Candidate talks to 150 at campus forum

Improvements in education costly, but needed, Bunning says

By JOHN VOSKUHL, Assistant News Editor

Jim Bunning, Republican gubernatorial candidate, told about 150 students and faculty gathered in the Student Center Theater yesterday that it will cost $80 million to $100 million to get Kentucky's educational system on its feet.

"Are you willing to do that?" he said. "Because if you're not, it will not be done," he said.

Bunning frequently referred to the report of the Kentucky Council of Higher Education's Prichard Committee, which recommended eliminating duplication of educational programs at the state universities and upgrading the quality of those remaining.

"If we're going to follow the great recommendations of the Prichard Committee, it's going to be expensive," he said. "We must stop the duplication of effort in all eight of our state institutions."

The attempt to maintain duplicate facilities at all the institutions is expensive and useless, he said, adding the money saved could be used to provide unique, quality facilities at each university.

Bunning also said he does not favor a suggested merger of the UK and University of Louisville dental schools. UK has one of the 10 finest dental schools in the state, he said.

"I don't think you improve the quality of education by doing away with a quality institution," he said.

Bunning also said Kentucky's primary and secondary educational systems are now "last among the 50 states in the number of people with an eighth-grade education."

"I think it's a disgrace," he said.

He said education is his chief concern. "You have to make it the most important," Bunning said, because it attracts industry to the state.

"There are two things that industrial leaders ask about when they consider moving into a state: the educational system and health care," he said. "If you tell them that you're last among 50 states, they say, 'We'll go to Tennessee.'"

He called for an 8 percent salary increase for elementary and secondary school teachers. "Pay the teachers a fair wage," he said.

"We have to have incentives to attract... quality teachers," Bunning said.

He also called for the standardization of tests at schools through the 12th grade. "We've got to put accountability into our educational system," Bunning said.

He also said teachers should be responsible for ultimately passing or failing a student.

Bunning said he would not support an unimposed mineral tax to raise revenue for education. "I think it's unworkable, and I think it's an unfair tax," he said.

"The four years I have spent as a state senator have convinced me that this is the year for these problems," he said. "What will happen to the quality of the lives of each and every one of you if we don't address these issues now?"

The speech was sponsored by Students for Jim Bunning, a registered student organization. "Some UK law students got together with our organization and made the request," said Larry Bisig, president of the group. "It was a cooperative effort."

Bisig, a communications junior, said Students for Jim Bunning has two priorities. "The first is to make sure we carry the vote here at the University," he said. "The second is to serve as a reservoir of volunteers for state and county campaign projects."

Bisig announced before the speech that the organization recently registered its 100th member.

Professor says Salvadorian conflict similar, not identical, to Vietnam

By STEPHANIE WALLNER, Senior Staff Writer

The values and problems of El Salvador should be studied on their own terms if there are to be any solutions, according to George Herring, professor of history.

The analogies and differences of Vietnam and the United States' present involvement in the conflict in El Salvador were outlined in Herring's lecture entitled "On the Vietnam."

"I find myself joining in the cry 'no more Vietnam,'" Herring said. "However, history does not usually repeat itself."

Herring said the Reagan administration has repeatedly stated there is no comparison between Vietnam and El Salvador.

"In 1961 when the quick victory didn't happen, the administration tried to distance itself from Vietnam," Herring said. And evidence suggests the Reagan administration was influenced by Vietnam due to the public's awareness of the Salvadorian situation, he said.

"The American public believes in the comparison and is reluctant to go the same way," he said. "Vietnam is a ghostly presence in meeting rooms. Vietnam is a silent oppression and it sometimes lurks out."

It is almost impossible to discuss El Salvador and not mention Vietnam, Herring said. "The Vietnam style guerrilla warfare; the comparisons are all too clear."

"The two wars in small, tropical, underdeveloped countries and large scale support from the U.S.," Herring said. "They are fighting a 9-to-5 war indifferently and with indecisive results."

Herring also sighted many differences between the Vietnam and Salvadorian disturbances.

"The influence in Vietnam was Southeast Asia and a Chinese background," he said. "El Salvador comes from a Hispanic culture."

Herring said the outside support given to each is not the same. "Vietnam had the outside support of North Vietnam, Cuba and the Soviet Union."

The level of intensity of the war in El Salvador has been lower since the beginning, Herring said.

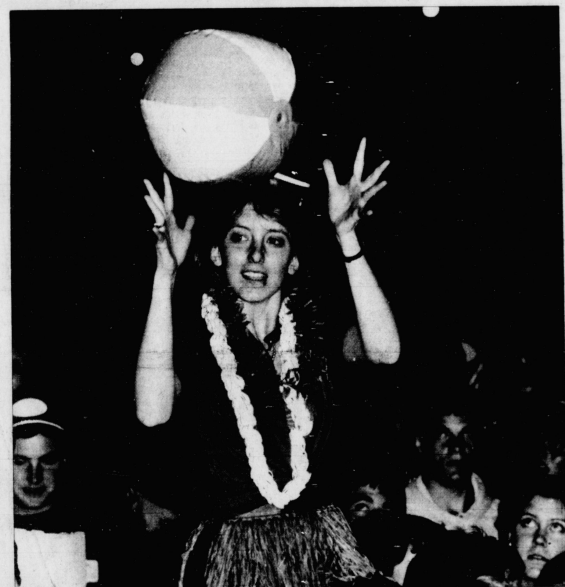

The origins of the war also differ he said. "Vietnam was a nationalist revolution movement... El Salvador is a reactionary regime."

Herring said government involvement differs greatly in the two countries. "The South Vietnamese had broader support than El Salvador does."

"Each historical situation is unique and we can't draw superficial comparisons," he said. "The analogies inhibit discussion of El Salvador and Central America on their own merits and their own terms."

"In each case bold rhetoric is matched by cautious action." Each time the U.S. has made the outcome a test of their credibility, Herring said.

"The analogies may be self-deceptive for the opposition to rely on," he said. "Vietnam has already happened and it is difficult for me to see, in light of this, that it can happen again."

Time changes rearrange Homecoming plans

From Staff reports

Homecoming fans will have to rearrange their schedules because of several time changes in events for the weekend.

The main event — UK vs. Tulane — has been scheduled for a kick-off time of 3:47 p.m. instead of the originally planned 1:30 p.m.

Other changes include the Alumni Band, which will register at 10 a.m. in the Center for the Arts. Rehearsals begin at 10:30 a.m. in 22 Fine Arts Building.

The 1983 Class Reunion will have a luncheon at noon in Spin-dleton Hall instead of a class reception and dinner. The 1948 Class Reunion will have a luncheon at noon at the King Alumni House, and the 1953 Class Reunion will have a luncheon at noon at the King Alumni House instead of an anniversary brunch.

The parking lots will open at 12:15 p.m. around Commonwealth Stadium.

Food services will have special hours for the weekend. The Commons Cafeteria will open for brunch from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and the Student Center Grill will open from 8 to 8 p.m. The Student Center Cafeteria will open from 6:30 to 8 p.m. after the game.

The Andy Williams Homecoming Concert has been changed from 8 to 8:30 p.m. in the Concert Hall of the Center for the Arts.

The Lady Kats Volleyball game against the University of the Pacific has been changed from 7:30 to 8 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

The Homecoming concert featuring The Original Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and Leon Redbone has been moved from Memorial Coliseum to the Grand Ballroom of the Student Center. It will be at 8 p.m. today.

Warehouse to be destroyed goes up in billows of smoke

By SCOTT WILHOIT, News Editor

A fire sent clouds of billowing brown smoke above a tobacco warehouse on the corner of Broadway and Angliana Avenue yesterday.

According to Charles Robinson, Lexington-Fayette Urban County fire chief, the two-alarm fire erupted at about 4 p.m. while demolition crews were razing the Central Warehouse, Inc., at 753 S. Broadway.

He said there were no reports of injuries.

The fire, which spread smoke for several miles, was brought under control in about 30 minutes after firefighters arrived.

An abandoned house adjacent to the warehouse also was gutted.

"The whole block had been scheduled for destruction," Robinson said, accounting for the lack of injuries.

"Apparently they were cutting some steel, and something in there ignited," he said.

He said that by the time he arrived, the warehouse was engulfed with flames and smoke. "All we tried doing was to keep the fire from spreading to other buildings near here," Robinson said.

Alan Stein, owner and manager of 803 South Tavern next to the warehouse, said he was watching workmen "torch" steel beams prior to the fire. "We had just been over there and we noticed how hot the beams seemed to be getting," Stein said.

"We kept on watching and then we saw a whole lot of smoke," he said. Stein said at no time during the blaze did he have to evacuate his restaurant.

"No, this is the best promotion we have had all week," Stein said.

Mounted police and safety officers estimated that about 800 people gathered to watch the fire burn. Rush hour traffic was backed up along Broadway as firefighters shifted through the remnants of the warehouse.

LTI student processes first-rate data in national competition

By PAUL JOSEPH, Reporter

The whole time Karen Goeing McIlvain was in San Francisco, winning the National Data Processing I competition of Phi Beta Lambda, she was only nervous over the test — when the top 10 contestants were announced.

She didn't want to be among them; not at first, anyway.

"When they were announcing 10th through sixth places," she said, "I thought, 'I know I've done better than that — please don't call my name.'"

McIlvain, 29, a sophomore at Lexington Technical Institute, had to wait until first place was announced to hear her name.

McIlvain, from Louisville, scored highest on an objective test administered to 25 competitors at the PBL (a college business society) annual convention held July 5-8.

"Time was definitely a factor," she said. "The first to turn in the exam was given preference over someone else who had the same number of correct answers." McIlvain finished in under 30 minutes, although an hour was the allotted time.

Randy Oliver, faculty adviser to PBL, said: "PBL offers something that you don't get from being in a glee club, sorority or fraternity. We have these kinds of competitions and offer preparation for a career."

"We get them to plan things in a professional way — not students just scribbling notes on the backs of papers. They have speakers come in, and have parties, but all with the idea of how to be a leader and how to talk to people in the community," Oliver said.

McIlvain said data processing is "similar to computer science, but more geared to the business end of computers. Data processing is geared to business reports and compiling data for any kind of business, while computer science is more technically and scientifically oriented."

McIlvain learned about PBL through a fellow classmate who turned out to be the faculty adviser for the group, and she joined PBL when there was an opening. The LTI chapter of PBL helped sponsor her trip to San Francisco. McIlvain was eligible to compete nationally and was sponsored by PBL. "I was very frank with them," she said. "I couldn't afford it."

According to McIlvain, $1,400 was raised through raffles, local business contributions and state assistance, to help pay for her trip.

At the state level, Deborah Moore of Georgetown, Ky. — who entered in the corresponding secretary event — was a winner.

"In my competition, six letters were dictated to me at varying speeds," she said. "I had to transcribe all six letters. From the time they began dictating we had an hour to insert punctuation."

"I didn't do as well as I could have, even though I did do pretty well at Nationals," Moore said.

McIlvain said her interest in data processing began while she was in the Air Force in North Carolina. She had some time to fill so she enrolled in a college course. "There was a college offering classes for $5 an hour, and that sort of planted the kernel," she said.

"I'd thought about psychology, but really to do anything you need an M.A. and there was no way that both of us (McIlvain and her husband, Terry) could go." She graduated in December but wanted to stay in Lexington. "Terry has three more years in school; I'd rather (we) not be separated."

"I think everyone would like to work for IBM, but I'd like to work for a large data processing shop regardless of what type it is," she said.

"This competition has done wonders for my self-confidence," McIlvain said.

Watt submits an apology for 'embarrassing' remark

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As five Senate Republicans called for James Watt's resignation, the interior secretary apologized to President Reagan yesterday for referring to members of an advisory commission as a black, a woman, "two Jews and a cripple."

"I have made a mistake," Watt wrote Reagan in an unsought letter.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Watt had not offered to resign.

On Capitol Hill, Watt was denounced on the Senate floor in the strongest outburst yet from members of his own party.

One Republican said Watt's comments showed a "panorama . . . of bigotry and hate." Another said Watt was an embarrassment to Reagan and a third called on Reagan to find someone who could better serve the country.

The calls for Watt's resignation came following Watt's speech Wednesday to a business group in which he said a coal-leasing advisory commission he appointed included a black, a woman, "two Jews and a cripple."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., called Watt "an embarrassment to the president who appointed him, an embarrassment to the party to which I proudly belong and an embarrassment to the country."

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., told the Senate he agreed with Rudman's call for Watt's resignation.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., charged that Watt's comments "are part of a panorama not of error but of bigotry and hate."

Democrats joined in the litaney. Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., accused Watt of "an unbelievable insensitivity to the feelings of people."

Soviets hamper the search for 'black box,' U.S. says

Associated Press

ABOARD THE USS STERETT — Soviet ships in the Sea of Japan have been harassing the U.S. flotilla in the hunt for the flight recorder of the downed South Korean airliner — a search the Americans say is "like trying to locate a pencil in the desert at night from an altitude of 1000 feet."

The Soviet fleet has interfered with the U.S. operation by forcing ships to change course to avoid collision, Rear Adm. William A. Cockell Jr., commander of the search, told reporters who were flown to the Sterett by U.S. Navy helicopter yesterday.

When the Sterett moved within a few hundred feet of a Soviet ship earlier in the week, according to one U.S. officer who asked not to be named, a Soviet sailor yelled "We are friends" in English, to which a U.S. sailor replied, "No we're not."

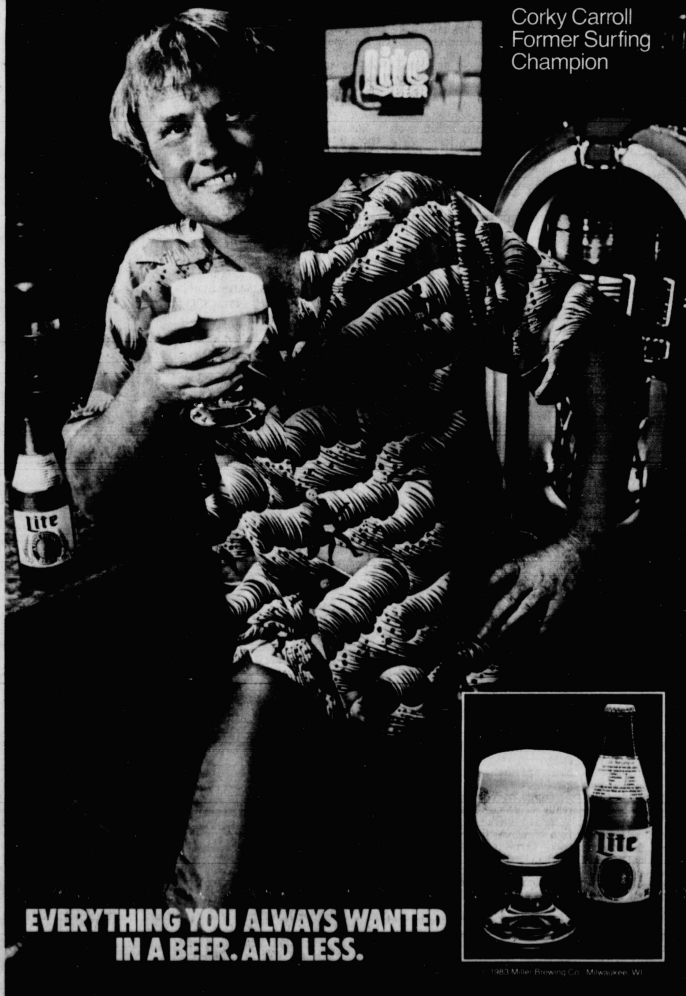

Cockell said there were no signs of Soviet electronic interference with listening or sonar devices, but there were signs the Soviets have been jamming U.S. communications. He did not elaborate.

The Korean Air Lines jumbo jet was shot down by a Soviet interceptor Sept. 1 after it flew into restricted Soviet territory. All 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans, were killed.

The undersea search is concentrated on finding and retrieving the so-called "black box" in-flight recording system whose records might shed light on why Flight 007 was off course and what happened in the last minutes.

Cockell said there were "reasonable prospects for localizing some parts of the aircraft," and added that the American search ships "hope to have enough contacts with the pinger (sonar device) . . . to get a location and follow that up with other equipment."
