SGA bills to help parents

By HEIDI PROBST
Staff Writer

The Student Government Association passed two bills Wednesday night that will make coming to class more convenient for students with children.

One of the bills provides $1,000 for a Child Care Grant Fund. The money will be used from the $1,000 loaned to Radio Free Lexington when it is paid back this summer.

The other bill will allocate $120 for SGA executive branch member Ken Walker and Susan Beyers, director for academic support services for adults, to conduct a survey about a child care center.

SGA President Cyndi Weaver said she hopes the $1,000 will be used as a base for the Child Care Grant Fund.

"We're hoping that this is just a seed and the foundation will become bigger than that," she said.

A child care facility had been part of Weaver's platform when she campaigned for the SGA presidency last year.

Weaver said she had gotten information from a 1983 University report that indicated a tremendous need to finance a child care facility. She said the study showed there were 900 potential users of child care services.

In January a Child Care Committee was established to be responsible for the Child Care Grant Fund and fund-raising projects.

Student parents who demonstrate a financial need and a desire to attend UK will be eligible for the financial assistance.

The minimum amount people will be able to receive from a scholarship would be $400. The total amount of funding the foundation receives will determine how many scholarships will be granted.

Walker, who is chairman of the child care committee, said a lot of planning has gone into the establishment of the committee and its services.

Walker and Weaver recently spent four days in Monterey, Calif., at the National Coalition for Campus Child Care Conference, which gave them "a good direction," Walker said.

Weaver said UK has been a member of the coalition since 1984, but this was the first time she had visited a child care conference.

"We were able to speak with people firsthand and ask about what kind of measures they were taking," Weaver said. "It was an information swap."

Some of the lectures the two attended gave information on liabilities concerning the operation of a child care center and on how to keep costs low for users of the facility.

Walker said the survey will determine "what things we want to know about conducting a child care service."

"We hope the survey will tell whether students express a need and what they can afford," Beyers said. "This is just another wave. I hope something does happen."

Lottery passes final obstacle in Senate

By MARK R. CHELLGREN

FRANKFURT — The Senate yesterday set the stage for a final resolution to the lingering question of whether there should be a state lottery in Kentucky.

By a vote of 26-12, three more votes than needed, the Senate passed a bill to place the question on the November general election ballot on whether the Kentucky Constitution should be changed to allow a lottery.

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson, the most vocal and visible supporter of a lottery in Kentucky, will not even get a chance to sign the measure, which goes directly to Secretary of State Bremer Ehrler to place on the ballot.

Wilkinson was ecstatic about the Senate vote and predicted overwhelming support for the amendment at the polls.

Merit Day recruiting tool for UK

By HEIDI PROBST
Staff Writer

Merit Day weekend will bring outstanding high school students to campus today as UK continues its recruitment for the 1988-89 academic year.

"The Merit Day Program is an effort to attract top-ranked students to the University," said Don Witt, director of advising conferences.

"We're wanting to attract the better students and show them that they can have the best of both worlds (at UK) concerning academics and organizations."

University Counseling and Testing Center Director Mike Nichols said that the Merit Day Program will benefit UK in several ways.

"Merit Day gives the University an opportunity to meet some exceptional students whose presence on this campus can enrich the classroom and extracurricular life of UK," Nichols said.

Witt said he invited 2,500 high school seniors who have a minimum 2.0 grade point average and scored at least a 27 on their American College Test.

He said almost 170 students will participate in the program this weekend and 210 will take part in the April 1-2 program. This has been the most to participate in the five years that the program has existed, he said.

Witt said that past Merit Programs have been successful, as about 95 percent of the students who have attended past weekends decide to enroll in the University.

This year's program starts with a reception at 5:30 p.m. and follows with placement tests in calculus, English and a foreign language. While the students are taking the placement exams their parents are encouraged to attend an information and entertaining workshop at the Fine Arts Building.

The following day students will have an opportunity to become more familiar with academic and campus life at UK. Students will also get the opportunity to meet faculty and staff members, Witt said.

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Donald Sands will welcome the students and their parents along with Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Art Gallaher and UK President David Roselle.

Roselle said this year's freshman class at UK has 72 valedictorians and 99 Governor's Scholars.

Bill Swinford, a political science senior, will speak about his experiences as a UK student.

"We'll emphasize all that the University has to offer being a larger institution," said Swinford, a College for Academic Excellence.

Swinford said he will also speak about the "numerous majors that UK offers to cover every interest, such as the departments and colleges that are especially strong."

UK ends year, Kansas City mission, 80-74

By TODD JONES
Sports Editor

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The red eyes of Winston Bennett told the story. The "mission" for the Kentucky Wildcats ended last night — unaccomplished.

UK's trip to the Final Four came screeching to a halt in the semifinals of the Southeast Region at the Birmingham Civic Center. The Villanova Wildcats upset the Wildcats from Lexington, 80-74.

A nine-game winning streak for UK came to an abrupt end. So did the careers of five seniors.

"It was painful sitting there watching the game and the clock at the same time," UK senior Rob Lock said. "Every tick, I knew it was gonna be my last."

Kentucky finished the season at 27-6. Upstart Villanova advanced to the regional finals with a 24-12 mark.

The clock struck midnight on UK when the final buzzer sounded. But signs of the end came much earlier.

Villanova used a 14-3 run to grab a 43-32 halftime lead. The advantage grew to 13 and a furious UK rally could get the Cats no closer than four the rest of the way.

"We had a big hole to climb out of and tonight it was a little too deep," Lock said.

Some hot shooting by Villanova from the field and line made sure of that. Villanova hit 59.7 percent of its field goals and all 17 of its free throws.

"I was surprised by how well they shot the ball," Bennett said. The red-hot underdog attack was led by guard Doug West with 20 and forward Mark Plinsky with 16. Point guard Kenny Wilson chipped in 15 points and six assists.

Kentucky got its offense from the outside with sophomore guard Rex Chapman tossing in a career-high 30 points. UK's inside attack was negated by foul trouble.

Bennett and Lock were both saddened with four fouls throughout the second half. Bennett played just seven of the final 30 minutes. He picked up his fourth foul 42 seconds into the final half when he slapped Plinsky on the wrist.

"You lose a little confidence," Chapman said of the loss of Bennett. "Winston's such a great player you want to have him in there."

"My foul trouble hurt us tragically," Bennett said.

It was Bennett's third foul that started the hole for UK. It occurred with 4:42 left in the first half and the game tied at 20. Bennett went to the bench and Villanova went on its 14-3 run.

North, Poindexter plead 'not guilty' to conspiracy raps

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former national security aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter and two businessmen pleaded innocent yesterday to charges they ran the Iran-contra affair as a vast criminal conspiracy and defrauded the government of $17 million.

One by one, the defendants were called before U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell at their arraignment, and asked by courtroom clerk Barbara Montgomery, "How do you wish to plead?"

"Not guilty," replied Poindexter, President Reagan's former national security adviser; and North, a top assistant to Poindexter.

"Not guilty, your honor," responded retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim, who controlled the money and procured the arms for the once-secret Iran-contra operation.

All four defendants were released on their personal recognizance and told to report weekly by telephone to a pre-trial agency. Although criminal defendants are often asked to surrender their passports, Gesell said he would not impose that condition.

Dressed in conservative business suits, the four men made their first appearance in court since a federal grand jury convened by Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh 14 months ago, handed down a 23-count indictment March 16.

North, retiring as a Marine lieutenant colonel May 1, and Poindexter, a retired Navy rear admiral, embraced before the judge entered the crowded courtroom.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to defraud the United States "by deceitfully... organizing, directing and concealing" a program of support for the Nicaraguan contras rebels at a time such assistance was banned.

The indictment also said the defendants "knowingly did embezzle, steal and convert to their own use" part of the proceeds generated by the sale of weapons to Iran.

Although no exact figure was specified in the theft count, it was reported elsewhere in the indictment that the arms sales generated proceeds of some $30 million while the government was paid only $12.2 million for the weapons.

Gesell set no trial date but said he would hold an early hearing to determine whether evidence gathered by Walsh is free of taint and therefore admissible.

All the defendants except Secord testified before Congress under a grant of immunity from prosecution, preventing Walsh from using any of that testimony.

Walsh has said FBI agents assigned to his staff made sure that he wasn't exposed to any news stories involving the hearings or later developments. As he obtained his independent evidence, he filed it under seal with the court. Walsh has the burden of proving that his evidence was not tainted.

Gesell ordered written motions on the taint question to be filed by April 7, and set a preliminary proceeding for April 12. A full hearing would likely be held later in April, he said.

Walsh pointed out he has hired retired federal judge Herbert Stern to argue such motions, and said he was ready to move ahead.

Gesell told the lawyers he would not allow a civil suit arising from the Iran-contra affair, in which Secord and Hakim are defendants, to interfere with the criminal case. The civil trial had been set to begin June 27.

Outside the courtroom, a crowd of demonstrators gathered to show support for the defendants. Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, called on President Ronald Reagan to issue "an immediate pardon" of North and Poindexter.

As Poindexter stood by silently, attorney Richard Becker said, "We are going to vigorously contest this case with all our strength and might."

UK's 14-5 win over Marshall bittersweet

Staff reports

Last night the UK baseball team finally ended its losing ways on the road, but the victory turned out to be a bittersweet one.

Kentucky, who had dropped seven of its previous eight away games, broke out of that slump in grand fashion last night and pasted Marshall 14-5 in Morgantown, W. Va.

But the big story though was the loss of UK All-American Chris Estep. Estep tore open his right forearm when he caught it on the five-foot, chain-length fence chasing down a fly ball.

Estep, a junior, will miss probably seven to 10 days. But the UK players said it could have been a lot worse.

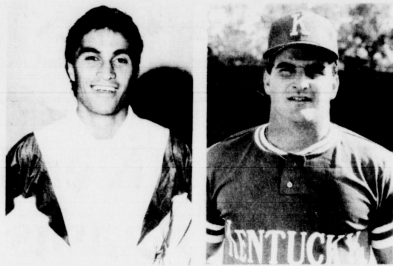

"At first we were really worried," said Wildcat Roger Gum. "But I think he'll recover really quick. There's a good chance he'll be back next weekend."

Kentucky, 9-9, broke out of a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning when shortstop Billy White knocked in two runs with a double.

Marshall, who dropped to 12-5, was held to just a pair of runs in five innings by UK starter Jim Law, now 1-0.

UK third baseman Darren Riemann contributed to the winning cause with a pair of home runs. Riemann hit a solo shot in the sixth and followed that with a two-run blast in the seventh.

Tom Deller worked three innings of middle relief for the Wildcats. Jon Hudson finished the game for UK, who will play only their fourth home game of the season today.

Kentucky will take on Youngstown State at the Shively baseball field at 4 p.m. this afternoon.

UK will get back to Southeastern Conference play Saturday and Sunday. The Wildcats take on Alabama, 12-8 overall and 1-5 in the SEC. The Saturday doubleheader will start at 1 p.m. and the single game Sunday will start at 2 p.m.

UK tennis rolls on

The UK men's tennis team advanced to the second round of the Blue-Gray Tennis Championships by knocking off No. 24 ranked San Diego, 5-2, in Montgomery, Ala.

UK, fresh off a West Coast sweep of Pepperdine and UCLA, improved to 11-3 on the season.

Leading the way for the 9th-ranked Wildcats were All-Americans Greg Van Emburgh, Mario Rincon and Rich Benson. Van Emburgh, a senior, defeated David Stewart 6-4, 6-4.

Rincon, a junior, downed the Toreros' Scott Patridge 6-4, 6-3, at the No. 2 singles spot. Benson slipped past San Diego's J.R. Edwards 4-6, 7-6, 6-4.

"We really made some mistakes out there at the end of the half," Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton said. "You get 11 points behind Villanova and it's really hard to catch them."

UK fell 13 behind at 49-36 when Plansky nailed a jumper with 18:07 left to play. But UK roared back behind Chapman and Lock to slice the deficit to seven in less than three minutes.

Chapman drilled a long three-pointer at 8:54 to pull Kentucky within 63-59. Moments later, the Cats had a chance to close the gap to three but Chapman missed a hurried jumper on a fast break.

Villanova withstood that UK charge and built the lead back to 72-64. Only 3:47 remained.

A Chapman three-pointer the old-fashioned way got Kentucky within 72-67. It seemed UK was alive again. The signs of life were brief.

Villanova answered by patiently working the ball around. With one second on the shot clock and just 2:24 in the game, Plansky banked in a 15-foot jumper over Chapman.

"Plansky's shot nailed the coffin on us," Lock said.

Two Bennett free throws made it 74-70 but Villanova refused to fold. A West jumper and four free throws later and the season was history for Kentucky.

"It hurts," Chapman said. "We

No surrender After 15 years and nine LPs, Bruce Springsteen is still boss

Erik REECE

Fourteen years ago when Bruce Springsteen played a small crowd for coming out. "Our records don't sell that well," he told them (see sidebar), "and sometimes we're lucky to play in front of 100 people."

Tomorrow night, it will be the 23,000 people who crowd into Rupp Arena to see the Boss on his Tunnel of Love Express Tour who will be the lucky ones — lucky enough to secure a ticket.

Tomorrow's concert, which begins at 8 p.m., is the only date Springsteen will be playing in this region. As a result, the show sold out in 58 minutes. Unfortunately, a lot of the people who got tickets during that time were scalpers.

If there's one act in the music industry that scalpers can rely on, it's Springsteen. When he's in concert, fans know what they're going to get for their money — three to four hours plus of solid entertainment. Scalpers, of course, know this too and know that Springsteen's devoted following will pay to see him play.

And if Springsteen's early albums didn't sell that well, his later ones have certainly made up for lost time and lost listening. Since his first, breakthrough album, Born to Run, a Springsteen album has rarely been absent from Billboard's top-100.

As the Kernel's 1974 review suggests, Springsteen got tagged early as "the new Dylan." His first album, Greetings From Asbury Park, N.J., was a potpourri of literary allusions that seemed to have been extracted from the Norton Anthology of British Literature (Springsteen spent a semester in junior college). The album's songs were written on an acoustic guitar and the sound was heavy folk.

However, Springsteen must not have cared much for the Dylan comparisons, because his next album, The Wild, the Innocent, and the E Street Shuffle, left behind his symbolist leanings and headed instead toward visceral emotion and a cultivating knack for storytelling. Only one song, "The Wild Billy Circus Story," harked back to the Dylanesque world of sword-swallowers and side-show whores.

From those two albums, the only songs that still consistently remain in Springsteen's live repertoire are "Rosalita" and "Spirits in the Night."

A two-year silence followed Wild and Innocent before Springsteen stunned a Bottom Line crowd with his rock anthem, "Born to Run." After 10 straight dates at the Bottom Line, New York critics knew that Springsteen had come into his own as an artist. It was around this time that rock journalist Jon Landau prognosticated he had seen rock's future "and its name is Bruce Springsteen."

However, it was on his 1980 double-album, The River that Springsteen's songwriting reached the level of precision that he has sustained since. With hard-hitting emotions and constrained sentiment,

Not a new Bob Dylan Springsteen's versatility shines

By JOEL D. ZAKEM
Kernel Staff Writer

"I'm not going to answer any more questions about Bob Dylan or anyone else. If you want to talk about my music, fine. If not, why bother?"

Hardly the best way to begin an interview, but understandable. Since the release of his first album early last year, Greetings From Asbury Park, N.J., Bruce Springsteen has lived under the shadow of a few reviews which called him "the new Bob Dylan."

BUT THE audience at the Student Center Tuesday found out that Springsteen is an original and individual performer. After the concert, I had a chance to talk to him about his music and his feelings.

Springsteen listed his influences as "everyone" — pointing out such diverse people as Wilton Pickett, Bob Dylan and Benny Goodman. In short, he said, everything he heard while growing up served to formulate his music.

THAT is why the old songs performed — "Walkin' the Dog" and "Shogun" — were performed. Springsteen stated, "That's the music I grew up with."

The old songs aren't likely to be recorded, Springsteen said his next album will be recorded in a studio and he will stick with his own material. A live album would be the only way those songs could be done.

Several of his songs, especially the slow ballads, were absent from his concert repertoire.

Springsteen said an audience in a concert usually goes for the faster stuff. "In a club where we play more than one set, the slower things, like 'Lost in the Flood,' are done."

TODAY, Springsteen is limiting his performances to clubs, theaters, and schools — finding large auditoriums too impersonal.

Springsteen was full of praise for the UK audience, having not been prepared for their size and the same way about him.

"Our records don't sell that well," he said, "and sometimes we're lucky to play in front of 100 people."

"IT'S REALLY fun to play in front of an audience like the one tonight."

Bruce Springsteen left UK tired, after having given all he had on stage, full of praise for the Kentucky people.

And the reaction after the concert showed that the people lucky enough to attend felt the same way about him.

This Kentucky Kernel story appeared in the Feb. appearance. He performed in UK's Student 14, 1974 issue, the day after his first Lexington Center Grand Ballroom.

The Bruce Springsteen of Tunnel of Love is clearly not the disheveled searcher of Darkness on the Edge of Town. However, though his life seems to have settled, his music is still as restless as ever and his insight is still as sharp.

Springsteen championed the cause of the working class, the brokenhearted, the disillusioned. He also worked in some spirited guitar licks that led Dylan to describe Springsteen's music as "gutbuckets rock 'n' roll."

With his '84 release, Born in the U.S.A., Springsteen achieved national attention and even led both presidential candidates to claim his endorsement (the endorsed neither).

Springsteen also attracted the attention of model Julianne Phillips. They were married in '86 and, as one reporter said, "You could hear hearts breaking all along the Eastern Coast."

Middle East escalates chemical arsenals

By ED BLANCHÉ
Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — The slaughter of Kurdish civilians in Iraqi poison gas attacks and Iranian warnings of retaliation underscore the growth of the chemical warfare arsenals of major Middle East powers.

Despite efforts to curb such weapons, their spread has added a dangerous new dimension to conflicts in the Middle East. Their use, but not their production, is banned under a 1925 Geneva agreement.

The London-based Jane's Defense Weekly noted in a recent study that the use of poison and nerve gases since 1984 in the 7½-year-old Iran-Iraq war has "changed the rules of war in the Middle East."

Tehran charges that Iraqi warplanes have dropped chemical bombs on several villages in northern Iraq after Iranian forces overran the Kurdish area in a western offensive.

Western correspondents in Iran have reported evidence to substantiate Iranian claims that 5,000 Iraqi Kurds were killed and another 5,000 injured when Iraqi warplanes dropped chemical bombs on towns captured by the Iranians in north-east Iraq last week.

Nicholas Beeston of The Times of London reported from Halabja, one of the towns, that "hundreds and possibly thousands" of the Kurds, who have been rebelling against Baghdad for years, were killed.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of Iran's Parliament and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's representative on the Supreme Defense Council, warned yesterday that Iran will be forced to use chemical weapons in retaliation if the Iraqi attacks continue.

The intensity of Tehran's accusations against Iraq in recent days has heightened fears that the Iranians may be seeking to justify using chemical weapons of their own.

U.S. State Department Spokesman Charles Redman said Wednesday there was evidence Iran may already have fired chemical artillery shells into Iraq. He declined to elaborate on his report.

Iraq, a signatory to the 1925 agreement, has been condemned by the United Nations four times since 1984 for using chemical weapons. The Iranians claim the Iraqis have launched around 100 chemical attacks in that period, mainly against Iranian troops.

Iranian-backed Kurdish guerrillas fighting the Baghdad regime for autonomy have claimed scores of such attacks on their villages in the last year. But last week's bombing appears to have been the worst chemical attack in the Persian Gulf conflict.

Modern chemical warfare began at on April 22, 1915, at 5 p.m. when the Germans released 180 tons of chlorine gas at Ypres on the Western Front in World War I.

Within an hour, 5,000 French soldiers were dead or dying the wind-blown gas rolling a few feet above their trenches.

By the end of the war, gas had killed 100,000 men and affected more than 800,000 others. Modern nerve gases are far more lethal.

Iraq has the biggest chemical weapons arsenal in the region, with sizable stocks of poison and nerve gases produced at three top-secret plants, Western military analysts told The Associated Press.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iraq is now producing Sarin, a highly lethal nerve gas that can kill in less than 10 minutes.

They said there are indications that the Iraqis are also working on germ warfare weapons.

The Syrians, Moscow's main Arab ally, also have developed their own chemical weapons industry over the last few years, intelligence and diplomatic sources said.

The Israelis allege the Syrian chemical warfare capability is a serious threat and say Syria has the means to deliver nerve agents with Soviet-supplied SS-1 Scud-B missiles and combat aircraft.

Michigan do-or-die situation for Rep. Gephardt

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press

Democrat Richard Gephardt, who has fallen on hard times since his Iowa victory 45 days ago, will quit the presidential race unless he scores an upset victory in Michigan this weekend, aides said yesterday.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, headed for Connecticut expecting to pad his huge lead on the GOP side.

Gephardt said he'd made no decision to drop out, declaring, "My mother always told me to cross one bridge at a time." But the scramble was already on to pick up supporters who would be freed if he withdrew.

"There's no question there are some union leaders who are now supporting Dick Gephardt who would find Paul Simon the most attractive of the alternatives," said Illinois Sen. Simon at an appearance in Kalamazoo.

Simon, who is in fourth place in the Democratic delegate count, just ahead of Gephardt, spoke of getting "back in the ballgame."

Among the Republicans, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, wife of Bush's main rival, Sen. Bob Dole, said in Oshkosh, Wis., that her husband now has merely a "long-shot" chance, but she added, "he's got the grit and determination needed to keep him in the running."

She said neither she nor her husband have discussed the possibility that one of them might be Bush's running mate for the general election.

"I'm really not seeking to be on the ticket. I'm going 12 hours a day just trying to carry Bob's message," she said.

Vice President Bush, holding a commanding lead in the battle for Republican convention delegates, was traveling to Connecticut, saying he was taking nothing for granted in the primary there next Tuesday.

However, public opinion polls give him a big lead over Dole in the state where Bush was born and where his father once served as a U.S. senator.

Gephardt, just a few weeks ago the victor in Iowa's caucuses, now lags behind Michael Dukakis, Jesse Jackson, Albert Gore Jr. and Simon in delegates to the national convention. He trails Dukakis and Jackson in public opinion polls preceding Saturday's Michigan caucuses.

Gephardt's wife, Jane, told a radio interviewer in Michigan, "I think Dick has to come in first or a real strong second to remain in the race. . . . If we don't do well here, we will not be able to continue."

The Missouri congressman has only until Tuesday to file for re-election for his House seat, and one aide, commenting only on condition he not be named, suggested that it was important for the congressman to retain that office in order to raise money. His campaign has been strapped for cash for weeks.

Medical scholarships available to students

By MARY YOUNGSTAFEL

Ricky Angel, a fourth-year medical student, lived in eastern Kentucky and was aware of the shortages in medical care in his region.

"My home county for 10-12 years never had more than three physicians. An adjacent county had no physicians," he said.

As a result, his experiences gave him an incentive to go to medical school.

For someone planning to practice medicine in eastern Kentucky, the Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund offers a good source of funding, Angel said. His medical education will cost him more than $40,000.

The Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund can fill a large part of the cost of a medical education, Angel said.

Kentucky students, who have been accepted at the UK College of Medicine or the University of Louisville Medical School, may apply to the Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund for financial aid. The purpose of the fund is to encourage physicians to practice in rural Kentucky, according to Kentucky Medical Association spokesperson Eileen Dougherty.

The fund loans $7,500 per year to medical students who agree to practice medicine and reside in a rural Kentucky county. One year's service is required for each loan received. If a physician practices in a critical county — one with very few physicians — he or she is not required to pay back the loan.

Physicians in 99 of 120 Kentucky counties have utilized the Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund. Since its inception in 1948, more than 500 medical students have received $3 million in aid.

The Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund is the nation's most successful program to encourage physicians to practice in rural areas, Dougherty said.

"The communities benefit by it," she said.

Students interested in a loan application should contact Rural Kentucky Medical Scholarship Fund, Kentucky Medical Association Headquarters, 3532 Ephraim McDowell Dr., Louisville, Kentucky 40205, or call (502) 459-9790.

Students may also pick up information at 104 UK Medical Center.

The deadline for applications is April 1.

Gov. wins 1st round of succession battle

By MARK R. CHELLGREN
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Gov. Wallace Wilkinson and Lt. Gov. Breton Jones are at odds over gubernatorial succession, but Wilkinson won the first round yesterday.

The object of the attention of the state's top two officers is a constitutional amendment that would let the sitting constitutional officers succeed themselves.

Wilkinson has made it clear he wants the public to get a chance to vote on a constitutional amendment that raises only that question.

Members of the Senate appear inclined to seek some balancing measure to protect the General Assembly, such as longer terms for lawmakers or annual legislative sessions.

Jones has quietly been lobbying senators this week to support another change to the bill that would provide for a runoff election in statewide races. If a candidate did not win a majority of votes in a primary, rather than a plurality, then a runoff would be held among the top two finishers.

Jones, who has made no secret of his desire to be the next governor and has incurred the ire of the governor for his activity.

Wilkinson said Jones did not tell him of his activity in advance, but there is no secret of the lieutenant governor's feelings on succession for incumbents.

"I sent word to Breton that I know he's running for governor and I don't blame him for that," Wilkinson said. "If I were him, I'd be running too."

The success amendment because of its desire to be the next governor and has incurred the ire of the governor for his activity.

Jones said the idea of a runoff is not aimed specifically at Wilkinson.

Election reform bill killed in House

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — A bill that would have overhauled the way Kentucky conducts elections and enforces election laws apparently died yesterday when the House refused to let it be put to a vote in a committee.

With just two days left in the 1988 legislative session, that probably ran the clock out on Senate Bill 385, said House Speaker Don Blanford.

If so, the death blow was the House's failure to waive its rule requiring committee chairmen to give their members three days to examine bills before posting the bills for consideration.

The vote on suspension of the rule was 30-39, but 51 affirmative votes were needed. A rule suspension was necessary because the Senate did not pass the bill until late Wednesday, a day behind schedule.

Blanford said he was personally disappointed, but he defended the House. "I think it's irresponsible of the Senate to send a 117-page bill down the line with amendments that look like they're going to change the end of the legislative session, Blanford said. "It's not the proper way to conduct business."

He said he thought the bill would have been passed with more time and said he would "strongly recommend" placing it on the agenda for a special legislative session, if Gov. Wallace Wilkinson calls one.

Wilkinson said this week he might call the General Assembly into special session to deal with education, lobbying to keep incumbents out of the bill," Jones said.

Jones said it is important in Kentucky, with its traditionally strong governorship, that the nominee win more than half of his party's support.

A runoff could ensure that "an incumbent couldn't hide in a crowded primary and maybe an election with maybe 25 or 26 percent of the vote," Jones said.

Wilkinson said he was not concerned about Jones' motives.

"Anything that disturbs the succession amendment disturbs me and I wish he'd stop doing it," Wilkinson said.

The activity of the top-elected officials in the state in the debate over succession has further clouded an issue that has already been murky in the General Assembly.

House Bill 620, which passed the House, contains only an amendment to allow current and future officeholders to seek two consecutive terms.

The bill also was voted out of the Opinion based on slanted view of Christianity

In his guest opinion of Feb. 25, Wayne Davis offers a defense of humanism and an attack on Christianity, or rather something he has made up for the occasion and calls Christianity. The errors in the article are legion, but allow me to address just a few.

He accuses Christians of creating straw men, then, as if to outdo his opponents, he proceeds to do exactly the same thing himself. He says that theists believe in supernatural forces that control the fate of men. Strictly speaking, only extreme Calvinists and Moslems would hold to such a position, but very few Christians are extreme Calvinists, and no Christians are Moslems. He says Christians think they do go better on math tests if they pray rather than study. They do? He implies that Christians believe that thunder and lightning are acts of an angry God. Which Christians are these? I suggest that Dr. Davis go out and actually meet a Christian before he starts arguing against his beliefs: he can't possibly be basing his characterizations on real cases.

He says that Christianity "has nothing to do with virgin births, resurrections . . . angels, holy ghosts, and other excess baggage the churches carry." Christians, such as myself, are affected by this statement, as I imagine scientists would be. Dr. Davis would be affected by the statement, "Science has nothing to do with experiments, the laws of nature, cause and effect, the theory of relativity, the scientific method, and other excess baggage the scientific community carries."

He claims fundamentalists act morally out of fear of punishment, rather than, as with humanists, because it is right. First of all, the statement is false. Secondly, the fact is that fundamentalists, whatever their faults, at least recognize that the only way we can know what is good is by appeal to God and to scripture, and in this respect agree with the 20th century's greatest and most influential philosopher, Ludwig Wittgenstein, who said that if ethics exist they must be transcendental.

Dr. Davis says that humanists accept "universal human values," apparently reasoning that if something is universally thought to be the case, it is therefore the case. This is the fallacy of consensus gentium; that if a majority thinks something true, it is therefore true.

Dr. Davis makes the statement, "Since no one knows whether there are gods and devils, heavens and hells, etc., everyone is agnostic."

How does Dr. Davis know that no one knows these things? The only way he could know this is by being all-knowing himself. Of course, definitionally, only God is all-knowing.

If Dr. Davis sincerely wishes to help students sort out their thoughts on this matter, as he says he does, then he should first deal with Christianity, not mischaracterizations of it that originate in his own imagination. Secondly, he should attempt to judge a religious position on the basis of the best arguments for it, not the worst ones he can think up. His article shows no evidence that he has confronted the best arguments for Christianity. How therefore can he pretend to have dealt satisfactorily with the issue — in his own mind or the minds of his readers?

who saw the events they relate, and would have known them to be false if they were, each one of whom went to his death professing these things to be true, and these documents are better attested historically than any other documents of antiquity. If one argues that the witnesses lied (the only other possibility), then he posits a psychological miracle greater than the biological miracle the apostles claimed; and if one says he doesn't accept the historicity of the New Testament, then he has to dump his knowledge of the ancient world.

It is this argument the humanists are intellectually obligated to address, and it is this argument with which they have consistently refused to deal. After all, straw men offer much less resistance than real ones.

Bridges is the best choice

Although many students are probably sick and tired of hearing about the candidates in the SGA race, I feel I must voice my convictions because one candidate stands out above the rest. Susan Bridges is the best choice for SGA president. I first met Susan when we were both freshmen three years ago, and I soon found out that she is a remarkable person. In all my classes and in my involvement in various organizations and honoraries, I have never met anyone who has impressed me more than she has. Not only is she outgoing, energetic and personable, but she is also extremely hard-working, intelligent and determined. She is exactly the type of person I want leading student government and representing me, because I know that she will not let me or this University down. I know Susan well enough to know that her drive to make the University of Kentucky an even better institution will carry SGA into the future. When I cast my vote next week, it will be for progress and assertive diplomacy . . . it will be for Susan Bridges.

Rose above rest

Next week we'll all be subjected to the usual barrage of SGA campaign flyers and posters littering our campus.

I'd like for UK students to take a look beyond all the hype characteristic of SGA elections to the true substance of the presidential candidates.

Luckily, I've had the chance this year to see each of the presidential candidates at work. James Rose is, without doubt, the best candidate. James serves and cares about students, not his own self-image or advancement. He has an impressive service record in SGA and in the Student Development Council.

Most importantly, he is an approachable leader. No one who has ever worked with James would deny that he is knowledgeable, thoughtful and cooperative.

While I question the other candidates' motives for running, I see James' motive clearly and positively. He is supported by many student leaders on campus who recognize his desire and ability to serve students.

I urge you to realize that James Rose is the only candidate capable of putting respect back into SGA so that the organization can refocus on its intended purpose: serving our needs as students.

It's going to take your vote for James Rose to ensure that SGA will be under effective leadership.

Friedman works hard

Craig Friedman is hard-working, accomplished and determined to be the SGA senator of the College of Business & Economics.

I feel he is the best for the job because he is willing to focus all of his attention on bettering our college. He knows what needs to be done and just how to do it.

I strongly urge you to vote for Craig Friedman.

Mary Tripp Reed is the SGA senator of the College of Business & Economics.
