a three-point attempt this season. Pitino thinks the rule changes will be a plus for his team.

Cardinals spoil Irish's perfect record in Big Four games

INDIANAPOLIS — The University of Notre Dame entered the Big Four Classic at the Hoosier Dome as the only team that could boast an undefeated record in the event's two-year existence.

were dead," U of L guard LaBradford Smith said.
Still, the Cardinals were leading by one point at intermission, 34-33 after a sloppy 20 minutes of basketball caused by good defense, according to both coaches.
"I think if both teams want to run, they need to get use to the turf so to speak, especially playing in big dome like this," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said. "But I still think that we played really aggressive defense, and defense caused the sloppiness in the offense."
"I agree with Digger that both defenses were aggressive and neither one allowed very much," said Crum, whose team raised its record to 3-1.

However, Crum could see that players were not performing as they did in a third-place finish in the Maui Classic.

Senior Center Felton Spencer, who has led U of L in rebounding the first three games and scoring twice, was able to grab only six boards and score eight points.

"Felton was not as quick he has been," Crum said, "His shilly to get up and down the floor is his real strength. He was just not able to do that. He played awfully hard in Hawaii, but he was not up to par today. He's a lot better player than he was out there tonight, and I think as the season goes along, you will see that."

After Spencer sank a free throw and bricked his second, but Tony Kimbro was there to tip it in.

"I wasn't pleased with the way that we didn't keep Louisville off the offensive boards," Phelps said.

"And that was one thing that contributed to the loss."

Smith made the score 71-61 with is lay-up off an Irish turnover

"I thought at times we gave them too many offensive points," Phelps said.

Harmon scored the next five points to conclude the run with a three pointer and a 16-foot jump shot to gave the Cards a 76-61 lead.

"I was pleased we forced a few turnovers and got the running game going a little bit," Crum said. "However, we didn't convert real well at the other end like I think we should. We made a lot of careless,

BIG FOUR NOTES

The entire NCAA Baskethall Tournament Committee attended the Big Four Classic.
 Yesterday's attendance of 40,128 was the lowest total of the three Big Four Classics. A crowd of 43,601 attended the first Big Four in 1987. Last year's turnout was 45,214.
 Notre Dame and U of L are 2-1 in Classic action while UK and Indiana are 1-2.
 UK's Rick Pitino made his unsuccessful debut in the Big Four. Denny Crum, Bobby Knight and Digger Phelps have coached in all three Classic games.

'Back to the Future Part II' has eye on another sequel

Fox, Lloyd fail to carry new movie

By KIP BOWMAR

Sequelmania continues to sweep Hollywood as Robert Zemeckis's newest movie, "Back To The Fu-ture Part II," has hit the movie screens in time for the holidays.

The movie industry refuses to be original and would rather produce an inferior sequel that makes money, than an original film with some death.

than an original film with some depth.

The principal characters who made the original so successful have reprised their roles.

Michael J. Fox returns as Marry McFly and Christopher Lloyd returns as the slightly eccentric Doc Brown. But part of the problem with the movie is that the original was so successful.

The filmmakers knew there was an audience that was hungry for a sequel and decided the two sequels would be better than one. Every-thing that happens in the movie is a setup for "Back To The Future Part III" and that severely hurts the film. While viewers who saw both the Star Wars and Indiana Jones films knew there would be sequels, those movies could be judged on their content and the viewers didn't get the feeling of being set up throughout the film for another sequel.

Part of the reason the first installation in the series worked was be-

Out the 11th for another sequet.

Part of the reason the first installation in the series worked was because the idea was fresh and people enjoyed saying "think what if this could happen."

Although the locale is different in the sequel and the special effects are impressive, the idea is stilted and not very original.

Another problem with the movie sthat it stretches the leap of faith viewers must make. All movies require a suspension of disbelief at the beginning, but the audience will go only so far and Director Zemeckis and Executive Producer Steven Spielberg seemed to have for gotten that. It's a bad sign for a movie when it creates its own logic and reality and still can't make sense under those rules.

and reality and still can't make sense under those rules.

The movie opens with Marty McFly at the end of "Back to the Future," and he is visited by Lloyd as Doc Brown. They travel into the future in their time machine Delorento save Fox's future family from destruction as Fox gets a glimpse of himself and doesn't like what he sees.

But that isn't the the real problem of the movie. Michael F. Wilson, who recreates his evil BiTannen, creates a situation that affects the past. So Lloyd and Fox troop throughout different time periods and seem to resolve the problem. But the ending is completely artificial and done only to facilitate the need for a sequel.

The performances as a whole are the need for a sequel.

The performances as a whole are entertaining. Fox, who has done memore serious acting recently in films like "Casualties of War," does a good job of recreating his role in the movie.

Lloyd's character has an annoy-instructure of earth "great too."

role in the movie.

Lloyd's character has an annoying tendency of saying "great scot" instead of using dialogue. It's kind of sad to see Lloyd playing an inane mad scientist when he has starred in such films as "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Next."

The best performance in the movie was by Wilson, who played Biff at three different ages and was equally loathsome and stupid in all of them. There was some continuity between the first and the second films and for the most part those scenes work.

But as a whole the movie falls short of its potential because it cheast be viewer and only serves as a prelude for the third and hopefully final installment of this series.

Such is the case with "Crescent

"Crescent City Christmas Card" finds Marsalis fronting various small ensembles that take tradition-al New Orleans and Ellington-styled textures into the '90s, while simultaneously being loyal to the joy and holiday spirit of the materi-al.

Marsalis leads a tight horn section in brilliantly weaving a slow, thoughtful blues around the melody of the classic song, as sung by Kathleen Battle.

It's a remarkable fusion — perhaps the greatest I've ever heard of jazz and classical music elements. It's also a shocking realization that "Silent Night" is, at heart, a great blues tune.

"Silent Night" is, at heart, a great blues tune.

The CD revolution has also prompted the reissue of a jazz-Christmas classic of an earlier era — "The Sounds of Christmas," by the Ramsey Lewis Trio. However, there's a Scrooge-like aspect to the release. The original album runs rather short, only about 35 minutes and a CD reissue would have been the appropriate opportunity to add the excellent follow-up album, "More Sounds of Christmas" to enlarge the set. But, no such luck. The CD simply duplicates the original album. Still, it's full of upbeat, bluesynal albums from the early '608. Polygram Records, meanwhile, has brought together some of the best Yuleitide jazz from the Vervelabel in the '608 for a new CD compilation, "Have Yourself a Jazzy Little Christmas."

compilation, "Have Yourself a Jazy Little Christmas."
Oscar Peterson contributes a reflective "A Child Is Born," while

Other highlights include two tunes from "Christmas '64," a long out-of-print album that caught organist Jimmy Smith at the peak of his popularity.
The tunes are "Jingle Bells" and a big-band version of "God Rest Yo Merry Gendtemen."
Vocalists also shine here, with Mel Torme performing "The Christmas Song," (which he composed), the great Dinah Washington singing "Ole Santa" and "Silent Night," Ella Fitzgerald adding her distinct touch to "The Secret of Christmas" and "White Christmas," Billie Holiday taking a decidedly secular approach with "Tve Got My Love to Keep Me Warm," and Billy Eckstine singing "Christmas Eve."

With Indiana leading 70-60 with 305 left, the Cast made a run at the IU lead, just as Pitino had foresten. First, Pelphrey hit two free throws, then he hit one of two with 2:16 to cut the lead to 70-63.
And when Reggie Hanson hit ad riving lay-up with 0:52, UK trailed only 70-65. Graham hit the front end of a one-and-one with 0:33 for IU's last point. After a pair of Deron Feldhaus free throws, UK trailed by only four with 0:26. UK then forced two more of Indianas's 25 turnovers and Feldhaus, he leading scorer in the game with 23 points, hit a driving six-footer to cut the lead to 71-69 with eight seconds.

to cut the lead to 71-69 with eight seconds.

After a UK timeout and an Indiana timeout, Miller fouled Greg Graham on the inbounds pass with 0:06 remaining. Graham missed the front end of the one-and-one, Feldhaus rebounded and passed to Sean Woods who drove upcourt and launched 18-foofer at the buzzer that would have tied the game if it had gone in, but it bounced off the ringht side of the rim. Lady Kats get year's fourth win as Cushenberry leads the way

By GREGORY A. HALL Staff Writer

Lady Kats sophomore guard Kristi Cusenberry was disappointed that her team did not hit the century mark in their 96-68 win over Marquette University Saturday night at Memorial Coliseum.

But the Lady Kats had more to be disappointed with than that—especially after the first half. The Lady Warriors out-rebounded UK 57-51, despite the Lady Kats' height and depth advantages.

"We rebounded well," Marquette coach Sister Maria Pares said. "If we would have just put in some second shots or converted some outside shots (it would have been closer). There was one time we outside shots (it would have been closer). There was one time we were flat. We kind of got down in the second half. We did some good things and this game will help us."

UK's improved its record to 4-1 and Marquette fell to 1-3.

UK led by 12 at the half, before outscoring the Lady Warriors 57-41 in the second half.

"Our defense really bothered them the second half," Cushenberry said. "The more they got tired the more it bothered them."

more it bothered them."

"It took us a little while to get into the flow of things," UK coach Sharon Fanning said. "The first half we were a little tentative defensively. We weren't rotating real well, and they were out-rebounding us at halftime. But I know the percentages picked up the second half."

UK hit 43 percent of the field picked up the tempo, forcing 17

Marquette turnovers. UK committed six turnovers in the second half, and 17 for the game. The Lady Warriors turned the ball over 29 times on the game.
"They loosened up mentally in the second half," Fanning said.
"When they're turning the ball over and we're making easy buckets it's a psychological boost to us and it wears them down. I can't ask for better teamwork and intensity than in the second half. It's been a tough week with four games in a seven day period."
"I thought we would do a little better (overall), but they just kept coming at us." Pares said.
Pares said that when Marquette got behind, her team tried to run with UK.
"Kids are kids," Pares said." And they think when you beat me, I'll beat you. When they press, they force you out of that type of game, too."
Marquette also was plagued by Marquette also was plagued by early foul trouble. Three Marquette players fouled out of the game. The game's high rebounder was Lady Warrior Ellen Nowak, who had 15. But Nowak fouled out with six minutes left in the game. The leading scorer for the game, Marquette's Heidi Ach led all scorers with 18 points. But she got two fouls in the first two minutes of the game and had to sit out much of the first half. She was whistled for her third foul in the first minute of the second half.

The Lady Kats had four players in double figures, with Cushenberry's 15 points leading the way.

"I thought I played pretty good," Cushenberry said. "I was shooting the ball a little bit better."

The Lady Kats game tonight has been moved to Rupp Arena where the team will play against Indiana at 5 p.m. in the first half of a doubleheader with the Wildeats.

"The team made the decision to play in Rupp," Fanning said.
"They wanted to give new people an opportunity to see us play. We want to see 25,000 people there by 5:30."

Mark Davis, Joe Carfer, Danny Tartabull and Jeff Reardon also might be moved this week, even though teams face no deadines to deal at the annual gathering.

The Brewers, looking to help themselves in several areas, dipped into the free-agent pool for he first time since 1980 by signing Parker to a two-year, 516 million deal from the California Angels.

Parker, 38, led designated hitters with 22 home runs and 97 RBIs, while batting 264 for the World Series champion Oakland Athetics this year. The left-handed slugger, a six-time All-Star, was selected yesterday as DH of the year in an anual American League award.

The Brewers, who tried several players at the DH position this season, got a combined 10 homers, 67 RBIs and a .238 average from DHs. Milwaukee left-handed batters this total of only 20 home runs in 1989.

Cool Cats win two in series

By BOBBY KING

Staff Writer

Chad Cooper scored four goals Saturday night to pace the Cool Cats to a 6-5 victory over George Washington University and complete a weekend sweep. The Cool Cats defeated George Washington 11-5 to open the series on Friday night behind the three-goal, two-assist effort of Jason Smithwick.

Saturday night the Cool Cats jumped out to an early four goal lead and held off a late charge to improve their record to 11-1.

Cooper got the hat trick with only 14:09 left in the second period. The center from Jackson, Miss., had five goals and one assist in the two games this weekend.

Cooper attributed his success to the help of his teammates and a little bit of luck. "The puck was just bouncing my way I guess. But Jason (Smithwick) and Jim (Klarbeke) were getting me the puck at the right times," he said.

After the Cool Cats skated to a 4-0 lead early in the second period, the game appeared to be a blowout in the make. But within a 10-minute span George Washington outscored the Cool Cats 4-1 to cut the lead to one.

Pikeville wins 20-7.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Pikeville High School became the first school in Kentucky football history to win three consecutive state championships with a 20-7 win over Trigg County Friday after-over Trigg Coumy 1100.00.

Pikeville, which also won the Class A title in 1987 and 1988, dominated Trigg County in front of 5,400 fans Friday afternoon at Cardinal Stadium. The Panthers, who have won 43 of their last 44 games, secured probable Coach of the Decade honors for Hillard Howard.

That switch gave the Admirals their touchdown.

A conversion by Rob Rightmyer gave Danville the cushion it needed to ensure the win.

Mayfield tried in vain to score again late in the game, but Danville gained possession of the ball, and the clock eventually ran out.

Mayfield, looking for a fifth state title in 13 years, ended up 12-2 for the season.

Senior tailback Steve Bailey, who transferred from Logan, W.Va., before the season, was the star of the game as he rushed for 127 yards on 28 carries. Bailey also was the star of the defense as he intercepted two passes.

But Pikeville's defensive was just as impressive as tailback Bailey, shutting down Greg Bridges, Trigg County's star tailback.

Trigg County scored its single touchdown of the game by blocking a punt by Pikeville and scoring from the 1-yard line.

Pikeville earned its first touchdown by completing a 99-yard, 13-play drive.

It was the third straight year Tilghman (12-3) had taken a lead into the fourth quarter of the championship game and come up empty.

Colleges willing to pay big bucks for professors at the University of Florida, the only Florida college in the prestigious AAU.

Last year University of Florida officials had to offer to install new physics lab equipment to keep professor Pierre Raymond from going to a higher-paying job at Yale.

"It costs us a good sum of money, but you're going to have to pay to be in the big leagues," Hemp said.

to be in the big leagues," Hemp said.

Princeton wasn't so lucky.

It lost noted economist Sanford Grossman to the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business. Grossman's reportedly received $2.50,000, including salary and benefits.

Wharton is widely known for raiding other universities. So is Duke University, which lured Henyl Louis Gates Jr., who is regarded as the nation's leading scholar of black literature, from Cornell.

He joins Duke's English department next semester — and so does a philosophy professor who worked closely with Gates at Cornell.

Duke officials would not return calls to discuss Gates' salary package. The school has said it intends to build a reputation as a center for the study of race and gender.

Not all the superstars wind up at Ivy League-level universities.

The University of South Florida in Tampa, for example, snared Shirley and Ting Chu, an internationally known husband-wife team of microelectronics researchers, from Southern Methodist University. USF paid them a combined annual $140,000 salary, and put $300,000 into renovating its electronics laboratory for them.

"This team has done some of the most awant-garde work in the country in electronics. We went after them and we got them," said Michael Kovac, engineering college dean who recruited the Chus. But Kovac, like other administrators, frets about the loyalties of purloined professors.
"The reality is that you get superstars and you have to increase their salary every three or four years or someone cles is going to come along with a better offer," he said. Administrators at Temple University, a state school in Philader.

along with a better offer," he said.
Administrators at Temple University, a state school in Philadelphia, share Kowa's concerns.
"It seems like every week there are faculty members who come into a dean's office and say they've been offered $20,000 to $30,000 more than we can afford to pay them to go somewhere else," said Cathy Gossinger, assistant to the president. "The situation is not unlike the corporate world, where CEOs (chief executive officers) of companies are cultivated all the time by other firms."

Education experts attribute the intense bidding wars for top-flight faculty members to a basic business maxim: supply and demand. An unusually high number of senior faculty members — professors who joined colleges during America's Sputnik era of the 1950s and 'Gos — are expected to retire in the next decade and there won't be enough Ph.D. so treplace them. From 1987 to 1992, there will be 1.6 candidates available for every college teaching job, according to a September study by the Mellon Foundation. By 1997-2002, there will be only 30,934 new faculty members to fill 37,091 expected vacancies. Hardes-hit fields include mathematics, physical sciences, "The supply in relation to demand is tight, so the way some "Colleges have balanced that out is by increasing prices," said Iris Mototsky of the American Association of University Professors in Washington, a union that represents faculty members.

And the high pay for superstars is creating salary inflation across the board, administrators and prothe board, administrators are fessors say.

"It is not uncommon for me to go after a young physicist — I mean someone who recently got their Ph.D. and is good — and try to put together a $200,000 package," said Purdue's Klieuer.

Says Florida Atlantic's Marilyn Floyd, assistant vice president for compete against private industry, if a Ph.D. in accounting can get

The high salaries for superstars in science and business are creating

Female doctors changing face of American medicine

Information Network

Increasing numbers of female doctors are changing the face of U.S. medicine, according to articles in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

In 1969-70, about nine percent of first-year medical students were women; now it's 38 percent, according to Journal editor in chief Dr. Arnold S. Relman in an editorial.

Applications from men have fallen by almost 50 percent since 1974-75.

Almost two-thirds of all students entering med school to years ago were white men; only 48 percent were men last year. Applications from black men are down by 41 percent since 1974, but those from Asian-American men are up 133 percent.

The rising cost of medical education may be discouraging po-tential applicants, as may a drop in earning prospects because of increased competition, especially in urban areas, and lower-paying health maintenance organiza-tions.

Without the influx of women, there wouldn't be enough applicants to fill existing positions, said Dr. Carola Eisenberg of Harvard Medical School, author of an accompanying article.
"Medicine is slowly changing from a white man's profession.
"Physicians in the future will be more representative of American society, will be closer to the concerns of the average patient and probably more responsive to ... the social, economic and political problems of health care" than ever before, Relman said.

Will Roselle stay or will he go? It's up to Wilkinson

It is a sad commentary on Kentucky when the president of its flagship institution is chased away because of state leaders unwillingness to adequately fund education

Today, UK President David Roselle is at the University of Delaware where he is being interviewed for that school's presidency. Although Delaware is a much smaller land-grant school and has a significantly smaller budget, it has one thing that UK does not — money.

During his 2 1/2 years as UK's ninth president, Roselle has been frustrated by a lack of funding from Frankfort. Although private gifts to UK have reached record levels under Roselle's ration, funding from Frankfort has increased very

And pleas to many state officials to adequately fund higher education have fallen on deaf ears.

During the last session of the General Assembly when higher education was lobbying Frankfort, Gov. Wallace Wilkinson called for the state's eight university presidents to stop their crying. It is little wonder then that Roselle would be interested in going to a state where education is appreciated. Since it became known that Roselle may leave UK, Wilkinson has remained suspiciously guiet, choosing to allow his press spokesman, Doug Alexander, to speak for him.

Alexander said it is ludicrous to accuse the governor of trying to get rid of Roselle. Wilkinson may not be overrly trying to remove Roselle, but he has done a marvelous job of making him feel unwelcomed. Alexander also diminished the importance of Roselle to UK, saying, "To connect an individual ... to the whole issue of higher education just doesn't make any sense."

If the Wilkinson administration had any sense, it surely would realize that Roselle is vital to not only higher education' future, but the future of Kentucky.

Under Roselle, faculty morale has reached unprecedented levels and the average score of the entering freshman class has reached new levels. The campus also has seemed more like a community under Roselle, rather than 13 separate colleges

In addition, Roselle wrote the book on how to properly handle an NCAA investigation into a school's major athle program by cleaning house and laying a strong ethical Roselle also has done an exceptional job of changing the public's opinion on the value of higher education and making its case to lawmakers.

But while public opinion appeared to change, the govern refused to budge on his position not to raise taxes, even if it meant improving the quality of the state's education.

Although Wilkinson certainly should be held responsible for contributing to the current situation, many of the state' lawmakers also have caused Roselle to be discouraged

A few lawmakers have been willing to be realistic about the grave situation of higher education, but there has yet to be a consensus emerge that something ought to be done for higher education, the governor's office notwithstanding education, the governor's office notwithstanding. Thursday the Interim Joint Appropriations and Revenue Committee passed a resolution proclaiming their support for Roselle and higher education, and Friday Speaker Don Blandford pledged his support for Roselle. Perhaps those two actions are signs that the tide has turned in the General Assembly in favor of higher education, but that does not excuse many lawmakers; it should not have taken the prospects of loging a migrative president to convince the prospects of losing a university president to convince the state's leaders of the need to support higher ad-prospects or losing a university prestaent to convince the state's leaders of the need to support higher education.

If Roselle leaves the University, the fallout will affect the state for years. In addition to causing many young and bright faculty members to leave UK, Roselle's decision no doubt will make it difficult for UK to fill the spots of retiring faculty. After all, who would want to come teach in a state where the Atter an, who would want to come teach in a state where the future of higher education is as bleak as it is in Kentucky? It also will be unlikely that UK will be able to replace Roselle with someone of equal quality.

The damage of Roselle's departure would not only hurt UK, but all of higher education. As the seven other state university to recruit professors and administrators, it surely will be difficult for them to convince candidates that the future of higher education in Kentucky is a bright one.

The University of Delaware's board of trustees is expected to make a decision on its new president by Dec. 14. Roselle said the one thing that can keep him at the University is a promise from the state's leaders that they will adequately fund higher education in the upcoming session of the General issembly.

Lawmakers have appeared to come around, and now it is Gov. Wilkinson's turn. It is time that he begin acting like someone who is concerned about the state's future and promise Roselle that higher education will receive more attention

Maybe it is just me. But the U-laul at Maxwell Place seems unjustified.

David Roselle is being honored for his accomplishments and is being called to the forefront of higher education. He is an honor to UK and the state.

Meanwhile, Wallace Wilkinson is being ridiculed for his accomplishments in such matters as "tax avoidance." The only thing Wilkinson is being lauded for is providing a bevy of material for starving Kentucky comedians. No change in the trivial lore of Kentucky politics which has the laughing stock of the nation for years.

And Roselle is the one being forced to leave the commonwealth? Gov. Wilkinson has followed in his predecessors' footsteps by being more concerned with favoring friends than with taking care of the state's future generations.

UK Student Government Association President Sean Lohman called Roselle the most important man in this University's history. Although the statement may have been made out of emotion rather than reason, the facts been much control to the facts been made out of emotion rather than reason, the facts been out Lohman's claim.

out of emotion rather than reason the facts bear out Lohman's claim Roselle is possibly the first president in the history of this Universi-ty to be visionary. The previous leaders of this Uni-versity have by and large been, like the majority of Kentuckians, ones who hold on to the past to the point that the future resembles the point base and person past.

Instead Roselle has tried the impossible — bringing UK to the point where other universities had reached earlier in the 1980's and preparing it for the next decade.

But better education costs monward an uncooperative Governor

But better education costs money, and an uncooperative Governor and General Assembly in Frankfort have pushed Roselle to the brink.
The inlighting that emanates from Frankfort has left Kentucky in a Mastodonic age.
Why would Roselle not want to go to a state that has no sales tax because of a surplus in the state budget. More importantly, Delaware does not hesitate to use its wealth to benefit education.

But pre-historic Kentucky has the attitude that money should first go to education, after all of the governor's and the legislature's friends have been taken care of. And even then, the General Assembly is concentrating on a primary education that has been ruled unconstitutional which spices it stills throught to high. while giving little thought to high while giving little thought to high-er education.

And isn't that type of thought reminiscent of the days when a high school education was consid-ered "higher learning." Gov. Wal-lace dates back to that era. It is just a shame that he forgot everything he was taught back in Casey Coun-ty — like the theory of hiring and supporting the best man for the ioh.

supporting the best man for the job.

It is well known that Wilkinson and UK Community College Chancellor Charles Wethington are good friends. And Wilkinson would have certainly enjoyed seeing Wethington in Roselle's office.

But Roselle is too wise to listen to Wilkinson's requests, such as is support for Eddie Sutton during the NCAA investigation.

The good that Wally has done for this state was summed up in a T-shirl I saw Friday night: 10 reasons to live in Kentucky. One of them was that education had been ruled unconstitutional. Another was that Wally could only serve one term.

Maybe Roselle could consider the latter reason as grounds for staying at UK.

latter reason as grounds for staying at UK.

I take it back. Considering the "natural" laws of Kentucky, hit the road Dave. You're too much fer uz. However the blame is spread wider than simply Frankfort. Roselle has been slapped in the face by the other presidents of state universities. The UK president chose to give the state a $10 million dollars of what the Council on Higher Education had estimated that UK would need in the next biennium. Roselle did this in an effort to help the state in a time when education's call would be twice as big at this General Assembly.

But the other state university presidents asked for full funding, taking advantage of Roselle's generative rosity.

I believe that Roselle is at the University of Delaware this morning being taken from a university that he truly loved, but was inhibited in carrying out his mission. He sees a brighter future in the East. And he will take it. I cannot blame him.

Hopefully Roselle will remain at UK through the next semester. If he wanted to be vindictive, he could slap the University by resigning immediately. At that, UK, in a slap the University by resigning immediately. At that, UK, in a search for a president, would be eaten in the budget wars at the General Assembly next spring. Thankfully, Roselle has not shone any sign of vindictiveness so far in his term. Since he does like UK, he will probably stay and represent UK in Frankfort. The 1990 General Assembly would be Roselle's one final stand. He could show the state what a brilliant man they are losing. And at the same time he would be giving one last gift to a University which knew what people in the rest of the state could not see. I hope these sentiments are unfounded, but I fear the contrary. Happy trails, David Roselle. Thank you for what you have accomplished to make this University a respected institution of higher learning, instead of allowing it to remain, as its reputation claimed it, a party school.

And thank, you for what you tried to do, but were unable to accomplish because of Kentucky's embarrassing bureaucracy.

√Going Out As A Winner. Jerry Claiborne. When UK football coach Jerry Claiborne announced his retireme Tuesday, he told UK fans that he was sorry his teams did not win more football games. Although Claiborne's record at UK was only 43-46-3, he led the nation in graduation rates last year and placed 68 players on the Southeastern Conference's academic honor roll. He may not have won any championships, but his integrity and high academic standards were a model for other college coaches.

Renaissance Of Student Participation? Roselle Rally. Just 25 years ago students were marching on administration building to remove presidents, but last Thursday some of UK's students marched on one to retain a president. The outpouring of support at Thursday's rally was an encouraging sign that students are willing to become involved in the upcoming session of the General Assembly and lobby for higher education's cause.

Japanese book about U.S. provokes concern in Washington

Only Japanese were supposed to read copies of an explosive new book, The Japan that Can Say

"No".

But members of Congress, business people and the CIA are reading boutleg translations, and hundreds of reprints are being chumed out on high-speed office copiers.

The book, written by Sony Chairman Akio Morita and Shintan a leading Japanese politician, characterizes the United States as a racist, economically stagnant country that can't deal with its own problems, let alone Japan's.

with its own problems, let alone Japan's.

The book's authors encourage Japan to stand up and say "No" to Uncle Sam's demands that Japan cuttail its exports and buy more U.S. goods. And it suggests the unthinkable: that Japan could change the world's balance of power by selling computer chip technology to the Soviet Union.

Japan recently rebuffed the Bush administration's pleas for freer trade by sending Washington a seven-point plan for fixing the U.S. economy. Japan told Americans to cut the budget deficit, spend more on public schools and stop businesses from focusing on short-term profits.

Most Japanese books are "apologies or softballs," said Pat Choate, chairman of the Congressional Economic Leadership Institute, a Washington think tank. Such talk, though, is unusually radical. Most majority of Japanese want to keep the U.S.-Japan relationship as friendly as possible.

Morita has seen U.S. business from the inside. His firm, Sony, owns CBS Records and made the biggest U.S. investment yet by a Japanese company when it bought Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc. for $3.4 billion this fall.

The upheaval was dramatized in the summit's final hours by the resignation of the East German leadership and the formation of a new government in Czechoslovakia that opposition leaders immediately denounced as too much like the old one.

Gorbachev said he was "encouraged and inspired" by the changes in Eastern Europe.

Bush said Gorbachev's acceptance of the changes there "lays to rest previous doctrines," under which the Soviet Union had asserted a right to intervene militarily in Eastern Europe.

Still, Gorbachev at one point said that he opposed "artificially" speeding up the process, a reference to proposals for the reunification of Germany — a plan strongly opposed by the Soviet Union.

"There were no surprises,"

On the issue of Central Amer-ica, where the United States has complained about the continued flow of Soviet-bloc arms to Marxist rebels in El Salvador, Bush said the United States will Bush said the United States will stand by its assertion that these weapons are still reaching the rebels — most likely being sup-plied by Moscow's allies in the region, Cuba and Nicaragua. "I will not be satisfied until total self-determination takes places through verifiably free elections in Nicaragua," Bush said.

Gorbachev said the Soviets also supported free elections in Nicaragua. But he said, "We have reaffirmed once again to the president that we have ceased arms shipments..."

Soviet economic, internal problems reason for improvement in relations

By RICHARD WHITMIRE
USA TODAY/Apple College

WASHINGTON — World peace is getting an ironic boost from superpower economic troubles — soap shortages in the Soviet Union and revenue shortages in the United States.

and revenue shortages in the United States.
Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has been candid about the economic pressures his nation faces: soap and sugar are rationed, falling oil prices have led to huge setbacks in foreign trade, and there are massive cleanup costs for the Chernobyl accident and Armenian earth-

By contrast, the American econo-my is relatively healthy. But due to my is relatively healthy. But due to a series of severely unbalanced bud-gets, President Bush faces unpleas-ant choices on cutting both civilian and military programs.

If those cuts aren't made, the an-nual payments made just to service the national debt — $222 billion his fiscal year — will rival the $300 billion defense budget. What Gorbachev is offering America is a way to make most of those cuts on the military side.

U.S. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney has proposed about $180 billion in cuts through 1994, saying the new political climate in Eastern Europe makes those cuts possible. But in fact, Cheney is packing his budget woes as a peace offensive — most of those billions would have come out of the budget anyway.

offensive — most of tuose tunions would have come out of the budget anyway.

More than half the Pentagon's budget is devoted to the defense of Western Europe, with roughly two soldiers stateside supporting each soldier stationed overseas. So the easiest way to win deep budget cuts is to bring home divisions, and then deactivate them.

After a meeting last Wednesday with NATO defense ministers, Cheney told reporters that the United States may consider "additional" troop withdrawals from Europe.

Unofficially, White House officials said they are ready to propose pulling an additional 100,000 American troops from Europe.

The current conventional arms control treaty, which calls for pulling 30,000 American troops from Europe, will save only about $2.9 billion a year. But if the Defense Department cuts an additional 190,000 support troops in the United States, the savings would swell between $5 billion and $9 billion, according to estimates by the Defense Budget Project, a private think tank.

Using those figures, pulling 100,000 Americans back from Europe could trigger the deactivation of an additional 200,000 support troops in the United States, and the annual savings would soar to be the states of the states of the states of the states and Soviet Union find themselves with economic incentives to move their budgets off a Cold War footing. in January, but he declined.
Lohman said the group will request a meeting again at Wilkinson's convenience to be held during January or February.
Wilkinson's press secretary,
Doug Alexander, said that the governor declined to meet with the students because he probably couldn't meet with them on the day they requested.

When asked if Wilkinson will When asked if Wilkinson will meet with students, Alexander said that "would depend on what they wanted to talk about." He said students would get the same consideration as any other person who wanted to speak with the governor.

The Board of Student Body Presidents will meet later this month to discuss lobbying strategies for the General Assembly, Lohman said. "Student leaders on this campus will be meeting this week to devise a plan to decide how to lobby." Lohman said. "We want to get them (the student body leaders) involved and keep them informed about what's going on."

UK trustee Larry Forgy said that if Wilkinson assures Roselle that if wilkinson assures Roselle that the supports higher education, Roselle may stay at UK.

"I think the governor can straighten all this up with a statement to the effect that he is not going to undermine David Roselle at any point during his tenure," Forgy said yesterday on WLEX-TV's "Your Government."

Forgy said a perception that Wilkinson will appoint UK trustees willing to remove Roselle also may be one of the reasons Roselle is considering the Delaware job. "Anyone with walking-around sense knows that a part of his (Roselle's) thought process with regard to leaving has to do with the perceived threat that the governor might stack the deck with individuals who would be interested in re-

UK trustee William E. Burnett of Lexington said that he supports Roselle, adding that he is unaware of any trustees who do not share to his feelings.

Trustee Jerome Stricker of Covington said that he supports Roselle, and he said that he thinks that Wilkinson also supports him.

Alexander said that Wilkinson is interested in higher education, and that universities did not receive the funding they requested during the last session because the state did not have the money. "It remains to be seen what we'll be able to do in this budget," Alexander said.

Other students, however, may fear life after college and put off graduation. Once procrastination is eliminated, stress levels are relieved, Nichols said.

Stress can be eliminated if handled properly, Nichols said.

If students recognize and address stress, they may be able to cope better the next time it arises, he said.
