

Senate allows Reagan to keep American forces in Lebanon

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted yesterday to permit President Reagan to keep 1,600 Marines in Lebanon for up to 18 months, turning aside warnings that the United States may be headed for an undeclared war like the one in Vietnam.

The vote was 54-46, with two Democrats joining 32 Republicans in approving the authorization sought by the GOP administration.

The measure was passed by the House on Wednesday, but must be returned there so that relatively minor differences between the two versions can be resolved.

The Senate turned down amendments to shorten the time period to six months, to impose the timetable of 60 to 90 days spelled out in the War Powers Act, and to restrict the Marines to the Beirut area.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said the administration has no plans to expand the mission of the Marines in Beirut, but that adopting any of the amendments would unravel the compromise worked out with the administration.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., whose amendment to restrict the Marines to Beirut was defeated 56-45, said its rejection "would cause many of us to wonder what the mission really is."

Baker, urging approval of the 18-month extension, said he had "grave doubts" about the wisdom of sending the Marines to Lebanon, but added, "They are committed, they are under fire, and it would be a tragic mistake if the Congress were to withdraw them."

Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said the administration has failed to provide a clear definition of the purpose of having the Marines in Beirut. He said he hopes the administration will do so.

The Senate version of the resolution contains provisions, not adopted by the House, calling for the president to report every three months instead of every six months and providing for speedy consideration of any later measures to bring the troops home. These could be accepted by the House or resolved in a conference committee.

Speech probes Latin economic crises

By STEPHANIE WALLNER
Senior Staff Writer

Michael Webb, assistant professor of economics, said the present crisis in Central American economy is part of a recurring crisis which began in the early part of the 20th century.

Webb's lecture, the fifth in a series on Central America, outlined the economic past of the region.

"In the colonial period (16th century to 17th century) the primary exports were cocoa, indigo, balsam, meat and leather," he said. "Most of the control was in the hands of the Hispanics."

Webb said by the late 18th century there were problems with Hispanics which divided the population into groups.

"The second period sees the rise in economic and political power of the landowners," Webb said.

"The third phase is a rise in the importance of the military," Webb said. There was also a boom in cotton, rubber and especially bananas, he said. "This led to an increase in wage of the poor, increase in importance of transportation and a tremendous improvement in communication."

In the '50s — and especially the '30s — there was a depressed demand for Central American exports. "The '50s met new competition and reduced relative demand," Webb said.

"The fourth period attempts to placate two interest groups," he said. "The urban working force and the middle class."

Webb said attempts by the Central American countries to industrialize were unsuccessful due to little or no technical skills and lack of financial resources.

A second attempt was made to industrialize in the '60s by trying to form a Central American Common Market. "It didn't seem to work all that well," Webb said.

The combined gross domestic product of the Central American countries and Panama were less than that of the state of Mississippi, he said.

In the fifth period, the '60s and '70s, there was a tremendous increase in export growth. "There was a growth rate of 9 1/2 percent annually," Webb said. The present growth rate is only 3 percent, he said.

Open house

UK Medical Center tries to project 'a healthy interest' in the public through displays, tours

Dr. Laurence Bean, College of Dentistry, and dental assistant Debbie Heise, demonstrate the technique of filling cavities.

By ANGELO B. HENDERSON
Senior Staff Writer

People attending the open house at the UK Medical Center today and tomorrow will be allowed to fill "teeth" at one of the numerous exhibits on display.

"We've got some exhibits in which people will be able to interact," said Dr. Donald T. Frazier, chairman of the exhibits subcommittee for the Medical Center's first open house. "The public is going to be allowed to try to fill a tooth. Of course this is a plastic model, but they have an opportunity to see what it is like."

There is also going to be an exhibit focusing on microsurgery, Frazier said. "You are going to see how difficult it is to sew under a microscope and what kind of manual dexterity is required."

"We have a healthy interest in you" is the theme of the event which starts this morning and continues until tomorrow evening.

"Our basic purpose for having this open house is to show people what we have to offer," said Dr. Dennis E. Kenady, chairman of the Medical Center Open House. Kenady said people will get a chance to see and experience parts of the Medical Center they would not be exposed to normally.

Basically, the open house will be composed of two parts, Frazier said.

"The first phase is a group of exhibits, about 80 of them," he said, "and here people will be able to come and see them and wander at their own pace."

"The second part of the open house is a tour through the hospital where we are going to show people some of the special things that we have," Frazier said.

Screenings can be taken of the public to check for problems with lung volume, blood pressure and diabetes, he said.

"It will not only be exhibits, but we will actually be showing our facilities and capabilities in the hospital. People actually go in the open heart operating room and see a heart lung machine and have people describing how it works," Kenady said.

"They'll kind of get an idea what it's like on the other side," he said. "We really want to educate the people of Lexington," he said, "by making them more aware of what we have to offer."

This is the first time the Medical Center has ever had an open house, Frazier said.

Calls from high schools and other educational facilities requesting tours come in to the hospital all the time, Frazier said.

"What this (open house) allows us to do is to combine it all — do it once — and hopefully satisfy a large number of people's needs and wishes to see what goes on at the Med Center," he said.

"We have approximately 4,000 students already signed up to come on Friday morning and I have no way of estimating the number of moms and dads that are going to come from the community and around the state," Frazier said.

"If we get 6,000 or 7,000 people, I would think we would have a rather successful open house," he said.

The idea of having individual group tours through the hospital came up, Frazier said, "but it turns out with the number of people coming in that is going to be rather impossible. You'd have a tour leaving about every 30 seconds or something like that to accommodate the people."

"So we're going to have a lot of people stationed along a tour route and sort of guiding people so they can flow fluidly through it," he said. "But we can't let them take too much time at each station — so in a sense it will be unstructured but sort of guided," he said.

People who attend the open house will also get a preview of the new Medical Plaza building which extends from the College of Nursing building, said Patrick L. Stone, director of the Medical Center Office of Public Affairs.

"This is the first function in the new Medical Plaza, but soon this building will be full of doctors' offices for outpatient clinics," Stone said.

Admission to the open house is free, Kenady said, and parking will be available in the Medical Plaza parking structure and the Commonwealth Stadium parking lot for no charge, with special buses running continuously both days.

Talking Heads to perform on campus

By JEFF DUNCAN
Reporter

"We got the Heads!"

A moment of silence fell over the room, followed by an outburst of joy. Bruce Kazee, Student Activities Board Concert Committee chairman, had just announced that the Talking Heads will appear at Memorial Coliseum on Oct. 18.

"It's a lot of fun taking an idea and making it into a working proposition," Kazee said. "We're here to bring the music in," which means ingenuity and a lot of hard work, he said.

The committee, which has over 70 members, organizes advertising and ushering, provides security and sets up the shows. "We run a tight ship," Kazee said.

Ideas for concerts originate within the committee itself, he said. "We told them (the members) to list five bands they would like to see at the University," Kazee said. "I went through every one of these and found the most mentioned bands."

Prices, dates, lengths of performances, opening acts, hospitality and seating arrangements are set in the contracts. John Herbst, director of Student Center services, makes sure the committee follows

Tickets to go on sale Monday

The Talking Heads will perform at Memorial Coliseum, Oct. 18.

Tickets for the reserved seating concert will go on sale at the Student Center ticket office, Oct. 5. Prices are $12 and $10. Only 5,818 seats will be available, said John Herbst, director of student activities.

through with its financial end, paying the group the day of the show, he said.

"I work with them (the committee) as an adviser," Herbst said. "My responsibility to the University is to negotiate contracts."

He also works with the committee as a watchdog, asking questions and making sure the concerts are well thought out. "There has to be somebody there saying, 'what if?'" he said.

Herbst said the Adam Ant concert last semester had him worried. Looking at record sales and the overall popularity of Adam Ant in Lexington, he was not sure it was a good idea.

Finally, Herbst was convinced and Memorial Coliseum was sold out except for 20 tickets.

The success of a concert depends not only on the popularity of the act, but also on publicity and advertising, which the committee does itself, Kazee said.

Sandra Lea, who is in charge of hospitality, said the committee sets up dressing rooms and provides food for the group before and after the show. "We make sure they have anything they need," Lea said.

Leon Redbone, who performed at this year's Homecoming concert, had to have black chairs and black towels — everything black. Adam Ant requested china plates and crystal glasses, Lea said.

Working on the committee, members have an opportunity to be backstage and meet the performers. Also, they can buy tickets without having to wait in line. This is as close as members come to getting paid, Herbst said.

Kazee said he thinks campus apathy is the biggest obstacle to the success of the concert committee. "The big 'A'," he said. "People don't realize for us even to exist, they have to show up."

But Kazee said he is not worried about poor attendance at the Talking Heads concert. And he is not showing up, either.

"We'll have some big, scary guys behind the barriers," he said.

Andropov issues statement criticizing American policies

MOSCOW (AP)— The Kremlin kept up its offensive against the Reagan administration yesterday, releasing the second harsh anti-U.S. statement in two days from President Yuri V. Andropov.

Yesterday, Tass, the official Soviet news agency, carried an Andropov statement that accused the United States and its allies of "conducting a policy of militarism and military diktat, flouting the standards of international law and morals and resorting to most shameful provocations."

"These forces seek to poison the international climate and create an atmosphere of distrust and enmity in interstate relations. Theirs is an adventurist, criminal policy. It is fraught with the danger of nuclear conflict and jeopardizes all peoples, their life, their security and their freedom," he said.

He made those remarks Wednesday during a meeting with South Yemen leader Ali Nasser Muhammad. But Tass did not report the meeting or the remarks until yesterday night, indicating Andropov wanted to assure that his Wednesday statement through Tass would receive undiluted world attention.

Mekong Delta
'Controversial' party celebrates patriotism

By ANDREW DAVIS
Staff Writer

Delta Tau Delta fraternity is sponsoring a "Mekong Delta" party — a celebration that is more "patriotic" than a remembrance of the Vietnam conflict, according to the Delta's president.

The party will start at 3:30 today at the fraternity's house on 1410 Audubon Ave.

And Paul Haybon, the fraternity's president, said he hopes the controversy that began last year has subsided.

The Mekong Delta is the southernmost eighth of Vietnam and was the center of some of the bloodiest fighting during the Vietnam Conflict.

And last year, Kakkie Urch, an economics freshman, wrote a letter to the Kernel expressing her disgust at the annual "Mekong Delta" party.

Urch's letter in the Oct. 5 issue of the Kernel said: "This week award for Uitimate Campus Bad Taste goes to the men of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity... Be sure to invite me to your next Mekong Delta Bash. I'll be sure to come properly attired — covered with sweat... and my best friend's blood."

Haybon, however, said Urch misunderstood the theme of the party. "Urch thought they were celebrating a bloody battle. It's a patriotic party, really."

"There was a lack of information last year," he said. "Personally, I'd like the name of the party changed. I wouldn't object, because people just don't understand. I don't feel guilty though."

The Mekong Delta party was originated by the Delta Tau Delta fraternity at Oklahoma University during the Vietnam Conflict, fraternity member Jack Smith explained in a Oct. 11, 1982 Kernel letter.

"It was designed as a going away party for the brothers who had been drafted into the service of the United States," he said. "It was planned as a tribute to those brave men."

This year, members of the fraternity hope the controversy is over.

"We are making a look-out tower for the party," Doug Smith, Delta Tau Delta member, said. "We'll have some Blackhawks (cargo helicopters) fly over, plus a cannon that will be fired once every half-hour."

"We'll also have a small howitzer, and maybe some F-4 flyboys," Smith said.

"We'll be talking about careers, and there might be some recruiting. I know they did that in the past, but I'm not sure about this year," Haybon said. "It (the party) is to show that we are regular people who like to party, too."

"I just hope that we won't be offending vets."

Reagan 'deluding' himself by refusing to fire Watt

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — One of the most conservative Republicans in the House said yesterday that President Reagan and his aides are "deluding themselves" by declaring the case closed over Interior Secretary James Watt.

If Watt isn't fired, the administration will face a series of embarrassing votes in Congress condemning him, said Rep. Newt Gingrich. Gingrich said he could see no "significant numbers" of House supporters left behind Watt.

But at the White House, presidential aides continued to pronounce the issue settled over Watt's description of five advisers as "a black... a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

"The Watt matter is behind us as far as the White House is concerned," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, echoing recent comments from Reagan aides. They have said Reagan considers Watt's apology sufficient and will not seek his resignation.

At the Interior Department, Watt's aides were not commenting on a published report that Watt considered his status so precarious over the weekend that he had prepared a letter of resignation.

They too attempted to close off further discussion, refusing to discuss the extraordinary no-confidence resolutions in the House and Senate. Both measures call for Reagan to fire Watt.

"We are not commenting further," said Doug Baldwin, Watt's chief spokesman. "I see no further purpose to be made by commenting on an issue the president has said is closed."

But Gingrich became the latest Republican to lead, sending the president a letter yesterday declaring, "Watt's sick joke is a slur on millions of Americans."

"Retaining him in office clearly implies an indifference to or insensitivity about fundamental human decency," Gingrich told the president.

"This kind of behavior is not tolerable to conservatives. I don't think you defend your allies when they do things that are indefensible."

Rep. Newt Gingrich

He predicted the administration would lose both in the House and the Senate on the resolutions demanding Watt's dismissal for "conduct unbecoming a senior Cabinet member."

Gingrich, a leading conservative spokesman in the House, said that previous backers of the interior secretary realized "this kind of behavior is not tolerable to conservatives. I don't think you defend your allies when they do things that are indefensible."

He said the longer Reagan waits to dismiss Watt "the greater the liabilities he will personally suffer."

In the week since Watt made his wise-crack about a coal advisory panel, Republicans ranging from the president's daughter, Maureen, to former President Gerald Ford have attacked Watt.

Lady Kats down Texas Tech in 4 games with starters, bench

By JASON WILLIAMS
Senior Staff Writer

The name of the game is still mental. The Lady Kat volleyball team, now 18-2 and ranked fifth and sixth in different national polls, defeated Texas Tech 15-5, 14-16, 15-9, 15-3 last night in Memorial Coliseum. As the scores indicate, the play was anything but consistent.

"It had its ups and downs," Janice Hudson, Texas Tech head coach, said.

In the first game the Kats looked like they were on their way to a Texas blowout. Freshman Jill Ackerman came off the bench in a big way to lead the team along with fiery 5-6 hitter Tanya Diamond.

The Red Raiders, 19-12, had serious defensive problems while the Kats often settled for less-than-thunderous spikes to get their points.

"It's very difficult to play volleyball when you can't pass the ball," Hudson said. "In the first game all they had to do was get the ball over on the serve and we'd mess up."

It did stop for a while. The second game was the opposite of the first, as a group of mostly reserve Kats spent a lot of time chasing the ball around on their side of the court.

"Obviously we had too many reserves in," Marilyn McReavy, associate head coach, said. "We McReavy and partner Mary Jo Peppier got overconfident as coaches as to what we could do after that first game."

The Kats led by as much as 13-6 before Tech scored the next eight points. After five side-outs, Ackerman's serve resulted in a four-fault violation by Tech to tie the score at 14-14, but the Raiders held on for the win.

The Kats outscored Tech 6-1 at the start of the third game, but the Raiders took advantage of UK errors to tie at the seven, eight, and nine-point marks. Veteran players Lori Erpenbeck and Kim Martinsen returned to the lineup, and Marsha Bond took charge on the nets to preserve the win.

"We're still trying to get our players to deal with stress," McReavy said.

No matter how they panicked, though, the Kats still came up with several good digs and actively pursued the wild balls.

"The difference from their team over our team is that their team goes for the ball," Hudson said. "Sometimes our players would just stand around, but Kentucky always tries even when they can't get it. My team didn't always do that."

The fourth game went the way most volleyball observers would have expected the match to go as UK rolled to a win capped off by an ace by Ackerman.

Freda Simpson, Sandra Lunney and Chris Stellberger starred off the bench for UK as everyone saw ample playing time, most noticeably Ackerman and fellow Indiana freshman Lisa Dausman.

Senior Karolyn Kirby was used mostly in a setter role in a 5-1 offense last night due to a nagging shoulder injury. The team normally goes with Kirby and Irene Smyth in a two-setter system, with Kirby concentrating on hitting. Smyth saw less playing time as other players were brought in to compensate for the squad's reduced hitting power.

McReavy said the problem started at the beginning of the season when Kirby was firing on teams such as San Diego State and Illinois State.

"She was just hitting too many balls," McReavy said. "The rest of the team will have to come on. We can't just go to two hitters all the time."

McReavy and Peppier will be looking to experiment more with their team today and tomorrow at the Tennessee Classic as the Kats take on three unranked teams.

On Sunday, UK hosts LSU at 2 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum. From there they have road matches the rest of the week, including the Purdue Classic featuring Purdue and Nebraska — two top ten teams.

Tulane quarterback ineligible

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane quarterback Jon English lost his court battle yesterday to play college football and only an order from a higher court can put him into tomorrow's game against Vanderbilt in the Superdome.

The ruling by Civil District Judge Revis Ortique rejected a plea for a temporary injunction against the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which had ruled English was ineligible because he violated the student transfer rule.

Ortique refused to grant English an injunction against the NCAA and Tulane.

"I'm disappointed, of course," English said.

He learned of the ruling at a practice in the Superdome with Tulane, where his father, Wally, is head football coach.

"I think I relied on the NCAA rules that said I would be eligible. I did everything that I was supposed to do," the younger English said.

"The judge interpreted it. He said that those rules were very arbitrary

... but, you know, to me they were very clear."

Ortique's decision climaxed a fifth day of testimony which not only involved Jon English's football career, but also potential NCAA sanctions against Tulane that could cost the school hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Lawyers for Jon English said the fight will be carried to the 4th Circuit Court of Appeal today with a plea that Ortique's decision be suspended pending the outcome.

Senate endorsement of Lebanese forces: victory or defeat?

As the American people continue to debate the necessity of the presence of U.S. Marines in Lebanon, the President and Congress have come to a compromise concerning what to do for now.

The compromise they have reached is to leave the forces there for up to 18 months, and depending on where you stand, it is a victory for justice or a defeat for humanity.

Yesterday the Senate voted 54-46 to permit President Reagan to keep 1,600 Marines in Lebanon, already passed by a vote of 270-161 in the House. While the votes were divided and debate somewhat heated, the results were mostly what everyone expected.

Opponents of the Marines staying in Lebanon argue that we are reliving Vietnam, and considering the history of the area it is not a careless metaphor. It is also clear, however, that President Reagan is determined to maintain a military presence there.

Just as the most recent cease-fire did not affect Congress's dedication to maintaining the military option, Reagan's recent address to the United Nations calling for peace did not mean he would hesitate to utilize American armed forces.

When the bullets stop flying in Lebanon, very few people sell their bullet-proof vests. There have been hundreds of cease-fires in the area, and the only one still holding is this week's.

The Senate turned down amendments to the war powers compromise that would have shortened the time period to six months, imposed the timetable of 60 to 90 days spelled out in the War Powers Act or restricted the Marines to the Beirut area.

While Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said the administration has no plans to expand the mission of the Marines in Beirut, the defeat of the amendments gives lie to such statements. It may be that there is no date planned, but there are doubtless numerous plans already formulated and ready to be implemented when they become "necessary," like the defense of Souk el-Gharb became last week.

It is likely that "plans" have been made for every foreseeable turn of events, and that the Marines and sixth fleet may find themselves in a war without Congress voting on it. And, as stated earlier, the preparation and implementation of various plans by Reagan and Congress means different things depending on where you stand.

For the struggling Lebanese army — which has already received military support from the offshore fleet — maintenance of the "peacekeeping forces" is clearly a victory. They are standing on the front lines.

For politicians and presidents, standing behind podiums and neckties, it may be safely acclaimed as a "bipartisan compromise" or a "necessary measure."

But for the Marines already killed, and for those still on duty — for those standing guard over another country's war — it is something else altogether.

Strong stands

I would like to express my support in the upcoming election for Martha Layne Collins. She is by far the best qualified candidate for the job. Her achievements include being a clerk on the state supreme court, and being elected Lieutenant Governor in 1979. During the past four years as a Lieutenant Governor, she presided over the state senate and has been persuasive in helping Gov. Brown to get legislation passed. She also filled in for Gov. Brown when he was in the hospital and did a fine job.

Collins has shown Kentucky they need a strong governor by taking strong stands on controversial issues. Among them, she favors the death penalty for murder cases, a 500-room new minimum security state prison and a stronger state police force.

Collins also has a program for bringing new jobs to Kentucky and improving education. Her Republican opponent, Jim Bunning, has one, too. However, Jim Bunning says that in order to attract new jobs and business, we must sell the state. Collins has repeatedly stated that "Kentucky is not for sale at any price and we must improve it in order to get new jobs here." Collins favors competency testing for all new prospective teachers before they can be certified, and also favors competency testing for students before they can be promoted to the next grade.

Collins' record in government speaks for itself. Her record shows that she is the best candidate to succeed John Y. Brown as our new governor. I urge all students and registered voters to cast their votes for Martha Layne Collins in the November election.

'Murderous' torture standard for PLO

The anti-semitic article in the Kernel signed by the Arab Student Organization has blatantly distorted the facts concerning the Sabra and Shatila massacre. The truth is that the Arab butchers were slaughtering each other in the camps and the Israeli Army fired on them to stop the bloodshed.

Guest OPINION

After the evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization from Beirut, the PLO terrorists continued their criminal raids on the Lebanese population and the Israeli Army while hiding in the Sabra and Shatila camps. Although Gen. Ariel Sharon tried to persuade Reagan's Cabinet to get the Lebanese Army to enter the camps and put things in order, the State Department in efforts to try and destabilize the situation and provoke the collapse of the "stubborn" Begin government, refused to negotiate.

The only option was to allow the militia in. When they entered, the PLO opened fire, hitting behind women and children. This is typical of PLO tactics to cause civilian casualties and use it for propaganda. For example: "When the Israelis came," said one middle-aged woman, "the Palestinian fighters took their guns and placed them next to our homes, schools, apartment blocks and hospitals. We pleaded with them to take their guns away but they refused. They thought this would protect them." (The Times, June 19, 1982).

It is time to condemn those who are really responsible for the massacre, the PLO and the Christian Militia. During its seven year reign in Lebanon, the PLO, backed by Russia and Syria, slaughtered over 100,000 Moslems and Christians in Lebanon until the Israeli army moved in to liberate Lebanon from the murderers.

Interviews with eyewitnesses, printed in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner July 13, 1982, portray a horrible picture of PLO atrocities in Lebanon. Murders, rapes and mutilations by the PLO became commonplace in Lebanon. The interview revealed that the PLO frequently split their victims in two by tying them to cars which are then driven in opposite directions.

A Lebanese doctor, an eyewitness of the PLO tortures, says: "I know of cases of people being thrown into acid tanks by PLO terrorists and reduced to unrecognizable masses of porous bone. Numerous young girls came to me for abortions after being raped by PLO mobsters. . . . I treated people with arms severed by PLO shelling and men whose testicles had been cut off in torture sessions. The victims, more often than not, were not Christians, but Moslems. I saw men — live men — dragged through the streets by fast-moving cars to which they were tied by their feet."

Anyone who visits southern Lebanon these days meets boys with missing fingers; cut off by the PLO who saw them as a fighting potential for the Haddad forces.

Interviews with the mayor of the Muslim village, Burj Bahi, who calls the Palestinians "Terrorist Nazis," reveal the horrible pictures of the PLO reign in Lebanon. Television interviews showed the Lebanese people showing the Israeli soldiers with rice to show their joy and deep sympathy for those who liberated southern Lebanon from the murderers, PLO and Syria. In many instances Israeli soldiers actually sacrificed their lives to spare civilians in Lebanon.

Since 1967, thousands of Jewish civilians all over the world have been killed and mutilated by the Palestinian Nazi terrorists who were specially trained by the Russian KGB to organize a worldwide anti-Jewish genocide. This includes the slaughter of the Jewish Olympic team at the 1972 Munich games; the attack on the Israeli kindergarten, which resulted in the stabbing of two-year-old children by the PLO; and the bombing and destroying of Israeli school buses loaded with children. Supported by Russia, the PLO has carried out over 9,500 attacks on the civilian population of Israel and abroad since 1967.

Numerous documents found in the PLO torture chambers in Beirut (the chambers were equipped with sophisticated Russian torture equipment) and PLO ammunition dumps, show that Beirut was the center of all Russian-trained and financed terrorist organizations in the world — that seek death and destruction of hundreds of thousands of civilians. This includes the Italian Red Brigade, German Bader Meinhoff Gang, Irish Republican Army, Bank Terrorists, Japanese Red Army, Nicaraguan Sandinistas and many others. The documents also revealed that Russia was going to use the PLO establishment in Lebanon as a base for invasions of Israel and the whole Middle East.

Thus, the courageous Israeli action in Lebanon against a much more numerous combined Syrian-Palestinian force saved the Lebanese people from their constant torment and saved the Western countries from the imminent Soviet imperialistic aggression in the Middle East.

UK education: more party than Plato?

A class has come and another since the 1982-83 New York Times Selective Guide to Colleges called UK a "wise choice" for anyone "who wants a college education without working too hard to get it."

James A. STOLL

The Times' report on our beloved University was less than complimentary. It was also incorrectly reported — or so claimed Kernel editors who discovered a large number of the Times' questionnaires were never filled out or turned in.

Such are the more exciting moments of writing news. And such are the possible errors made when undertaking the study and rating of over 250 colleges — even if you happen to work for the New York Times.

The plain fact is that while some colleges may be better than others, any university is going to give you just what you put into it.

UK has a right to be displeased with the Guide's description, but there is little we can do. We must rely upon readers of the Guide to realize they are only getting an overview, and not all the facts. Only the actual taking of classes can tell you what a teacher, department or university has to offer.

The point of all this is not to revive a horse that has mostly decomposed by now, but rather to allow fans of the controversy to hear some of the more pointed rhetoric the Times threw together. In the news stories and editorials of the time, there were only a few — now famous — quotes, but reading the entire entry builds an appreciation for the Guide's editor, Edward B. Fiske.

It is obvious Fiske is a man who enjoys his work. And so much of the entry is accurate or nearly so that it makes one wonder just how many of those questionnaires the Times did get.

"As are not hard to come by, and homework need not take up more than a few hours a week." No comment. I have instructors, too, and no burning need to encourage more homework.

On sports: "Games, which are always sold out, tend to be the biggest cultural events on campus, and it is a rare professor — and one living in another world — who will schedule a test on the day after a game."

Some of you may recall last year when UK and UL finally got together in Knoxville to settle a somewhat important score. The director of the play I was in at the time was one of the rarer types, and scheduled a rehearsal for that very Saturday morning. It was the only time in my collegiate career that I have seen a cast and crew of a college production form a union.

Rehearsal, it was eventually compromised, would let out 15 minutes before the opening tip-off. Who says management can't be reasonable under pressure?

I can also vouch for the Guide's appraisal of off-campus housing: "Those unable to get a room (on campus) must seek off-campus housing in the 'student ghetto,' as the area most students live in is called. The houses are crowded, expensive, poorly maintained by landlords and oftentimes roach-infested."

Yup, yup, yup. I can relate to that. "Another serious problem is security. One female senior reports that she is not the only person who carries mace with her at all times. Whether it be in the stacks of the library late at night or out on the street, campus security is not what it should be."

Some of this, far from being inaccurate opinion, is local history. While M. I. King Library's stacks remain relatively crime-free, rape has been no laughing matter elsewhere on campus, and various steps have been taken to reduce the risks for female students. Carrying mace is only one method of self-defense being practiced at UK, and all women are encouraged by the administration to take precautions.

Fiske goes on like a reviewer who can't think of enough tongue-in-cheek criticisms to satisfy himself. "The student body (tends) to be politically indifferent, indeed apathetic. . . . concerned more with 'getting by' than with learning, students are looking for a good time at this school. An education along the way is a welcome bonus.

"(Fraternity and sorority) members dominate student government and their extracurricular activities. Their beer blasts are famous." Some of this, of course, is local legend.

But the Guide reverts to opinion in its concluding paragraph: "At the University of Kentucky the atmosphere is social and sometimes academic — but never intellectual. . . . And that suits the students just fine."

After the initial amusement wears off — it will fade much faster for some than for others — it is likely that the average UK student will find the Guide's comments offensive. Knowing there may have been some questionable procedures in the surveying doesn't do much to cool the situation.

In the final analysis, it is only one page in one book about lots of colleges. As Garfield might say, "Big fat hairy deal."

Still, it is interesting to note that apathy at UK is virtually a tradition when it comes to Student Government Association elections and campus issues.

It is similarly noteworthy that professors — especially well-liked ones — do tend to schedule around major UK basketball or football games, though not major political addresses or other more cultural campus activities.

And when was the last time you saw two guys discussing Descartes or Thoreau over their 12 of Miller Lite?

Think about it. James A. Stoll is a theater arts junior and Kernel editorial assistant.

Before We Put You In Charge Of The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Equipment, We Put You Through The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Training.

It takes more than 16 months of intensive training to become a fully qualified officer in the Nuclear Navy. You begin with four months of leadership training. Then as a Navy officer you get a full year of graduate-level training unavailable anywhere else at any price.

Navy training is based on more than 1900 reactor-years of experience. Right now the Navy operates over half the nuclear reactors in America. And the Navy's nuclear equipment is the most sophisticated in the world. That's why your Navy training is and must be the most sophisticated in the world.

As an officer in the Nuclear Navy, you have decision-making authority immediately. You get important management responsibility fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so does your responsibility.

Your training and experience place you among the country's most qualified professionals. (No surprise)

That most of the men who operate the reactors in private industry started in the Nuclear Navy.)

It takes more time and more effort to become an officer in the Nuclear Navy. But the rewards are greater, too.

The rewards can begin as early as your junior year in college. Qualify, and the Navy will pay you approximately $1000/month while you finish school.

After four years, with regular promotions and salary increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned every year. More responsibility, more money, more future.

So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, and you want to know more about a future in nuclear power, fill in the coupon.

Today's Nuclear Navy is an opportunity like no other in the world.
